Lager & Hurrell register Cattleya Trianae "Aurantiaea." Flowers very large, sepals and petals white, slightly suffused with palest lilac; lower part of petals thrown forward, upper parts gracefully reflexed; lower part of lip whitish lilac superposed by a large wedge-shaped blotch of very bright orange.

Cattleya Trianae, "Fairly Queen." Flowers of medium size, well balanced in all parts; sepals and petals pure white, the latter being slightly reflexed. Upper part or tube of lip white, the lower part light lilac extending to the edges.

The Floral Exchange, Inc., register new rose "The Queen of Edgely, The Pink American Beauty," originated at Edgely, Pa., fall of 1896. Color, light pink, similar to Bridesmaid; growth, habit, foliage, height, size and form identical with parent. The buds set more freely and the fragrance is somewhat sweeter.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

NEWPORT, KY.—A local florist has recently received a number of bogus orders through the mails and has been occasioned some loss thereby. Fictitious addresses were given and several useless deliveries were made. As the flowers were not delivered and no money obtained, spite work is suspected.

RED WING, MINN.—K. B. Lovejoy, who has been doing market gardening on an extensive scale, has decided to go into seed raising.

CARMEL, ME.—Ernest Harvey, late of Freeport, is arranging to build greenhouses here.

CATSKILL, N. Y.—Business throughout the winter has been excellent; plenty of funeral work, and the demand for cut flowers has been heavy. Easter orders exceed last year, and the prospects are excellent for a good spring trade in bedding stock. Henry Hansen intends building another carnation house this summer.

MORRISON, ILL.—The greenhouses and barns of A. H. Foreman were recently destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at $1,500.

COLUMBUS, O.

Trade has been very good this winter, with a noticeable increase in the demand for both cut flowers and blooming plants. Harrisii lilies will not be plentiful for Easter.

S. F. Stephens has a fine house of carnations about right for Easter. He is also cutting some first-class roses and has an increased supply of bedding plants for cemetery trade.

E. L. Charles reports an excellent demand, especially for funeral work. He recently donated a large casket bouquet for each of the six persons killed in the gasoline explosion.

Underwood Bros. have a fine range of greenhouses and their carnations are looking exceedingly well.

Some damage suits may grow out of the ejectment proceedings brought against Miss Hester Getz, the florist. She had appealed to the common pleas court, but there being some imperfection in the appeal bond, the writ was served and she was forcibly ejected, being somewhat roughly handled. Later the appeal bond was perfected and she was reinstated. A good deal of bad feeling has been developed and the end is not yet. G.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

At the funeral ceremonies over the remains of the late H. P. Godwin three of the finest floral designs ever seen in Washington were furnished by the American Rose Company. They comprised a massive crescent wreath six feet in diameter of bronze galax leaves with magnificent specimen Golden Gate roses and Easter lilies and a cluster of cycas leaves, and the same rose festooned with loopings of lace and taffeta ribbon in lilac and white; an anchor of galax and violets six feet high (both of these designs were mounted on easels), and a double cluster of the celebrated Madame Chatenay rose (the most exquisite shade of coppery pink) containing about 300 blossoms and tied with open work ribbon of the same shade.

MILWAUKEE.

Alexander Klokner, the well known florist, has been appointed superintendent of the city parks by the board of park commissioners. His salary was fixed at $1,500 a year.

PARIS, ILL.—H. D. Caldwell & Co. have sold their establishment to J. A. Helfrich, who has for some years past been with the Hunt Floral Co. at Terre Haute, Ind. Mr. Helfrich will take charge of the greenhouses here on April 16.

LOGANSPOUT, IND.—J. A. Newby is adding a new house 13x70. Fire got a start in the boiler room at O. J. McCormick's recently, but was extinguished before any great damage was done.

MASSILON, O.—C. S. Manley lost all his plants by fire this winter. Only the boiler house and about ten feet of the greenhouses were burned, but the plants were destroyed.

Commercial Violet Culture.

By Prof. B. T. GALLOWAY, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. This work is thoroughly practical and fully discusses the subject in a clear and comprehensive way. It has received the highest commendation from specialists and from the Horticultural Press. Illustrated with over 60 plates. 224 pages. Price postpaid, $1.50.

THE WATER GARDEN. By Wm. Tricker, the standard authority of America on Aquatic Plants. The cultivation of Water Lilies, etc., is becoming more popular every year, and every florist should be in a position to extend his business in this line. This book is very exhaustive, is magnificently illustrated. Price postpaid, $2.00.

RESIDENTIAL SITES and ENVIRONMENTS. By Joseph Forsyth Johnson. The knowledge to be gained from this book is of the greatest importance to florists, particularly where it relates to the laying out of grounds about country homes, both large and small. The author is a practical man and the contents of the book may be understood. Illustrated by over 50 plans and diagrams. Price postpaid, $2.50.

HOUSE PLANTS and How to Succeed With Them. By M. L. Hillhouse. This book is written for amateurs, but florists can use it very profitably among their retail customers. It should be on sale in every establishment. Write for trade discount. Retail price postpaid, paper 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

OTT BROWN.

Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

J. T. TEMPLE.

Davenport, Ia.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Wedding Bouquets.

Many florists will, during the next two months, be puzzled with the question, "What is the latest, or what would you recommend for a bride's bouquet?" And you know there is not a little dread in the preparing thoughts for your answer. No one likes the idea of losing an order, and few care to give information which may be used to your disadvantage by another. This is where the value of our Review comes in, for here we can talk to the crowd, and mind you we don't care how we talk, because we have no "boss" to consider.

We have many, many times complained about the weight of bouquets, and we refer to it here again, because we consider it of vital importance. You can make them up as fine as you can, use the most beautiful flowers, have them as large as you like, and get the biggest possible price for them, and still fail to please. Many of you know how your hand gets tired holding a bouquet whilst you are tying it up; few of you stop to think of the, in many cases, delicate girl who must carry it, through the greatest ordeal of her life, and if you will go to the church you will see that she carries it upside down, because she is not strong enough to hold it face up.

Of course, the bride rarely has anything to do with the ordering of her bouquet. If she had, they would be different. You deal with the bridegroom, and he, poor fellow, is willing to be overcharged and order some enormous bundle, rather than have it appear mean and small in anyone's eye at that special time. More often than not the bouquets are made by a different florist to the one having the decorations. They are often the cause of much jealousy and chagrin; but it must be admitted that they are generally ordered in a store for the sake of its reputation. We have seen the very worst bouquets—libels on floral art—come from the finest stores, and, to be fair, we would rather consider a poor florist's endeavor than a rich one's tag.

In "making up" it is necessary to use wire, but it should be used considerately; packing greens should be short, light and strong, and one wire doubled is quite sufficient; that wire can be any number from 21 to 23; the same wire will do for most flowers. It is barbarous to run a strong wire through the bulb of any straight rose; strip the foliage off and then wire it on again like a collar to the flower; that method belongs to the past with its short stemmed roses. We leave the straight blooms and foliage natural, cut them off the desired lengths, put one wire on the bottom to lessen the size of the handle only. For the finish line or two it may be necessary to wire the head of the rose in order to conform them to the proper shape, and in doing this don't run the wire through the bulb and double it back again, thus making the stem appear more wire than aught else; just stick your wire straight up the bulb or calyx and twist it straight down, leaving the foliage natural.

In most bouquets it is necessary to use considerable packing to hold the flowers in place, though not quite as much as is generally used. Where one kind of flowers is adopted, care should be taken to hide greens which may detract from the flower; in fact, it is best to use the foliage belonging to the flower, and if that is not practicable, then only such as will enhance. In the case of roses, we always use shorter stemmed roses for the packing. In such a bouquet you must look all around it and through to see all its value. In most of the bouquets we see, every rose seems to say to the other, "I'm as good as you." They are arranged all the one height, smilax or asparagus is seen in bunches between them, and the whole has that Drum-head-cabbage look about it that speaks of the mechanic rather than the artist.

A light, dainty, loosely made bouquet can be a credit to you and a source of much pleasure to the recipient. It is not necessary to have either your bunch or its handle too long; no one has a fist a foot wide, and very few care to carry even a bunch of flowers which will hide everything. In the case of lily of the valley, we prefer its own foliage for packing greens, but only in moderation, four or five flower spikes to two leaves, and they should be very low and the flowers at irregular heights. The finish is everything to most anything, and a fringe of fine fern will add much to most flowers. The handle should be very thin; put tinfoil on, then twist ribbon 'round it; a common pin stuck through will hold it in place. Tie the bow either well up under the bouquet, or in a loop bow at the bottom of the handle; in the latter case the same piece of ribbon must be used to entwine the handle with, commencing from the top and securing at bottom with a band of No. 1 ribbon.

Now, as to materials, almost anything can be had in spring and early summer, and though white is the most popular color, still it is not unusual for the American girl to break away from the conventional and have her own ideas rule. In this way we have recently made up brides' bouquets of colored flowers, and we would like to see the custom become popular, because white is too much of a dead color, especially for joyous festivities. With regard to ribbons, the very finest quality only should be used for this occasion, and in many cases lace scarfs are best. You must consider the fact that a girl's wedding dress is usually the effort of her life; most of them would make it of diamonds if they could; indeed, there is usually so much thought and preparation given to them that the effect of beauty is most often spoiled; yet the fact will remain that the material is either the richest the girl can afford or the mother will give. Now consider all this when ribboning your bouquet; don't use cheap stuff if the price will allow you to do otherwise, and you needn't put a bolt of ribbon on it, either.

Remember when you get a good big price for a bride's bouquet (and you can invariably get it), it does not require you to make it as big as a house. Put your value in quality and the "make up." You can put quantity in it, too, and even make it smaller and lighter. We have dwelt on this so long because we know the women of today are observant; and if the florists don't use more tact and judgment in this regard, it may become the style to dispense with wedding flowers altogether; it is even so now with many of the rich, though unpleasant or metallic kind of people.

Be careful regarding the delivery of this kind of work. A first-class house should have special bouquet boxes made so the bouquets can be put in a socket and stand up, instead of being knocked out of shape by being put sideways. Everything should be clean, and an intelligent man sent with them, for many girls don't know the right way to carry the bouquets, and the question is often referred to the florist. The ribbon bows should always be in front, the bride should carry hers in the left hand, the bridesmaids' left and right hands.

We will merely give you a few hints on what is obtainable now, allowing yourself to elaborate on them. Orange blossoms are popular on account of the traditions surrounding them, yet most brides ask for them, not knowing their meaning. These blossoms are to be had now, are suitable for head spray, small round bouquet, spray bunch, or cluster with other flowers. Golden Gate roses are appropriate for California brides, but on account of their stiff, leafless stem are only suitable for the round hand bouquet. Trim with light Farleyense fern. Bride roses, with the pink tinge usually seen on them at this time of the year, are very good for cheap round bouquets; Kaiserins are sweeter, though, and we prefer them; they make a more graceful effect. Roses, remember, are only suitable for the round trimmed bouquet; when carried by the bride the leaves and thorns are apt to damage the dress if used in a loose bunch or spray. Valley with cluster of white orchids, stephanotis, orange blossoms, one or two fine roses, or a fringe of jessamine.

White sweet peas make up very prettily if cut long and arranged gracefully. They should never appear sodden. Use very pale pink or yellow for bridesmaids. Swainsona does well for cheap bunches. Some will insist on having Marguerites and they can be made to look extremely fine; use the large California variety; fringe with cuneatum or Asparagus tenuissimus.

White heather is good and appropriate for Scotch, and nothing will please an Irish girl better than lily of the valley trimmed with shamrocks.

White pansies or white violets can be made to look elegant, but it is necessary to put these flowers on wires singly, that is, stick a No. 36 wire into the back of the flower and twist 'round the stem; this will prevent the flower from hanging its head and will also allow you to make up irregular, which is necessary to show off the full beauty of small flowers.

No matter what flower the bride carries, the groom's boutonniere should be made of the same. In the case of bridesmaids carry large loose bunches of fine roses across the alternate right and left arms. Dresses may be even trimmed with garlands of natural roses; in such a case very, very little foliage would be permissible. A shoulder strap of roses would be better than a sash ribbon; of course, the rose garland would be tied with a broad bow of ribbon. There's a hundred and one things to suggest if one takes time to think them out. Only encourage a greater use of flowers and less dry goods.

There are many flower girls who carry baskets of flowers before the bride to the altar, and these flowers come back to the house. That's entirely wrong; the flowers should be put in the basket loosely and scattered here and there on the floor as the girl walks before the bride from the church door to the altar or bench, or whatever it is they have in some churches or chapels. Educate the people to use flowers properly and with their full meaning and more will be used, giving pleasure alike to all.

EASTER WINDOW DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the Easter window decoration of Mr. Chas. A. Samuelson, Chicago. The photograph does scant justice to the beautiful display, as it is exceedingly difficult to secure a satisfactory photograph through a plate glass window. However, the picture will serve to make the description plainer:

The chariot at the right is of white and gold braid and is loosely filled with lilies. On the front of the chariot is perched a dove, from whose bill lead lines of No. 1 white baby ribbon to each of the doves in flight, of which, by the way, there were a dozen or more, though only seven show in the picture. Similar lengths of baby ribbon lead from the lower front of the chariot to the doves in flight. The doves and ribbons were kept in gentle motion by a slow-moving electric fan concealed behind a partial screen of asparagus at the extreme right. The fan was so well concealed that many inquiries were made as to what produced the flutter of the doves and ribbons. The window was partially screened from the store inside by festoons of asparagus.

Just back of the chariot appears a triple white wicker trumpet vase, filled also with lilies. The space in the foreground is filled with various Easter plant arrangements, leading features being the egg shaped baskets of white birch bark filled with various plants and flowers, largely baby primroses. At the left is seen a hamper of azaleas and Clotilde Souper rose plants. The general effect of this window was most excellent and it excited much admiring comment.

Easter Window Decoration of Mr. C. A. Samuelson, Chicago.

The clustered bouquet is almost unlimited in variety. Bouquets of magnollas or gardenias, especially for southern belles. White orchids will, of course, always lead in price, though they may not always be the most beautiful. Some very fine white or very pale mauvish cattleyas can be got, but in the case of orchids, variety is always best; a few sprays of Odontoglossum crispum, phalaenopsis, and a fringe of Coelogyne cristata mixed 'mong the cattleyas will show up to fine advantage. In all cases the best and lightest tinted fern should be used; we prefer Farleyense or gracillimum. No common greens should be discernible with these rich flowers.

bridesmaids, you are generally ordered to match the color of the dress; very often the dress color itself is selected to match some favorite flower; in such cases be very careful of the color of your ribbon; always select it in daylight; artificial light is deceptive. If the parties have confidence in your good taste, they will often look to you for suggestions, and very much of your success as a retail florist depends on your ability as an originator.

Leghorn hats are going to be popular this summer. Why not suggest that they be trimmed gracefully with natural roses and be worn by bridesmaids, or reverse them and carry them on the arm filled with roses; or let the CANADIAN IMPORTS.Change in Regulations.

Department of Agriculture,
Ottawa, April 10, 1900.

Sir: I am instructed by the honorable Minister of Agriculture to inform you that representations have been made to him by several of the leading florists of the Dominion that it is desirable to import into Canada certain new and valuable varieties of roses which are propagated and grown entirely under glass, but the importation of which has been prohibited up to the present under the San Jose Scale Act.

The Minister of Agriculture has examined into this matter carefully and finds that there is no danger of importing the San Jose scale upon roses imported in leaf and in growing condition which have been propagated under glass.

You are therefore informed that the Minister of Customs on his advice has issued instruction to the Collectors of Customs at the various ports that such roses may be imported from the United States as "greenhouse plants."

FINE DAFFODILS.

Some remarkably fine Von Sion narcissus were sent to Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, by M. Weiland, Evanston, Ill., for Easter. The flowers were immense and with stems 20 to 24 inches in length.

Mr. Weiland says that the bulbs were extra quality, but that there is a good deal in the forcing of the flowers. He plants in good rich soil and when the bulbs have started and growth is about two inches above the surface of the soil, he places the flats on the hot water pipes in a cool violet house, the idea being to give them a cool top, strong bottom heat and plenty of water. Under these conditions the flowers grow wonderfully and at the same time do not become unduly soft.

The bulbs are placed a little farther apart in the flat than usual to allow full development. These flowers brought the highest market price and were in brisk demand at that.

PLANT LIFE.

"The Adaptation of Plants to Their Environment" was the subject of a recent botanical lecture by Prof. John M. Coulter, of the University of Chicago.

Plants have never reached perfect adaptation to their environment, the lecturer said, but they are continually struggling to that end. It is a mistake to suppose there is perfection in nature. Perfection would mean stagnation. All progress comes from reaching out toward perfection.

Prof. Coulter used the foliage leaf as an example of illustrating the struggles of plants toward adaptation. Light is the chief necessity to the life and development of a leaf, and if for any reason it is denied the necessary quantity of light the leaf will be imperfect in formation, and will show the effects of its efforts to secure that without which perfect growth is impossible. The varieties of

PLANT LIFE.

"The Adaptation of Plants to Their Environment" was the subject of a recent botanical lecture by Prof. John M. Coulter, of the University of Chicago.

Plants have never reached perfect adaptation to their environment, the lecturer said, but they are continually struggling to that end. It is a mistake to suppose there is perfection in nature. Perfection would mean stagnation. All progress comes from reaching out toward perfection.

Prof. Coulter used the foliage leaf as an example of illustrating the struggles of plants toward adaptation. Light is the chief necessity to the life and development of a leaf, and if for any reason it is denied the necessary quantity of light the leaf will be imperfect in formation, and will show the effects of its efforts to secure that without which perfect growth is impossible. The varieties of leaf formation are in a large measure due to the necessities of light.

An examination of a leaf-bearing plant, he said, will show that the leaf formation is such as will give all the leaves, as nearly as possible, the required amount of light. Too much light is as fatal to leaf life as not enough. In the process of adaptation the necessity sometimes arises of avoiding an excess of light. In the barren regions of Australia the few foliage-bearing plants have leaves that turn their edges to the midday sun that they may present the smallest possible surface to the too fierce light.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

After Easter.

A late Easter has kept our houses full of stuff and leaves but six or seven weeks till the great rush of bedding time is here, and in some localities less. I will endeavor to mention what with me are the most urgent things to do, for you will have any amount of plants that have been cramped and crying for space.

1st. Get moved out of doors all plants that no longer need the greenhouse and are in your way, such as sweet bays, oleanders, agapanthus, large hydrangeas and other such things that you may have had to store. There will be no frost to hurt and if there is another frost it is cheaper to lay down and cover hydrangeas than encumber the house with them.

To make room is the first thing, so if you have not already put into cold-frames carnations, pyrethrums and plants that will bear a low temperature do so at once.

Mild hotbeds, just enough to keep a little bottom heat, will do for all the variegated and sweet scented geraniums. The alternantheras, achyranthes, sweet alyssum and coleus (the latter should have the warmest bed). The tuberous rooted begonias do much better in a mild hotbed if intended for bedding. The great advantage of the frames and hotbeds where you plant out your own produce is that the plants can be hardened off and are far more satisfactory than those grown in a shaded house.

Tropaeolums should be potted off from flats and put on a shelf where they will not grow too vigorously. Cobea scandens should be potted into 4-inch and a stick put to them. All zonal geraniums should at once go into their last shift. And so should the ivy leaf section which is now so largely used. We find these are much inclined to flower. Keep the flower buds picked off to within two weeks of selling time.

That most important plant, the canna, has had to remain in flats, but must now go at once into a 4-inch and be given a bright, warm house.

Caladium esculentum wants the same light house and a 5 or 6-inch pot. They seem to be in good demand every year.

Among hotbed plants I forgot to mention the lemon verbena. It is always in demand. The plants you propagated in March, if pinched once and put into a mild heat, make splendid plants in a few weeks.

Our seedling verbenas are yet five or six in a 3-inch pot. We usually put them in hotbeds, but they grow so vigorously and flower so late that we will put them into 2½-inch pots and grow them on a light, cool bench. No one asks for a large verbena, but they like to see a flower.

The petunia is a very important plant and we prefer to grow them in 2½-inch pots in a light house, then they flower quickly and it's a flower your customers want to see.

Salvia splendens, don't neglect in a small pot or it will soon get covered with red spider.

I cannot now mention half the bedding plants under your care, but nearly all will take their last shift, and do it as quickly as possible. Don't have a night or day dream that you are potting them all at once or in one day. You can't do it, and it will only wear you out, although to a man whose disposition it is to fret it is ridiculous to say, "Don't fret." Select what is worst off and every batch done you are nearer the goal.

Avoid shading your houses as long as you possibly can. There is nothing worse for soft-wooded plants than a shady house and little or no fire heat. With faithful attention to watering and still more with the help of some plunging material round the pots you can avoid shading till the middle of May. Notice the plants in a hotbed: with their roots moist they will endure the brightest sun.

Above all do not believe that you can get along without fire heat because we have at last some warm weather. To coleus, cannas and even geraniums it is a terrible setback to suddenly drop fire heat, unless the weather is bright and warm.

The wisest plan of growing carnations now, it is pretty well agreed, is that it should be early planting and early lifting. By that I would say plant out the first week of April and lift the first week of August. But how can we do it in our northern states? The ground is only just dry enough to plow. We do often delay, however. After the chance comes, plant at once. I like to have 14 or 15 inches between the rows and 10 inches between the plants. There are several advantages in very early planting. The ground is moist and they soon take hold and start, and the cool nights, even a slight frost, does them no harm. To a grower the good early start he can give his carnations means great results in the future, and the all important must be attended to even if less important suffer. WM. SCOTT.

JOHN C. HATCHER'S NEW STORE.

We present herewith a view in the handsome new store of Mr. John C. Hatcher, Amsterdam, N. Y. The picture is so clear that little description is necessary. The ceiling is of metal and the floor is what is known as "terrazza." From the timbers to the surface it is nine inches thick. The bottom is of cement into which is driven and then rolled crushed Italian marble which is finally polished and oiled. The base board is of marble.

The conservatory in the rear has a curvilinear roof and is of generous size, the large display of plants making a very attractive feature of the establishment.

Mr. Hatcher had an "opening" when the store was completed last month and during the afternoon and evening each visitor was presented with a few flowers or a boutonniere. The local press printed very extended notices of this event and gave Mr. Hatcher a good deal of very effective advertising. He certainly has reason to be proud of his handsome, up-to-date store.

GERANIUM GEN. SHERIDAN.

For several seasons there has been used in the beds at Lincoln Park, Chicago, a single scarlet geranium that has at once attracted the attention of the trade visitor by the intensity of its color effect and the admirable way in which it keeps up this effect right through the season.

At the park it has been known simply as "Pullman," the stock having been obtained from the gardener in charge of the grounds at that suburb. From inquiry in various directions we learn that its correct name is Gen. Sheridan, though we have not yet learned where it originated. Certainly it is a splendid bedding geranium and ought to be more generally used.

The Easter Trade.

All the leading retailers agree that the Easter trade was decidedly the best in years. On Thursday and Friday some of them were feeling rather doubtful in view of the weather, which was gloomy and unfavorable for shopping, but Saturday was pleasant and the business done on that day was enormous. Those who handle plants say that this department developed wonderfully this year, but that sales of cut flowers increased, too. The plant men had their difficulties increased by the large number of plant orders that had to be delivered on Saturday, but fortunately the weather was favorable and little packing was required.

The majority report that customers didn't figure quite so closely on price as last year, though medium priced plants went most readily as usual. Nevertheless, more of the expensive arrangements were sold. All say they could have sold more good lilies had they had them. Of other plants and cut flowers there was no marked shortage, and the universal report is that it would have been impossible to handle any more business had it come. Prices ruled somewhat higher than last year, especially on extra select stock.

The wholesalers all report an enormous business, far ahead of last year. The only limit to business was having stock with which to meet demand. The only really serious shortage, however, was in lilies. Of these none had enough. And, curiously enough, there was not the serious shortage of carnations that was anticipated. At the close rose orders had to be cut more than those for carnations. General bulbous stuff went better than ever before and practically everything was well cleaned up.

By the way white carnations materialized at the last moment, it was plain that many had been held on the plants for some time. This works fairly well at Easter, but when done for Christmas, generally results in a surplus of white for that holiday.

Taken all in all, the Easter trade, both local and shipping, was a record breaker, and both retailer and wholesaler are exceedingly well satisfied with it. At the leading wholesale places there were several all night sessions at the work of packing and shipping, and the boys look a little worn and weary, though contented and happy.

Since Easter, demand and supply have maintained very satisfactory relations, and prices are very good for the season.

Seen at the Retailers.

At Samuelson's: Many egg shaped birch bark baskets of various sizes, filled with plants and flowers. Of the smaller ones, some were filled with pansies and mignonette, some with mignonette and Roman hyacinths, some with mignonette and violets. The medium sized and larger ones were filled, many with baby primroses, some with single daffodils and mignonette, some with yellow tulips and yellow Marguerites, some with various ferns only. Many pans of Dutch hyacinths with various colored crepe paper covers and sashes of ribbon to match or contrast, all harmoniously. A few of these pans had birch bark pot covers. A few pans of grape hyacinths that made a pleasant variety. Many birch bark boxes or jardinières filled with hyacinths and blooming plants. Hampers of birch bark decorated with green luffa and filled with various plant combinations, one especially effective one being of Empress of India azaleas and Clothilde Soupert roses, the hamper being decorated with a sash of open work pink shot ribbon and chiffon. Braid hampers filled similarly with plants of American Beauty and Soupert roses with various sashes diagonally across the fronts and with rosette of the same ribbon at one end. Similar hampers filled with short lilies or with azaleas. Small, round birch bark boxes filled with pansies.

At Wienhoebers': Many pans of hyacinths and single yellow daffodils and Horsfieldii daffodils with pot covers or crepe paper. Many low baskets filled with short lilies, light colored cinerarias, Horsfieldii daffodils and Primula obconica. The yellow Primula vulgaris worked into a number of plant baskets. Many fine lilies and azaleas. Baskets of plants of Soupert and Crimson Rambler roses. A plant basket containing a lily, a Marguerite, numbers of Horsfieldii daffodils, Primula obconica and P. vulgaris. Many birch bark eggs filled with small plants and flowers. Quite a few white cinerarias. Some remarkably well bloomed azaleas, Empress of India being particularly showy.

At Smyth's: Many pots and pans of bulbous stuff and miscellaneous pot plants in bloom. Handle baskets filled with combinations of plants and sash of chiffon on the handle. Many boxes or jardinières of blooming plants trimmed with crepe paper and sash. A box filled solely with Primula obconica. Heaths in variety. Large pots of swainsona, four plants in a pot. Birch bark eggs, baskets and jardinières. A profusion of miscellaneous blooming plants.

At Lange's: Blooming plants of Dendrobium Wardianum and Anthurium Scherzerianum in decorated pots. Pans of small plants of maranta. Otaheite oranges. Cut spikes of large flowered antirrhinum, and the usual run of blooming plants and flowers.

At Schubert's: Many azaleas, lilies and flats of tulips and other bulb stuff, in addition to the usual display of cut flowers.

At Friedman's: A big display of fancy blooming plants. Among the plant arrangements a big pink rhododendron in a basket decorated with asparagus and which sold for the modest price of $75.

At Wittbold's: Pots containing three or four red tulips with small ferns interspersed. Egg shaped birch bark baskets filled with metallica and argentea guttata begonias and ferns.

Similar birch eggs filled with flowers and with sashes of ribbon tied around. Many azaleas and lilies.

Various Items.

Chase, the florist, will be at 145 Twenty-second street after April 25.

George Allen is now with the Anderson Floral Co.

P. J. Hauswirth is now fairly well settled in his new store and has installed a very handsome ice box lined with white tiles and with a mirror in the back of the part where the flowers are stored, so when one looks in the stock of flowers seems to be acres in extent.

To accommodate certain members who were unable to bowl Wednesday evening, the concluding set of games to determine the membership of the team to meet the St. Louis bowlers will be played at Anson's Friday of this week (20th inst.).

O. J. Friedman, the florist, has organized the Friedman Automobile Co.

Jas. McHutchison, representing Aug. Rhotert, New York, was a recent visitor.

Charles W. Erne, for the last five years with E. H. Hunt, has returned to his home in Terre Haute, Ind., and will probably remain there till next fall.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held tomorrow (Friday) evening.

The match with the St. Louis bowlers has been postponed, as owing to illness some of their members were unable to get away for the date originally selected.

ST. LOUIS.

Easter Trade.

Easter trade was good all along the line and fully up to the expectations of the florists. The weather was most favorable to flower buyers on Saturday, and although it rained Sunday it was too late to do much damage, as most of the orders were placed on Saturday. Some of our leading florists had to work half the night and some all night getting their orders in shape for early delivery Sunday morning, as nearly everybody wants their orders delivered by 9 o'clock.

The majority of the down town florists had their windows handsomely decorated. Kunz, Riessen, Ellison & Tesson, Foster and North, all had their large show windows decorated with hydrangeas, Harrisii, azaleas, and araucarias; also a fine assortment of cut flowers, which made pretty displays. Young's and Miss Badaracco were also in line with nice displays in their windows. In the West End, Weber, Walbart, Ostertag, Ayers, Cannon and Miss Newman made good use of their show windows by making handsome displays of fine plants of all kinds and a large assortment of cut flowers.

The floral displays at the different churches were noteworthy and from the looks of the churches in the West End an enormous amount of plants of all descriptions were used. Lilies of course predominated. Perhaps the best decorated church was the First Presbyterian. The arrangement was simply grand; plants of all descriptions were seen in every nook and corner, and lilies were in profusion. The writer has not yet learned who the florist was that did the work.

The plant trade did not present any especially novel features, and fine, well grown azaleas, Harrisii, spireas, and Dutch bulbs, in pots and pans, sold well, especially when trimmed with crepe paper the same color of the flowers. Daisies and palms were also good sellers—in fact, some claim that the plant trade was better this year than last. Lilies sold particularly well, but were very scarce and many more could have been sold.

The wholesalers were kept busy with both shipping and local trade, and from the number of orders they had, Easter must have been better than last year. All the stock that came in was of good quality and prices a little higher than last year.

Beauties were in great demand; not half enough to go around, and brought from $6 to $9 per dozen for first grade stock; other grades from $2 to $4 per dozen. Meteors and Brides were scarce and A1 stock sold as high as $10, while other stock not so good brought $5 and $6 per 100. Maids were more plentiful and sold at the same price. Perles also were scarce, selling at $5 and $6. Most of the growers around here are off crop. A great lot of fine carnations came in on Saturday morning, but none were left, as orders ahead cleaned them up at once, and those with late orders had to take rubbish that was left. The price for the best fancy was $5; others from $3 to $4. None sold under $3, unless it was rubbish.

An enormous lot of bulbous stock came in. The stock varied a good deal; still it was pretty well cleaned up, although early prices were a little high. Romans and paper whites, $3 and $4; Dutch hyacinths, $4 to $6; tulip, $4; valley, $4 and $5; callas, $12.50; Harrisii, $15.

Sweet peas sold at $1.50 to $2; violets were scarce and small, still Californias sold at 50 cents per 100; smilax, asparagus and adiantum sold well at regular prices. All the above stock was of unusually good quality and little was heard of pickling this year.

Various Items.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, were in town buying Easter stock for home trade. Both of these gentlemen have booked themselves for the Chicago trip with the bowling club.

Henry Emundt, of Belleville, Ill., is a happy father. It's a girl. Henry says he looked all through Scott's Manual in regards to boys, but found the information missing.

Max Herzog just missed it for Easter. His fine house of Beauties will be in full crop next week.

Luther Armstrong, who has been ill for some time, is somewhat better, but still unable to be out.

T. W. Guy, one of the old timers down at Kimmswick, is taking things easy now, but comes to town occasionally to call on his friends in the trade.

What the St. Louis Florists Say About Their Easter Trade.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers: Business never better than this Easter; worked all night Friday and Saturday to fill our orders; plants of all kinds sold well.

Fred C. Weber was sick abed during the Easter rush, but got through nicely with extra help; sold out clean; business big and prices good.

Chas. Cannon, Jr.: Cut flowers and all kinds of plants sold well; best Easter yet.

Miss Newman: Business was first class; best Easter we ever had; everything sold well.

Mary Ostertag: Business about the same as last year.

George Walbart: Sold out clean; had to stop taking orders early Saturday morning; biggest Easter I ever had.

C. C. Sanders: Did a fine business; Easter stock of plants all sold out; cut flowers the same.

Wm. Kalisch & Son: Had a fine trade; much better than last year.

Ellison & Tesson: Big business at both stores; plants all sold out and our own big cut sold clean early Sunday.

Chas. E. Schoenle: Had all I could do; business was fine; everything sold well.

John Kunz: For my first Easter in business can't complain; sold all I had.

Riessen Floral Co.: Had the biggest Easter in years, with plenty of funeral work with their Easter orders; kept us up all Saturday night and all day Sunday.

Fred Foster: Much better than last year; had a large stock on hand of everything; any kind of a plant sold well.

North Floral Co.: Easter trade was fine; had a cut of 2,000 carnations of our own, which helped out a great deal; lilies sold well, but scarce.

Ostertag Bros.: Business better, prices better and stock better than any Easter yet; plenty of weddings on hand for this month; business is booming with us.

C. Young & Sons Co.: Had the best Easter in years; had plenty of lilies which sold well at big prices; cut flowers of all kinds; sold out clean.

Miss Badaracco: Had a splendid trade in both cut flowers and plants; better than I expected.

The South St. Louis florists, Schray, Beyer, Fillmore, Meyer, Eggling, Dirmer and Hirle. Our Easter trade was fully up to our expectations; everything on hand sold well.

The North St. Louis florists, Koenig & Sons, Meinhardt and Julius Koenig: Had all we could attend to during the Easter rush.

Brix, Rotter, Aug. Kunz and Mrs. Peffer: Well satisfied with our Easter trade.

Our wholesale men, Kuehn, Berning and Hudson: Orders were never so heavy as they were this Easter; roses were scarce and could have sold as many more; stock this year was of better quality than any Easter yet.

Bowling.

The bowling club had no rolling on Monday, as all the members were too tired after the Easter rush to bowl. President Kunz states that the trip to Chicago will be postponed one or two weeks, as we have a few bowlers on the sick list, whom we must take with us, so April 29th or May 6th will be the date set for the trip. BUFFALO.

The Easter Trade.

First of all, the elements might have treated us worse. Although flakes of snow fell within twenty-four hours of Easter Sunday, there was no day of the week that we could not deliver plants without covering, and Saturday was fine, but with a nasty, cutting cool wind.

Sunday was the first spring day of the year, bright and balmy, and never in the history of our growing city was there such an array of new hats and bonnets, light pants and neckties, violets pinned on pretty girls, button holes on men, and in the windows of houses lilies, azaleas or some gay plant. Everybody wanted to be out of doors and thousands visited the cemeteries and the now busy grounds of the Pan-American.

Your readers are supposed to look in your columns for florists' trade reports only and Bradstreet's or Dun's for general trade, but it is worth mentioning that on all sides you hear merchants of all classes say that they never realized such an awakening of business. This is of the greatest importance to florists, because we all depend on each other's prosperity. After a long winter's hibernating, people awakened with the generous impulse to open their pocketbooks, and in our line it is no longer confined to one class, but people of very moderate means want a plant or a bouquet.

It is difficult to say just now how everybody feels, but the few I have interviewed are well pleased. All made fine displays of plants, and the quantity sold must have exceeded any former year by at least 20 per cent. Kasting says he never handled so many flowers by one-third, and that is a good indication of the trade. And in plants he went ahead ten fold.

Although some stores doubtless sold many cut flowers, yet plants were the great feature, as they have been for the past several years. Lilies generally were not of as good quality as they might be and there were many scraggy Crimson Ramblers and some good ones, and those that did not see the good ones thought the others all right and bought them.

It would be a little difficult to say which plants had the preference, but the first two it is easy to mention. I would place this year the azalea first with those who wanted to buy a fine plant for a present. The lily is the standard, and all good ones sold clean out. Crimson Ramblers sold well at good prices, but we had no Philadelphia giants here; $3 to $5 was the price. Rhododendrons did not sell as well as azaleas and I may add here that there was an unusually good demand for $4 and $5 plants of the latter. White lilac sold well at $1.50 to $2. American Beauty and hybrid roses went off good at $1 to $2.

Nine and ten-inch pans of Murillo tulips and Dutch hyacinths sold well at $1.50 to $2. Small pans of well flowered pansies went off quickly. The single pot of Dutch hyacinth is always a good seller, because it suits the very moderate purse. There were grown here a number of excellent mignonette, compact, well flowered plants, and although many sold, you do not want a large quantity; they only appeal to the very refined. The spiraea and cytisus are no longer important Easter plants, but the spiraea is so useful for cutting that we can't do without it.

We were disappointed in the sale of Acacia armata and the bottle brush plant, and have concluded that we had better occupy the space with azaleas. A moderate sized acacia covered with bloom and its rarity and beauty extolled by the grower, only produced a shrug and the remark: "I don't fancy it." Rubbers, palms, and ferns were asked for only occasionally. It is evident and worth remembering that a gay plant is wanted for Easter.

To finish my remarks on plants: I could say you cannot satisfy all parties, and while we are more than satisfied with the sale of $2, $3 and $4 plants, we seemed largely without a 50-cent plant, and must be better prepared another year. Three hyacinths in a 5-inch pot, a 5-inch pan of tulips, a late 4-inch pot of cyclamen, or a small begonia, or even a well flowered zonal geranium, would fill the bill.

Flowers, except American Beauty, were all cleaned up. The ordinary run of good roses sold well at $3 per dozen. Carnations brought $1 and no kick where quality was good. There were not many fancy varieties handled. Excepting some few shipments of carnations, we did not hear of much embalmed stock. Violets were in excellent demand at $1.50 to $3, according to quality. Mignonette sold well at $1 a dozen. Valley moderately at 75 cents. Tulips and daffodils at 50 to 60 cents. There is really little demand for this bulbous stuff, but it fills in, and those people doing a cemetery business can not do without them, for nothing makes so good a show for the price. We seemed to get along entirely this year without running to the smilax bed, but cut sprays of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii were in constant demand to accompany boxes of flowers.

Florists' wagons were on every street till a late hour on Saturday, but only one automobile, and that was hired for the day by W. J. Palmer & Son—a good "adv." for we heard of it early in the day. Even if the vehicle contained nothing more substantial than the contents of the wheels, it was a good move.

People did not ask you to "fix up" the plants with crepe; it was taken for granted that you would, and few plants were sent out without being trimmed.

In the rush of business on Friday we received an order from one of the rural counties of western Pennsylvania for 10 cents' worth of smilax; to be sent by express. That broke us up more than a big church decoration, and in the hurry I am afraid it was neglected. Everybody was tired out and, Brother Florists, it is a hard and tough three or four days. We ought to make some money for such high pressure work. It is not work—it is a jumping slavery for forty-eight hours. There is no business more difficult to handle, no goods so perishable, the anxiety and strain on your nerves is great, and we ought to reap a good reward, unless Easter could keep up all the year round, when we would be equipped for it. I am glad it only comes once a year. W. S.

BALTIMORE.

Easter Trade.

The weather for the week preceding Easter comprised much rain, clouds and low temperature, but the day itself was ideal, whilst Friday and Saturday were clear and bright, with vivid suggestions of spring in the air. Were the daily press to be credited, the employment of plants and flowers for the decoration of church, home and cemetery was never more general, and the supply of materials never more abundant. It would seem that the sunshine and calmer atmosphere gave impetus and opportunity for buying, the dealers making the best of their chances for attractive displays of the streets, in the stores and at the markets, and the desire to have living and fragrant decorations for the vernal holiday became infectious with all classes.

The growers had felt the untoward influences of dull skies, but almost all kinds of stuff were in full supply, and prices were satisfactory generally to buyer and seller.

The embellishment of the windows of the florists themselves advances with the growing fondness for floral decoration, and nearly all the stores showed imposing and tasteful arrangements of choice material. Large plants of Bougainvillea were much in evidence this year, occupying a broad space in the windows, lighting up handsomely under the electric light and harmonizing effectively with other varieties used for the decorative scheme in each particular case.

The retailers emphasize the larger quantity of growing plants Easter sales demand. Asked which were the most popular, one firm said Crimson Ramblers and genistas, and that Bougainvilleas of moderate size would sell well. Another pointed to acacias and azaleas as the great favorites, and a bright young woman in a third store declared that any plant would sell now if in good shape and flower. Lilies, azaleas and hydrangeas went out by the thousands of course, and, although we hear of Dutch stuff being a drag, the supply seemed inexhaustible and the demand to keep pace with it.

The truth is the great bulk of the buyers want plants that do not cost much money, and this material fills the place. The lily disease was erratic, some growers reporting as great a loss as 40 per cent; but two large growers, S. Feast & Sons and Wm. J. Halliday, agree that their loss was so small as hardly to be appreciable.

All kinds of cut flowers were well taken up. If any were over-abundant it was violets; roses were in good demand; many more carnations, if in good shape, could have found a market. Towards evening on Saturday shipments of mignonette, smilax and asparagus coming in found the buyers supplied and were laid over.

The Florists' Exchange seemed to have had about all it could do; in fact, its capacity for handling the cut flower business seems to have been about reached, and it is not unlikely that before long more commodious quarters will become a necessity of the situation, its present location being palpably too constricted and ill-arranged for its increasing traffic.

Notes.

Wm. J. Halliday displayed in his window last week some of the best Golden Gate roses yet seen here, with fine large blooms of rich tints and stout stems quite thirty inches long. The delicious fragrance of this rose contributes to its popularity and its only poor quality is the paucity of foliage. If anyone can give the history of this rose it would be of public interest. It is evidently of the blood of the Niphetos, but what is the other parent? As we learned the story, it was originated by Robert Neely, of New Orleans, a florist who went from Baltimore, and who sold it, with several other hybridized varieties raised by him, to the Dingee and Conard Co. of Pennsylvania, by whom it was named and sent out.

The old established firm of Samuel Feast & Sons has secured a ten years' lease at a large rental of the building on the southeast corner of Charles and Pleasant streets, now occupied by the Woman's Exchange. This is a commodious stand, peculiarly adapted to the florists' trade, with fine show windows and ample bays, with northern exposure, whilst the offices and studios into which the upper floors are divided will be a source of large revenue. The old stand of the Feasts gives way to the march of building improvements, and the new one is one block further north. It adjoins the store of the Halliday Bros., formerly Mrs. Mary J. Thomas', and is across the street and within a stone's throw of Wm. J. Halliday, John Cook and James Pentland's establishments.

Smith & Hamilton, of Mount Washington, are about to erect a new rose house 100 feet long. They have already one carnation and one violet house.

BOSTON.

Bumps.

There are some rather strange phrenological bumps on the head of the situation here. To begin with, the weather bureau made a slight clerical error whereby a heavy two days' rain intended for Chicago got switched off into Boston for Thursday and Friday and nearly spoiled the whole thing. In spite of this, however, I claim it was the best Easter the Hub florists ever experienced. A perfect hurricane of trade struck the city at 1 p. m. Friday and raged supreme till late on Saturday eve and blew nearly everything out of the stores except the contents of the money drawers.

One bump consists of the fact that nothing white sold well but lilies, and white roses are left in larger quantities than anything else. Growers made their same old mistake of holding carnations too long and prices ran a shade lower on Saturday than at any time previously for a couple of weeks.

Another rotund protuberance bears the smell of violets. This may perhaps be illustrated by the remark of one of our most philosophical retailers, "Two years ago we bought 15,000 violets and threw away half of them; last year we bought 15,000 and had one bunch left; this year we bought 15,000 and bought 5,000 more Saturday to keep up with the demand." They were more plentiful than expected and customers much more so.

Lilies got scarce in places, but retailers averaged things up very nicely by patronizing wholesalers and buying of each other, so that the supply just about equaled the demand. There were not enough good red roses; orders for smaller grades were all filled at good prices.

WASHINGTON.

Easter Trade.

Business was the finest on record with every one. Plants of every description taking the lead, ranging from 50 cents to $3, although some of the boys overloaded themselves with high priced azaleas. D. Z. Blackstone says: "Best we ever had; everything sold out except a few straggling plants." Washington Floral Co., Mr. Otto Baur says: "Could have sold more; best we ever had." F. W. Bolgiano says: "This is the only Easter we ever sold completely out." From the looks of J. H. Small & Sons, Gude & Bro. and J. R. Freeman's stores they looked as though a cyclone had struck them the next morning, and to see the proprietors, you would see a weary batch of played-out boys, but their pockets were fat, which caused them to still keep a smile on their tired-out countenances.

Every one thought lilies would be a glut, but before evening they had advanced 25 per cent, and there were not enough to go around. Bulbous stock such as tulips and jonquills did not go at all at any price. The trade here demands fine roses and carnations and Dutch stock is not wanted by them at any price.

Notes.

We learn, with regret, of the death of Mr. Field, the most popular florist of this city and the introducer of our grand American Beauty rose. Mr. Field was buried on Easter Sunday. Will give particulars in next issue.

F. H. KRAMER.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Easter Notes.

The writer visited the down-town florists Tuesday morning and each one agreed that Easter trade was 25 per cent better than last year.

The weather was perfect until Sunday noon, when we had a heavy rain-storm, which spoiled trade for the rest of the day.

The florists commenced early in the week to decorate their windows with plants and bulbous stock and an improvement over former years was very noticeable. W. L. Rock made a special effort to attract the public, and his artistic display would do credit to any city. Sales were about equally divided between cut flowers and potted plants, and supply equal to demand.

Maids, Brides, Perles and Meteors retailed from $1.50 to $3 per dozen; Beauties brought from $2 to $8. The carnation was the favorite flower and fancy varieties sold at $1.50 per dozen. Violets were few in number and inferior.

Potted plants were of a higher grade than last year, and grown more extensively. The past three weeks of spring-like weather brought Harrisii out in fine shape, and they were of much better quality than was expected. Everyone sold and many more could have been disposed of.

A few pans and boxes of finely grown tulips trimmed with crepe paper and ribbon found ready sales. Daffodils and Romans suffered from that "tired feeling" and could not be used unsupported.

Humfeld Floral Co. had a splendid lot of azaleas and white lilac.

Baker Bros. made a specialty of cinerarias and think they sold enough to pay their transportation to the Klondike next month.

Samuel Murray monopolized the market on hydrangeas, which were perfect plants; in fact, it may be said the finest ever seen in Kansas City.

The great rush is over and everyone seems pleased with the volume of business done. Now let's get down to the regular routine. ORPHAN.

NEW YORK.

It should be always a pleasure to write of prosperity, and yet our business and the people in it are so paradoxical, either from habit or experience, that they are always ready to deny or dispute anything, especially reports in the trade papers. There may be many ways to look at the business done this Easter, but those best able to judge must admit that it was a record breaker for quantity of plants and flowers sold.

The weather was a friend to the florist. Saturday was fair, but Sunday was a gloriously beautiful day. Never in the history of New York was there such an Easter parade on Fifth avenue. The sight could not be duplicated in any European city. More gaudy costumes might be shown in gay Paris, the military swagger of Rotten Row was not there, but the New York girl and her beau care not for these, and need none. The Cherry Hill and the Murray Hill belles walked side by side, the rich and the poor—yes, the girl able to buy any part of royalty in Europe could here be seen to smile and move aside to let her own servant pass in all the splendor of a new Easter gown.

But—and here we must speak of that which concerns business—never were there so many flowers seen. The quantity of violets worn even on Fifth avenue Easter Sunday was a revelation. It would seem as if there were over a million violets in New York city that day; though they were the most popular flower for street wear, there was an abundance of roses, carnations, valley, and other flowers proudly worn by swain and damsel. The violets were tinfoiled, ribboned and tasseled—whew! the colors of those "violet" ribbons, 'twas awful on sensitive nerves—a humiliation to the poor flowers, for we saw many—aye, very many—of them hang their wearied heads as if in shame.

It may not be right to be comparing one annual festival after another with its predecessors of the past, for many reasons, and here are some: The world moves and people cannot stay behind, floriculture is not controlled by either trusts or patents—it never can be. The recent national rose show forcibly demonstrated the fact that posies are grown in quantities in almost every village and town in the United States. There is an oversupply—not too many flowers for the number of people, but too many flowers to demand high prices for. Take violets, for instance. They seemed to have been stored up for a considerable time; the only thing about most of them was the color; others were vilely repugnant, though some we saw were a credit to the country; they were well packed and were sweet. When you stop to think of the quantity on the market, though, and that it is necessary to dispose of them quickly at the best price you can get, you will be forced to admit that a vast amount of credit, I mean praise, is due those who succeed in selling out at a fair price.

What are fair prices will always be disputable and the question must always be settled by the public. Thousands of violets were sold by the peddlers and Greeks on the New York streets on Sunday for 25 cents a bunch of 50. What they paid for them and what the grower may get we know not; on the other hand, first-class storekeepers paid from 75 cents to $1 for choice stock, and they were sold to the people at double or more than double that price.

As regards roses, enormous quantities were shipped in. Small roses were not even in the "number" or "Guinness" triple extra" class. Numberless boxes of Brides and Maids had that bruised and sodden look about them that forbade purchase at any price, but Jacqueminots, Brunners and other hybrids were fine. There was no scarcity in any line of soft or bulbous stock, and as for lilies—well, New York was staggered. They came by the thousands from all sides and in all shapes. Many a grower who held out for big prices before Easter will have to be content with half what he asked. The people of New York will not pay as much for buds in embryo as they will for open blooms, and it's pure madness to imagine you can compel them to.

Now, to sum up the cut flower business: We have every reason to believe that it was good, very good, considering that every energy was devoted to pushing plants. The prices may not be as high as those of other years; we fear they never will be again, for the indications are that more plants will be grown and there is more money in them for the retailer, so if any fair price can be got for poor or medium cut flowers under these circumstances, it's useless to audibly comment on them.

In the matter of flowering plants, such displays were never seen before anywhere. Every store was packed, much of the plants were fine and the growers got good prices, very high prices, in fact, for anything that was half way decent. The quantity sold was marvelous. The tidal waves of prosperity surging in this country at present seemed to have pushed the general public into the florists' stores, and the ebb tide took away the best from all, leaving but the wreckage behind. Quite a few of the florists have many plants left, and there are reasons for it. They were either too high priced, or their stores are located in places from which the best trade has moved, or to which it has yet to come.

The azaleas were countless and the few that are left will be all right for another year. Many were glutted with lilies—green lilies, not white ones—and you know the man who will ship such stock in, and is sure the gullibility of the people is a blinding or imbecilic and epidemical disease, surely needs something himself. If the lilies sent into this city were of good quality and were put up right, few, very few, would be left unsold. In addition to their being green, they were too paltry in appearance. The New Yorker is not stingy, and hates to appear so. You couldn't ask him to send a pot of one lily with one flower and three buds to a lady—such a thing would be ridiculously childish; but have a dozen or more flowers in a pot and it's all right; if the growers or retailers hadn't sense enough after all their experiences to do this, they deserve to have them left on their hands. Whatever the effect in isolated quarters, the general summing up must be that it was a glorious Easter in every way, and it's good to be satisfied.

Oh! we forgot—just another word. The men you got your Harrisii bulbs from in Bermuda sent five thousand boxes of cut lilies from that island to New York on Saturday, April 7. Another cargo was expected on April 14. We suppose they were merely sent to help cover the demand for Harrisii; you know you bought so many from them and they did so well. However, these Bermuda cut lilies were offered for sale in several large dry goods houses throughout the country. One would like to know if they can be grown there and shipped here for almost nothing what's the use of bothering with growing them in glass palaces here?

But let's get to the alleys. There were only a few of the boys there, and the scores were:

Easter Trade.

The retail florists report the past Easter as surpassing all others, both in the quality of the stock furnished them by the grower and the prices realized. From the growers' standpoint everything sold well. The weather was all that could be desired. A great many of the retailers sold out entirely and were obliged to lay in a general stock Monday morning. While the supply of lilies was sufficient to meet the demand, there was no great surplus, and the quality was better than was looked for; in fact, many lots were far superior to any of the past two years.

In pot plants, azaleas as usual took the lead, and there were but few left over. The $2, $3 and $5 sizes sold well. In Rambler roses the medium sizes sold best. Genistas sold well. Hydrangeas, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, valley and spireas sold fairly well. Decorations exceeded last year by far, and in consequence cut flowers were very high.

Prices: American Beauties, $1.50 to $6 per dozen; Brides and Maids, $5 to $12; Meteors, Golden Gate, Morgan and Kaiserins, $5 to $10; Liberty, $10 to $25; Gontier, $3; Perles, $4 to $8 per 100. Cattleyas, 50 cents; dendrobiums, 15 to 35; carnations, fancy $3 to $4, ordinary $1.50 to $2.50; hyacinths, $3 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; daffodils, double $4, single $1 to $3; tulips, $3 to 4; mignonette, $3 to $4; violets, single 25 to 50 cents, double 50 to 75 cents; sweet peas, 1 to $1.50; callas, $15; adiantum, $1 to $1.50; asparagus, $50; smilax, $20 to $25; Harrisii, $8 to $10. R.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The outlook was very dismal for a good Easter. Wednesday it commenced to snow and snowed again on Thursday, and it seemed on Friday, with still two inches of the beautiful on the ground, that it was certain to be a cold, wintry Easter, but when Saturday opened up bright and warm business assumed a different aspect. The people commenced buying early, deliveries got congested and special delivery wagons had to be resorted to in order to clear up the sales for the day. It was past midnight before Saturday's sales were out of the way. The business of the week was good, with Saturday the record breaker; all expected a heavy trade, but not an avalanche.

Lilies, of course, sold best, and were completely cleaned out to the last plant. Roses in pots and Crimson Ramblers sold well; the trouble was, not enough of them. Spiraea floribunda, fine plants they were, did not seem to take well, though they made a nice display. Hyacinths, single, in pots, sold readily at 15 to 20 cents each; in pans at 35 cents to $1.50, the larger pans going slowly, being too expensive. A few rhododendrons were sold, but are too high priced to become popular here. Azaleas, however, still maintain their popularity, a great many being sold. As for cinerarias, a few people still like them, but they are about out of favor. A few violets in pans sold well, but tulips sold poorly; nobody really seemed to care for them, and the only way to get rid of them was to use them in mixed boxes of flowers. Narcissus sold well at 75 cents per dozen.

There were plenty of plants to supply the demand, there being some exceptionally fine hydrangeas in 6-inch pots, with from 4 to 6 blooms each, which took well. Lilies were the only plant in short supply, and many more could have been sold. Cut flowers were equal to the demand, except carnations, which sold at 50 to 75 cents per dozen, and some poor stock was eagerly taken at the 50-cent rate.

Crabb & Hunter rented a room down town and ran a special sale of plants and their sales were phenomenal.

Plants were pretty generally cleaned up close; no one has a kick coming and all agree that it was the heaviest Easter trade ever experienced.

G. F. CRABB.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

There are many things to interest the casual observer while taking a stroll through Mr. E. Hippard's greenhouses. The plant itself, consisting of twenty-two modern, well equipped houses and comprising 60,000 feet of glass, is well worth seeing. There is nothing lacking and everything about the place seems to work with clock-like regularity. Nevertheless, it is Mr. Hippard's intention to make some extensive additions and improvements during the summer or early fall.

Then there are his roses! Although as a rose grower Mr. Hippard is pre-eminently successful and has established a reputation second to none, his success this season seems to have surpassed all his previous efforts. His Brides, Maids, Perles and Meteors are of the kind that would sell (as they invariably do) at sight in any market. His carnations, likewise, do remarkably well and while growing the best standards as well as the "latest," he has about ten seedlings of his own, some of which are decidedly promising. One, especially, seems destined to make its mark. It is of a pleasing salmon color, borne on a long, stiff stem, a splendidly formed flower and a great favorite with the ladies.

A GOOD IDEA.

A Pittsburg girl who has a genius for giving charming luncheons and originating novel features for them introduced a flower arranged contest the other day which all her friends are copying.

When each guest took her seat for this particular luncheon, she found at her cover a pretty vase of Bohemian glass. Beside the vase she found two or three rosebuds and a few sprays of green.

The hostess explained that each girl would be expected to show her artistic skill by arranging the flowers in the vase; that a prize would be given for the most exquisite grouping. Five minutes were allowed for the work, and at the end of that time some very dainty vases were ready to be judged. The prize was one of those smart little flower hampers which our florists are fitting out this winter. It was filled with violets and tied with violet ribbon.—Daily Press.

THE EASTER TRADE.

Reports from all sections show that the Easter trade has broken all records and that everyone in the trade is thoroughly satisfied. This is exceedingly gratifying and shows that the florist is receiving a fair share of the present prosperous general business conditions. We print in this issue a large number of reports and they seem to be unanimous that this Easter was by far the most profitable to the florist in many years.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Easter trade was the best we have had for years. Everything in cut flowers and blooming plants sold readily and at better prices than last year. Lilies were all sold by Saturday noon. This seems to be the only flowering plant buyers want for Easter. Azaleas, spiraeas, hyacinths and hydrangeas went slowly until lilies were all sold. Cut flowers of all kinds sold well at fairly good prices. On the whole this was the most satisfactory Easter ever known. G.

DETROIT.

Disagreeable, cold and cloudy weather until Saturday has made this Easter one rather to the advantage of the wholesaler, for the retail man had to place his orders to secure his stock, and customers put off placing orders until Saturday, thus making the poor, overworked retailer do five days' work in two. But on the whole it has been a good Easter for both.

Stock of some kinds was short, notably lilies, but the florists had the entire trade, for the corner grocery found them too high to venture. Carnations were also scarce and high. Plants sold well and there was a noticeable call for trimmed plants in baskets. One of our leading retailers employed a skillful trimmer for that purpose alone.

Ill luck seems to pursue Asman & Dunn, for last week their delivery wagon was demolished and the horse killed by an electric car.

ELK RAPIDS, MICH.—The Alfred J. Brown Seed Co. are placing contracts through this and adjoining townships for the seed pea crop for 1900. The price paid is $1 per bushel for peas sowed broadcast and $1.20 for peas cultivated. Several hundred acres are contracted.

PLEASANT HILL, MO.—Geo. M. Kellogg reports that the Easter trade was the largest in the history of his establishment. All stock was good, with the exception of lilies, which were short stemmed.

WARREN, O.—Mr. Louis Bengston, who has been employed with George Gaskill for two years past, has gone to New York, and from there goes to Paris to visit the exposition. Mr. Wm. Gerke, of Cincinnati, an expert grower and designer, succeeds Mr. Bengston.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held at Music Hall on April 4, with President C. F. Wood in the chair and a good attendance was present. Considerable business was transacted. It was decided to give a chrysanthemum show this fall, in November, and the advance premium list will be mailed to every member. Mr. William Mann read a paper on "Artistic Work in Making Floral Designs," which attracted considerable attention.

Easter trade was a record breaker this year. Lots of plants and ferns were sold. Some very fine tulips and azaleas went at a good figure. In cut flowers, prices were about the same as last year. Harrisii lilies were scarce.

Jacob Schulz had a very fine display of all kinds of plants, and reports a heavy trade this year. Joseph Coenen & Co. sold every blooming plant they had. T. B. Rudy reports a very large Easter trade. Nanz & Neuner made a fine display at their store; a very large azalea in their show window attracted considerable attention.

Wood & Stubbs, the seedsmen, report a very large trade, and their forces are kept late to fill orders.

Hy. Fuchs' little boy has been very sick, but is improving.

C. H. Kunzma's carnations came in just right for Easter and were beauties.

F. Lichtefeld & Son had all they could do for Easter—the best ever known.

Jno. Bettman & Sons of New Albany, Ind., report the largest Easter sale of plants and cut flowers ever known.

HY. LICHTEFELD.

PEORIA, ILL.

The Friday preceding Easter was cold and cloudy and very little business was done. Saturday being light and warm, brought out the crowds, and trade was excellent.

Longiflorum lilies took the lead, and there were some very fine Harrisii grown by J. C. Murray, with 12 to 14 flowers. There were large numbers of spireas, which sold well. Cole Bros' lilies did not all get in in time, but they did well with their other stuff.

Kuhl, of Pekin, had a grand display and some fine cut roses. Loveridge did well with good roses, cut, and pot stuff. J. C. Murray had a very large and varied display in a huge store on Adams street, rented for the purpose, and sold out clean. His roses and carnations were fine and plenty. Prices were 40 to 60 cents a dozen for carnations and $1 to $2 a dozen for roses.

J. R.

CINCINNATI.

Easter trade was about the same as last year. There was a shortage of roses and carnations, due to the dark, rainy weather just previous to Easter. Bulbous stock was not so plentiful as heretofore, and brought good prices. There was a good demand for blooming plants both at the stores and the flower market. We were favored with ideal weather on Saturday and Sunday, which brought out the people, although it was too late to bring out the flowers.

George & Allan hit it nicely with 5,000 Harrisii and sold them all at 15 cents per bloom.

B.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Easter Trade.

If one could have seen the florists' faces here during the past week one would have witnessed a grand transformation scene. They were even gloomier than the weather, especially last Friday, when some of them began delivering plants in the snow storm we had here on that day. But now their countenances are brighter than the sun on Easter morning and they greet you with a pleasant smile and slap you on the back and say, "Wasn't it a corker?" Well, to tell the truth, it was a corker. The weather was surely with the florists, Saturday and Sunday, and everything in the Easter line was sold at fancy prices.

In large plants lilies, hydrangeas, Rambler roses and azaleas took the lead at fancy prices. In smaller plants good bulbous stock, being scarce and in great demand, brought better prices than ever known here. In cut flowers carnations sold more freely than roses at from $1 to $3 per dozen. There was a good supply of roses that sold from $2 per dozen up. Of course there are a few soreheads that happened to miss it on such an occasion as this, but the opinion of the majority is that Easter trade was fully 50 per cent. better than last year.

Garfield Park.

I wish to state that our city florist, R. A. McKeand, extends to all the florists of Indiana and especially of our own city an invitation to visit the city greenhouses at Garfield park on Sunday, May 6th. "Mac" says that he has in the neighborhood of 200,000 plants in fine condition and all those who doubt this statement would do well by accepting this invitation and see for themselves.

FRED.

DES MOINES, IA.

Easter Trade.

Easter, 1900, is past and long to be remembered. The supply was far short of the demand. Harrisii was scarce and mostly shipped in, both cut and in pots. Hyacinths in pots were in poor demand, being inferior in stock. The church decorations were perhaps on the whole less than in former years, being mostly done by the members of the various churches furnishing plants and an occasional Harrisii. We did not hear of any florist getting more than a $15 deal with any church, but there may have been better orders placed. Most all of the boys complained of their orders from the commission house being cut down, and this disappointment added to vexation made the day long to be remembered.

As usual, and particularly during Easter week, I found the genial Mr. Ullrich more than ordinarily busy. Both his wholesale and retail trade have fully kept pace with the times, having increased to an extent surpassing his own expectations. While we were chatting the letter carrier put in his appearance, depositing a stack of letters on the desk. "Be sure to send me so many roses." "May I depend on so many carnations?" "Won't you please let me have so many of one thing, and that many of another?" Such was the nature of that afternoon mail—a week before Easter.

A stroll through the houses sufficed to convince me that enough stock was in sight to go the rounds. In this respect Mr. Ullrich is especially fortunate; not a bench but what showed a full crop in roses, as well as carnations. As to bulbous stock, it fairly took my eyes as well as my breath.

In my travels I often hear complaints about Asparagus plumosus nanus seed being an utter failure. "The seed will not come up," I am often told by one florist or another, "and I pitched out the box." Don't "pitch" out the box, brother florist, says Mr. Ullrich, but bide your time. The seed, if fresh, is bound to come up some time; if soaked before sowing, it is sure to make rapid growth. Last spring Mr. Ullrich sowed 4,000 seeds, which remained dormant for almost a year before they began to come up. To-day the boxes look as green and as fine as a well kept lawn and Mr. Ullrich will have 4,000 additional seedlings to the lot of this year's sowing (soaked, by the way, before put in the soil). S.

MILWAUKEE.

Easter sales were fully 25 to 30 per cent better than previous years, in spite of shortage of stock, especially carnations and lilies. The shortage in supply was greater than anticipated, due mostly to dark and cold weather the previous week. Thursday we had a snow storm, covering the ground with six to seven inches of snow. The weather redeemed itself, however, Saturday, too late to materially help the blooms along, but it was ideal weather for trade and excellent for delivery of plants, etc. Flower buyers were out in full force and dealers who laid in a large supply found little difficulty in unloading.

There were very few good lily plants to offer by the end of the week, as advance orders almost took the entire supply. Cut lilies were about equal to demand. With the exception of carnations, plenty of other stock could be had in small flowers, such as valley, hyacinths, tulips, violets, etc.

The sales of plants were large and most all the down town dealers were displaying a lot of azaleas, spireas, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils in pots and flats. Cinerarias, geraniums, lilacs, roses, mignonette and numerous other varieties also found a ready market. Reports up to this writing indicate that the trade in general with all dealers was very satisfactory and considerably beyond expectations.

GEO. W.

PITTSBURG.

Easter trade was very good here. Every florist seems to be pleased with the business done. They report stock cleaned up, with prices about the same as last Easter. More plants were sold this year than ever before, the weather being rather favorable and a good supply on hand.

Florists are not prepared to say whether they did more business than last Easter, but they all had all they could take care of. Fine weather the week preceding made flowers more plenty than expected. Carnations were about the scarcest of any flower. All in all, Easter trade was very satisfactory.

BAER.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The management of the Orphans' Flower Carnival, to be held May 24, 25 and 26 next, offer prizes of $1,000, $700, $500, $200, and $100, for the handsomest decorated vehicles in the floral parade. Other features will be "The battle of roses," "The flower ball," and "The crowning of the flower queen."

NEW CASTLE, PA.

If ever the drummer is out of season and out of place, it is during Easter week, and particularly during the last three days, when the harvest is on, and hustle and bustle seem the order of the hour. At such a time one had better keep out of sight, for no florist, be he ever so genial and sociable, cares to entertain the agent.

That the Easter of 1900 is a record-breaker is conceded on all sides. Everything sold, from the tiniest daisy to the mammoth azalea or hydrangea.

W. D. Fischer & Sons report the best trade they ever had, with supply barely keeping pace with the demand, although, in anticipation of a large trade, they were exceptionally well equipped to meet and supply all demands.

Messrs. Butz Bros. likewise report a rush, the like of which has never been known in the past. With a stock of roses that seemed more than enough for all purposes, they had barely enough with which to fill orders. Bulbous stock, azaleas, and all sorts of blooming plants sold exceptionally well.

DENVER, COLO.

Only a few members turned out at club roll Tuesday evening, April 10, but some good scores were made, Berry and Scott racing each other for high man, but it's a toss-up who is better.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 324 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Genevieve Lord The Peer of All Light Pink Carnations.

but when put to the test of an exacting commercial fire, none will stand the test and bring in the returns like Genevieve Lord. Its color is the kind that sells at sight. Stem the best of any carnation. A perfect, non-bursting calyx. Beautiful distinct form. In fact it has nearly everything that is wanted in a pink carnation. Customers recognize it at a glance, describing it as "that beautiful pink on the long stem."

Prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock all sold prior to that date.

PRICES: Doz., $2.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $75.00

Catalogue free to all applicants, containing complete description of the above as well as all the big new ones, at introducers' prices; the best of last year's novelties and standard sorts, also a fine stock of new and standard sorts of chrysanthemums.

CANNAS.

The "Novelty" of Novelties for 1900. New—"Mrs. Kate Gray"—Canna. A magnificent hybrid resulting from a cross of ItalixMad. Crozy. The color is a rich shade of orange scarlet overlaid with gold, a superb coloring which in open sunlight is simply dazzling. The Form is an ideal of the Crozy type of bloom, the petals being very broad and overlapping, measuring 2 1/2 to 3 inches wide, while the individual flowers are from 6 to 7 inches across. The Texture of the flowers is all that could be desired; they partake of the nature of the pollen parent or Crozy race in this respect, and withstand our hottest summer suns without wilting. The foliage is a bright glossy green, equal to a Musa in size and substance and forms a beautiful foil to the gigantic trusses of bloom. The height of the plant is 6 to 7 feet, the growth is luxuriant to a degree, but very compact; the massive foliage, giant trusses, and enormous individual flower give the plant a noble tropical appearance. It is the only Canna of its kind in existence, and absolutely surpasses all others; its intrinsic value will make it a leading standard sort for years to come. Prices.—Strong roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz; $25.00 per hundred. Terms strictly cash with order, no exceptions. Stock limited; orders filled with strict rotation. Address Howard & Smith, Nurserymen, P. O. Box 494, Los Angeles, Cal.

NEBRASKA'S BEET SUGAR CROP.

The officials of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad have been collecting some information concerning the sugar beet industry in Nebraska.

Some difficulty was encountered early in the season in securing a sufficient acreage for the two large factories there. But the final result was an acreage sufficient to meet all requirements.

The weather conditions early in the season were favorable for planting and cultivating the beet, so that a good stand was secured. The crop matured in excellent condition, and is making a very large yield.

The factories at Grand Island and Norfolk began operations about October 1, and are making a successful run, with a prospect of a larger sugar output than in any preceding year.

The price paid to the farmer usually is $4 a ton, but the very good quality of this season's crop will secure $5 a ton. The output of the factories in the state this season is estimated to be about 25,000,000 pounds.

"ANTE."

In a Greenfield, Mass., cemetery was recently seen a new made grave with a floral tribute upon it bearing the word "Ante." Sporting men who saw it wondered how much they must "ante" up for the sight. On inquiry it was found that a florist had been instructed to prepare an emblem with the word "Auntie" upon it, and this was the result, which he brought in at too late a moment to rectify, but claimed that it was all right, as he had "looked in two dictionaries and they both spelled it that way."—Templeton (Mass.) Recorder.

BOTANY.

A meeting of the Vermont Botanical Club was held recently at Burlington, Vt. In the program we note there was a discussion of the question, "What Is a Species?" When the botanists have to argue the question, what hope is there for a poor florist?

Another number on the program was: "The Dehiscence of the Sporangium of Pteris Cretica." Every florist should at once post himself on the manner in which the aforesaid sporangium "dehisses," or he may make a miscue with his next batch of the fern named.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 23, 1900.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York City
GENTLEMEN:—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

P. S.—Kindly book my order for another boiler. I will let you know later when to deliver it.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

OTT BROWN.

Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

J. T. TEMPLE.

Davenport, Ia.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Some Easter Lessons.

Things heard, seen and thought of during the Easter rush will not be out of place to discuss now, for if there be any merit in a thing it is good at all times. The wise will be always willing to learn and the best lessons are often purchased by experience. Events like Easter afford the florist an opportunity to show his artistic and business ability, and this should not be measured by the volume of business done, but in the manner in which permanent effects have been catered to or assured, for it is good to consider quality as against quantity in all things and weigh ultimate accomplishments.

To the fakir we have nothing to say, his success is due principally to the cheap or shoddy element in human nature, and though at times he may intrude upon or occupy the place of the legitimate business man, some small circumstance may remove his temporary prosperity like the wind would blow away chaff. The solid business man or woman must adopt different methods to success. Their aims are not merely for temporary but for permanent results. Their business, like the towering building, is raised by perseverance and the careful usage of measured thought and act. Yes, 'tis true, some have built greenhouses and opened stores and won apparently flourishing trade on nothing, neither money, ability nor effort. It is hard to account for some things; but there is no glory won by results of lethargic payments of obligations, and whether they occupy glass palaces or not they are but fakirs who pay but seldom or not at all for the goods they buy; that is really the only way to judge, for any one can buy, not all can pay.

Don't misjudge us, our sympathies are with the poor and struggling whose very intention is worth the actual deed of others. We refer to the proud, false, glittering objects which leave nothing behind except execrations and regrets. You had the efforts of these to deal with at Easter time, and the best way to combat evil influence is to be careful of your own actions. Popularity is everything to a business nowadays, and this can be won in several ways. The easiest and cheapest is to appear pleasant on all occasions; no one likes to deal with a gruff or sour person, and many a time and oft, as most of you know, customers will come long distances to you, not because they could not do better nearer home, but for some reason even you cannot explain; therefore, the greatest care should always be used to give satisfaction.

Unfortunately at busy times regular customers are compelled to put up with much indifference, many times with neglect, and their tolerance and good nature should be rewarded. Small orders are often forgotten in the great hurrah, and there will be numerous justifiable complaints which should receive careful and generous attention.

Many of you have plants left over from Easter which could have been placed to good advantage before you closed on Easter Sunday. In most cases it is bad to send plants gratis to any one, if the impression is imparted that you would not have given them if you could have sold them. Opinions thus created are only capable of bearing contempt. There's a nice way of avoiding many unpleasant things by timely consideration. It is difficult, we know, to attend to every detail and have everything successfully done at a time like Easter, but you should profit by the lessons given, remembering that it is not always the quantity of help but rather the quality and system that accomplishes best results. There is a great deal done when proper preparations are made. The trade is much divided on many small matters; it is a case of many men, many minds, yet the system which reduces labor and expedites business should be adopted.

Now in the matter of "order" or "day" books versus order pads, there is much to discuss. We prefer the printed order pad of a size convenient for the pocket. There should be no lines on it and only a few words printed, such as "ordered by" on top and "sent to" above where the address is put at the bottom. The simpler the order sheet the better, for in a rush you have no time to conform to lines or fill in examination-like blanks. Files are cheap and are of great convenience and preservative value. You need only three or four in actual warfare. Pin the card, if any, on the order sheet and put it on the "order file" face up. When you enter that order in your account book write out the address tag also, and mark the order sheet, in blue pencil, a. m. or p. m., and the day it is for. Put that on the checked file, or you can dispense with entering in the book till the rush is over, but it is good to have your bookkeeper do the sorting out and addressing at the same time, and when on Easter or Christmas eve your cut flower or plant man starts to fill orders, a file, on which the orders are placed in proper rotation, should be handed him with another upon which to put his executed ones when properly marked. This simplifies his work and will enable him to do several times the amount of work done by those who have to refer to books and bother writing tags with every order. In this way, too, delivery routes can be arranged; nothing should be handled twice if the same result can be reached the plant and place it in the section it belongs. We repeat again that every florist should send out a leaflet giving cultural directions with every plant, and the utmost precaution should be adopted to insure careful delivery.

We saw many deplorable sights among plants this Easter. The flowers were battered or completely destroyed; it is safe to say that more than 25 per cent of plants and flowers sent out on an occasion like this are utterly worthless when delivered; this not only causes much chagrin but greatly injures the trade. Your tag should never be on anything you to make up the violet orders and deliver them by special wagon to insure their being delivered in time for church Easter Sunday. Violet tinfoil destroys the sweetness of violets and looks cheap, besides; if the stems must be covered either twist the ribbon round them or use the small lace handkerchief. The most important thing connected with the violet is its fragrance. The best cut flower boxes seen were the rich plain ones. Some pretty boxes were those with a spray of flowers in the center of the lid. The colored paper and cheap wallpaper effects are in disfavor.

The supply of good plant baskets, especially pot covers, ran short. It was impossible to get any on Saturday. Some abominable and trashy colors were among those offered; you couldn't match them in a rainbow. Will some one invent a good cheap class of pot covers, also a wool cap for the protection of lilies? The things which were plain and had quality sold best. All seem satisfied with the business done. It's a pleasure to read the reports from all over the country.

Trailing arbutus is being sold on the streets and in the stores. When this beautiful little flower appears spring's warm smiles have succeeded in drying winter's cold tears. IVERA.

NEW YORK STORES AT EASTER.

We have much pleasure in giving you glimpses of some New York florist stores, taken specially for these columns on Easter Saturday. Pictures speak better than words sometimes. Our instructions to the artist were to procure illustrations of groups of "made-up" work, showing the different styles, rather than of extensive displays, consequently we would ask you to look upon these as representative detail work, not of quantity of stock, which was something enormous! Then again, owing to the rush of people, it was impossible to either obtain many desirable pictures or do justice to those presented. Broadway and the principal avenues of New York are busy places on Saturdays, and we wish to thank all for the courtesies extended.

We were pleased to note that most of the first-class stores did not use any crepe papers this Easter. Baskets and ribbons were the only forms of decorations used; the best element will have none of the dresses which turn a florist's store into a paper doll shop. The cheaper stores of course still had their rolls of paper, and the combinations seen in the delivery wagons on Saturday and Sunday were enough to make an automobile run wild.

These views show but a few of the principal stores in the center of the city, but they are sufficient to represent the typical up-to-date American flower shop, and there is no possibility of comparison with them in any city of Europe. Very much of the work turned out this Easter was very creditable—in fact, a great advance on by doing it once. Cool calculation will profit you more than nervous prostration. It is better to stop a moment and think than to become frenzied and make errors.

Try to keep your plant orders and accounts separate from your cut flowers, for two reasons: You will the more readily see which pays best, and cut flowers as a rule are more urgent in delivery than plants; it is a great trouble to separate them when late. One of the best ways to do with plants is to prepare them for delivery immediately after being sold. By this we mean put the card and tag on at once, hand them over to the shipper, who may wrap paper around the bottom of would be ashamed to acknowledge as yours, and everything sent out at any time, particularly in a case like this, should be done in a way to give satisfaction, because that is the best method of advertising your business.

In regard to cut flowers, it will pay you to have some one specially detailed to take care of the stock, put it in water and keep it from being mauled about; much of the profit is often wasted by carelessness in this way. These observations are always in season with the florist. The rules which are good for Easter are good any time; it is only a matter of expansion.

A few New York florists have a man that of other years. The quality of many varieties of plants was much finer, and that of itself may have decreased over-elaborateness of dressing. Each store endeavored to have something different from the other and many of them succeeded admirably.

Thorley had his lilies in ordinary plant pots which were painted a bright yellow; saucers were furnished and painted similarly; bows of yellow ribbon were tied half way up the lily stalks. His window in the early part of the week was entirely composed of lilies thus treated, and it was rather striking and distinct. Painted pots promise to be popular in future; perhaps the pot-makers may wake up and give us something good and cheap which will dispense with store botherations.

But let us discuss the pictures and what they teach; if we criticise adversely, remember it is only in the interests of education; that is the only reason we present them.

No. 1 is a view of some of the baskets arranged in Fleischmann's window. The center is the new birch-bark basket which was quite popular this Easter. Paper trimmed baskets are in the rear. Both gauze and taffeta ribbons are used on the plants shown and you will notice a round card price tag instead of the ordinary wooden label. Mr. Fleischmann's work was better because it was less artificial than we have seen it for some time in his store, and the comparisons even in this picture will be enough to convince.

No. 2 shows Stumpp's style of Easter work. The crepe paper fad, though distinctly of French origin, can be said to have been introduced to New York first from this store. Now you will notice that their best work is confined to baskets, and very well and rich it looks. Satin ribbons and silk tasseled cords are used to good effect, and you will also notice the card price tag, which has also a dry goods tinge to it. We don't believe in any sort of price tags on plants because they are generally left on.

No. 3 is a very good picture of Thorley's window, showing hampers filled with growing violets and baskets of mixed plants. The handles are twisted and tied with taffeta ribbons to match the flowers. No papers were used here.

WINTER FLOWERING PLANTS.

"Young Florist" writes: "Please give a list of plants which flower constantly during the winter, such as Primula Forbesii, mignonette and forget-me-not. Also the main cultural points, so as to have them ready for blooming early in the winter."

To do justice to this question would take a volume, and I can only mention what occurs to me as the "cut and come again" flowers that are useful to the florist. First, there are the three leading flowers of our business, the rose, carnation and violet, the cultivation of which has been written up a thousand times and still going on. That important class known as bulbous is made continuous by successive crops, beginning with paper white narcissus and Roman hyacinths in November, and lasting till we get the gay tulips outside in May. The longiflorum lily and its varieties we constantly have by bringing on consecutive batches.

Among the continuous blooming plants that are available for cutting we have Bouvardia, propagated in February, flowering from November to May; mignonette, sown in July, flowering from November till late spring; sweet alyssum, planted in the houses in August, continuous throughout the winter; Primula Forbesii and P. obconica. Of the latter there are now some splendid strains. Sown in May, they flower from November throughout the winter. Zonal geraniums, plants selected in April, shifted on and not allowed to flower till October, flower continuously for many months. Stevia serratifolia is invaluable for Christmas, but it is only one crop.

Many of the abutilons flower profusely through the winter, but it is only in designs that their flowers can be used. Antirrhinums are most useful decorative plants. Sow in April and keep in flats or pots and plant out in cool house in August. Begonias: Of this large and beautiful genus there are scarcely any that would pay to grow for cut flowers. We find the most useful to be what we know as incarnata grandiflora, but there is but one cutting, though most useful at Christmas and later. Propagated in March, the calla lily (Richardia) blooms well in pots from October to May, and since the Harrisii are so much affected with disease there is an inclination to grow more of them. Chrysanthemums can now be had from October 1st to New Year's.

Cyclamen are not only the most beautiful of pot plants, but their flowers are equally useful and are not out of place among the choicest flowers. Sown in November, they flower from November to April. The Marguerites, or Paris daisies, flower from November on till spring, if kept cut, and are graceful and pretty. Heliotrope is liked by all, but the only way to grow it profitably to cut is to have a large plant at the end of a house and cut or spur it back as you would a grape vine. The calendula or marigold will give you its gay orange flowers during the winter, but it is rather coarse and common. Sow in August or lift plants from open ground and plant on bench in September.

Pansies are always in demand in winter, but difficult to bloom in dark weather. Very good up to December 1st and from first of March on. Swainsona flowers profusely during winter. Should be grown in pots or tubs where roots are confined.

I have not included such plants as lilac or spiraea, which can only be forced for one crop.

Now, as before said, the detailed directions for the cultivation of the above, although in most cases very simple and well known, would occupy more time and space than I can afford, and I respectfully refer "Young Florist" to "Scott's Florists' Manual."

W. S.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Herbaceous Plants.

Florists who grow herbaceous plants will be busy with orders just now. There is no time more favorable than the next ten days for transplanting nearly all herbaceous plants. Most of them divide with the greatest ease and can be divided ruthlessly with a sharp spade. Although that large class of plants known as herbaceous, of which we can take the paeonia and phlox as familiar types, are thought to be about everlasting, yet they wear out in the contest and they must continually spread and make more crowns or there would soon be no flowers, so they are all benefited by lifting and dividing every five or six years.

You cannot make the ground too deep or too rich for all this class of plants and if the best results are wanted give them room. An exception to propagating by division is the beautiful herbaceous pyrethrum, P. hybridum. They are perhaps the most useful of all this class of plants to the florist who has use for the flowers. When they have made a growth of two or three inches, if strong plants they send up innumerable shoots. Rob each plant of a few cuttings. They will root in sand in a frame or house, but a mild hotbed is the most favorable place. Grow them along in 4-inch pots till September, when you can plant them out. They are very hardy, but do not always live when pulled or cut in pieces. They take up little room in the garden and their beautiful flowers are admired by all.

Achillea The Pearl divides easily and is always useful and lasts a long time in flower. The splendid hybrid delphiniums you can't be without. If it is only to decorate your store windows they are most desirable. There may not be much money in these hardy garden plants to the high toned store florist, but they are most useful for a cheaper grade of business and every florist who has an acre or two of land should have a collection. They take care of themselves and many of our customers, particularly those who have summer resorts, want just such plants for their rural gardens.

Easter Plants.

I meant last week to say more in my notes about a few important Easter plants that maybe you have left over. We were disappointed in the sale both of the Acacia armata and the metrosideros. They may go in other cities. We had well flowered plants of both and they were grown one winter and summer here, and are much better than the newly imported plants. When the flowers are gone cut the shoots back to within three or four inches of the previous year's growth. That is, all the growth they made since last April should be cut back to within a few inches. Place them in a house where it is 55 to 60 degrees all night, and syringe. They will soon break and make young growth. About the middle of June we plunged them in a frame in the broad sun and never let them want for water. In July we mulched them with some rotten cow manure to which was added a third of good sheep manure. To this summer mulching, especially the sheep manure, I attribute the fine, robust growth they made. If they need a shift, when you put them out in June is a good time.

The best azaleas we had, particularly the Dr. Moore, were plants that we had carried over precisely the same as described above. Mind, in the fullest sun, no shade of any kind, they don't want it. I mention Dr. Moore because this variety is often a poor bloomer the spring after being imported, but when grown here a season it is a grand variety, and its beautiful rosy pink is much more pleasing than the great favorite, Mme. Van der Cruysen. Edmond Vervaine, Prof. Wolters and Bernhard Andreas alba were other varieties that were very fine after a year's growth with us.

If the azaleas are large and in good health, shorten back last year's growth about one-half. If the plants were much abused and not very strong cut them back still harder. The wood of two years' growth will make any amount of breaks. Encourage by syringing and a genial heat a good growth and they will do nicely indoors till you are over your bedding plant rush, which is usually the middle of June.

Sometimes one watering in twenty-four hours is not enough in our blistering sun and they must not be neglected, nor must they be stood in a frame where during a wet spell they would be standing in an inch or two of water, for that for many hours would be fatal. Thrip and red spider trouble azaleas in hot weather, but a daily syringing given to them hard and horizontally seems with us to entirely keep down these pests.

Pilogyne Suavis.

I notice in a catalogue the little climber Pilogyne suavis. You don't see it in every list, for it is not generally known. It is without a rival as a summer climber, not going to the length or height of a moon vine, but for a dense growth, rapidity, and a beautiful veil of greenery there is no climber its equal. For a trellis or any position not over 7 or 8 feet high it is the ideal vine. Cuttings struck in the fall remain dormant and rusty looking till February. Then they begin to grow and if you are not careful they will soon grow over everything within 3 feet of them.

Cuttings rooted now will be more than large enough by planting time. If this sweet little climber was more easily managed in winter it would be universally grown. Its leaves have a slight musk odor, but not enough to offend the fastidious nose. Any portion of the growth will root.

Asparagus.

We never seem to have too many small Asparagus plumosus and when you can be sure of getting good seed. Now is a good time to sow. The plants sown now will make fine little stuff for ferneries which are wanted in quantity in the fall.

Lilies.

For some time our Lilium lancifolium have been in a very cool house, in fact retarded as much as possible. They are now 5 or 6 inches high and growing fast. Auratum we have not grown this year as it has been very unsatisfactory of late and the flower is too coarse and strong to be used in any way except out of doors. The album and rubrum or roseum are beautiful flowers and are useful when good flowers are scarce. They are liable to come in rather plentifully at one time. You can give some of them a little more heat and retard others and by that means have their season of bloom last over two months. Greenfly is terrible on the Japan lilies and fumigation must be faithfully attended to.

Thorley's Window.
New York Stores at Easter.

Pelargoniums.

I have said very little about pelargoniums for a long time because I am disgusted with them. After growing a fine plant from a cutting in September to a 5-inch pot they are then passed by and a zonal geranium is preferred. I don't blame the public for the zonal geranium has many better qualities.

If you do grow the show pelargoniums this is the time of year they will be opening their buds and now it is that you must not let the fire out and have a damp, cool atmosphere or the petals will drop in one single night. Keep a fire going even if you have to give air. And frequent but mild fumigation is most necessary or else the story will be: "My Martha Washington is covered with them a'r nasty lice." WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATIONS.

At a little adjourned session after the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, President Hartshorne, W. N. Rudd, P. M. Broadbeck and Walter Retzer exchanged some interesting experiences and the writer took the liberty of making notes.

Mr. Hartshorne said that he had a house of carried over Bradts that had been doing very much better than the young plants. They had been replanted in fresh soil, but kept under glass all the time and they had produced much more freely than the young plants, the blooms being of extra quality, too.

Referring to seedlings, he said that from one pod he had recently taken 73 seeds, much the largest number he had ever secured from one pod. He wondered what had caused that pod to produce so many seeds. Mr. Rudd said his foreman had an idea that in cross-fertilizing it increased the number of seeds to thoroughly plaster the stigma with pollen. Mr. Retzer thought the amount of pollen would have little effect, only it might be that ordinarily there was much of the pollen that was not at the exact degree of ripeness and by using a good deal there was greater certainty of having enough pollen grains that were at the right stage to be effective.

Mr. Rudd said that he was growing two carnation plants for every one that he expected to bench, with the intention of having a big batch from which to select only the very best plants. He observed last season that the plants that had been in extra good shape when put on bench had paid a vast sight better for the space occupied and he was sure it would pay well to grow enough to have all extra select for benching even if he had to throw away the unused ones.

Next year he will carry this idea still further by marking the best plants and taking cuttings from them only. He believed that the success of certain well known growers of extra high grade flowers was largely due to careful selection of the cuttings first and the plants afterwards.

The difference in the cut from the extra select plants was very noticeable at Christmas, when prices ruled the highest. He felt it was a mistake to rob the blooming plants of cuttings. In the case of Maceo especially he felt sure that every cutting taken early in the season meant the loss of a bloom later on.

Mr. Hartshorne had noted that Mrs. James Dean would stand much stronger feeding than other varieties and told of how through an error a double dose of nitrate of soda had been given, the results proving decidedly beneficial instead of injurious.

A general discussion on fertilizers followed. Speaking of bone meal, Mr. Rudd said he procured his bone as finely ground as possible. He believed that very finely ground bone at $30 a ton was cheaper than coarser bone at $20. When ground very finely the plants got the benefit of the bone much more quickly and he believed that when the coarser bone was used the bulk of its value remained in the soil when it was thrown out at the end of the season.

He thought the prejudice against bone that had been dissolved by acid was based on false conclusions. He questioned whether the small amount of acid in the bone did any harm and attributed the injurious results sometimes noted to the fact that the bone had been so finely divided by the acid and its action was therefore so much quicker, when used in same amounts as ground bone the plants suffered from an overdose of the fertilizer. He therefore believed in using less of the dissolved bone for a given amount of soil than of the ground bone, and less of the finely ground bone than usually used of that which was coarser.

Mr. Broadbeck said he used his bone in solution. He had a tar lined barrel into which he would put two bushels of bone, either coarse or fine, and he would then put in two pounds of concentrated lye and a gallon of water. The lye would soon cut the bone up vine. The calendula or marigold will give you its gay orange flowers during the winter, but it is rather coarse and common. Sow in August or lift plants from open ground and plant on bench in September.

Pansies are always in demand in winter, but difficult to bloom in dark weather. Very good up to December 1st and from first of March on. Swainsona flowers profusely during winter. Should be grown in pots or tubs where roots are confined.

I have not included such plants as lilac or spiraea, which can only be forced for one crop.

Now, as before said, the detailed directions for the cultivation of the above, although in most cases very simple and well known, would occupy more time and space than I can afford, and I respectfully refer "Young Florist" to "Scott's Florists' Manual."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Herbaceous Plants.

Florists who grow herbaceous plants will be busy with orders just now. There is no time more favorable than the next ten days for transplanting nearly all herbaceous plants. Most of them divide with the greatest ease and can be divided ruthlessly with a sharp spade. Although that large class of plants known as herbaceous, of which we can take the paeonia and phlox as familiar types, are thought to be about everlasting, yet they wear out in the contest and they must continually spread and make more crowns or there would soon be no flowers, so they are all benefited by lifting and dividing every five or six years.

You cannot make the ground too deep or too rich for all this class of plants and if the best results are wanted give them room. An exception to propagating by division is the beautiful herbaceous pyrethrum, P. hybridum. They are perhaps the most useful of all this class of plants to the florist who has use for the flowers. When they have made a growth of two or three inches, if strong plants they send up innumerable shoots. Rob each plant of a few cuttings. They will root in sand in a frame or house, but a mild hotbed is the most favorable place. Grow them along in 4-inch pots till September, when you can plant them out. They are very hardy, but do not always live when pulled or cut in pieces. They take up little room in the garden and their beautiful flowers are admired by all.

Achillea The Pearl divides easily and is always useful and lasts a long time in flower. The splendid hybrid delphiniums you can't be without. If it is only to decorate your store windows they are most desirable. There may not be much money in these hardy garden plants to the high toned store florist, but they are most useful for a cheaper grade of business and every florist who has an acre or two of land should have a collection. They take care of themselves and many of our customers, particularly those who have summer resorts, want just such plants for their rural gardens.

Easter Plants.

I meant last week to say more in my notes about a few important Easter plants that maybe you have left over. We were disappointed in the sale both of the Acacia armata and the metrosideros. They may go in other cities. We had well flowered plants of both and they were grown one winter and summer here, and are much better than the newly imported plants. When the flowers are gone cut the shoots back to within three or four inches of the previous year's growth. That is, all the growth they made since last April should be cut back to within a few inches. Place them in a house where it is 55 to 60 degrees all night, and syringe. They will soon break and make young growth. About the middle of June we plunged them in a frame in the broad sun and never let them want for water. In July we mulched them with some rotten cow manure to which was added a third of good sheep manure. To this summer mulching, especially the sheep manure, I attribute the fine, robust growth they made. If they need a shift, when you put them out in June is a good time.

The best azaleas we had, particularly the Dr. Moore, were plants that we had carried over precisely the same as described above. Mind, in the fullest sun, no shade of any kind, they don't want it. I mention Dr. Moore because this variety is often a poor bloomer the spring after being imported, but when grown here a season it is a grand variety, and its beautiful rosy pink is much more pleasing than the great favorite, Mme. Van der Cruysen. Edmond Vervaine, Prof. Wolters and Bernhard Andreas alba were other varieties that were very fine after a year's growth with us.

If the azaleas are large and in good health, shorten back last year's growth about one-half. If the plants were much abused and not very strong cut them back still harder. The wood of two years' growth will make any amount of breaks. Encourage by syringing and a genial heat a good growth and they will do nicely indoors till you are over your bedding plant rush, which is usually the middle of June.

Sometimes one watering in twenty-four hours is not enough in our blistering sun and they must not be neglected, nor must they be stood in a frame where during a wet spell they would be standing in an inch or two of water, for that for many hours would be fatal. Thrip and red spider trouble azaleas in hot weather, but a daily syringing given to them hard and horizontally seems with us to entirely keep down these pests.

Pilogyne Suav's.

I notice in a catalogue the little climber Pilogyne suavis. You don't see it in every list, for it is not generally known. It is without a rival as a summer climber, not going to the length or height of a moon vine, but for a dense growth, rapidity, and a beautiful veil of greenery there is no climber its equal. For a trellis or any position not over 7 or 8 feet high it is the ideal vine. Cuttings struck in the fall remain dormant and rusty looking till February. Then they begin to grow and if you are not careful they will soon grow over everything within 3 feet of them.

Cuttings rooted now will be more than large enough by planting time. If this sweet little climber was more easily managed in winter it would be universally grown. Its leaves have a slight musk odor, but not enough to offend the fastidious nose. Any portion of the growth will root.

Asparagus.

We never seem to have too many small Asparagus plumosus and when you can be sure of getting good seed. Now is a good time to sow. The plants sown now will make fine little stuff for ferneries which are wanted in quantity in the fall.

Lilies.

For some time our Lilium lancifolium have been in a very cool house, in fact retarded as much as possible. They are now 5 or 6 inches high and growing fast. Auratum we have not grown this year as it has been very unsatisfactory of late and the flower is too coarse and strong to be used in any way except out of doors. The album and rubrum or roseum are beautiful flowers and are useful when good flowers are scarce. They are liable to come in rather plentifully at one time. You can give some of them a little more heat and retard others and by that means have their season of bloom last over two months. Greenfly is terrible on the Japan lilies and fumigation must be faithfully attended to.

Thorley's Window.
New York Stores at Easter.

Pelargoniums.

I have said very little about pelargoniums for a long time because I am disgusted with them. After growing a fine plant from a cutting in September to a 5-inch pot they are then passed by and a zonal geranium is preferred. I don't blame the public for the zonal geranium has many better qualities.

If you do grow the show pelargoniums this is the time of year they will be opening their buds and now it is that you must not let the fire out and have a damp, cool atmosphere or the petals will drop in one single night. Keep a fire going even if you have to give air. And frequent but mild fumigation is most necessary or else the story will be: "My Martha Washington is covered with them a'r nasty lice." WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATIONS.

At a little adjourned session after the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, President Hartshorne, W. N. Rudd, P. M. Broadbeck and Walter Retzer exchanged some interesting experiences and the writer took the liberty of making notes.

Mr. Hartshorne said that he had a house of carried over Bradts that had been doing very much better than the young plants. They had been replanted in fresh soil, but kept under glass all the time and they had produced much more freely than the young plants, the blooms being of extra quality, too.

Referring to seedlings, he said that from one pod he had recently taken 73 seeds, much the largest number he had ever secured from one pod. He wondered what had caused that pod to produce so many seeds. Mr. Rudd said his foreman had an idea that in cross-fertilizing it increased the number of seeds to thoroughly plaster the stigma with pollen. Mr. Retzer thought the amount of pollen would have little effect, only it might be that ordinarily there was much of the pollen that was not at the exact degree of ripeness and by using a good deal there was greater certainty of having enough pollen grains that were at the right stage to be effective.

Mr. Rudd said that he was growing two carnation plants for every one that he expected to bench, with the intention of having a big batch from which to select only the very best plants. He observed last season that the plants that had been in extra good shape when put on bench had paid a vast sight better for the space occupied and he was sure it would pay well to grow enough to have all extra select for benching even if he had to throw away the unused ones.

Next year he will carry this idea still further by marking the best plants and taking cuttings from them only. He believed that the success of certain well known growers of extra high grade flowers was largely due to careful selection of the cuttings first and the plants afterwards.

The difference in the cut from the extra select plants was very noticeable at Christmas, when prices ruled the highest. He felt it was a mistake to rob the blooming plants of cuttings. In the case of Maceo especially he felt sure that every cutting taken early in the season meant the loss of a bloom later on.

Mr. Hartshorne had noted that Mrs. James Dean would stand much stronger feeding than other varieties and told of how through an error a double dose of nitrate of soda had been given, the results proving decidedly beneficial instead of injurious.

A general discussion on fertilizers followed. Speaking of bone meal, Mr. Rudd said he procured his bone as finely ground as possible. He believed that very finely ground bone at $30 a ton was cheaper than coarser bone at $20. When ground very finely the plants got the benefit of the bone much more quickly and he believed that when the coarser bone was used the bulk of its value remained in the soil when it was thrown out at the end of the season.

He thought the prejudice against bone that had been dissolved by acid was based on false conclusions. He questioned whether the small amount of acid in the bone did any harm and attributed the injurious results sometimes noted to the fact that the bone had been so finely divided by the acid and its action was therefore so much quicker, when used in same amounts as ground bone the plants suffered from an overdose of the fertilizer. He therefore believed in using less of the dissolved bone for a given amount of soil than of the ground bone, and less of the finely ground bone than usually used of that which was coarser.

Mr. Broadbeck said he used his bone in solution. He had a tar lined barrel into which he would put two bushels of bone, either coarse or fine, and he would then put in two pounds of concentrated lye and a gallon of water. The lye would soon cut the bone up very finely and after adding two gallons more of water he used a 4-inch pot full of this solution to 50 gallons of water. He used this on his roses and it made them jump. It was powerful stuff, though, and should be used carefully. Mr. Rudd observed that the lye supplied potash, which was also a valuable fertilizer.

Mr. Rudd said he had been experimenting with dissolved rock phosphate and had about made up his mind that it was just as good as the bone meal and a good deal cheaper.

Mr. Broadbeck mentioned the valuable fertilizing properties of tobacco ashes and said he was always careful to save the ashes when using tobacco for fumigating. He scattered them on the surface of his carnation beds and washed them in with the hose and found that they were excellent to give strength to the stems of the flowers.

Mr. Rudd told of a house of plants that didn't start away early and upon discovering that the soil had not been suitably enriched when put in he began feeding much earlier than usual. The plants made a fair growth, but when lifted at the end of the season it was found that they had made hardly any roots. His explanation was that the food being delivered direct to the plant it had no need to send out long roots. The plants were, however, not as satisfactory as those which had been first allowed to make a good lot of roots.

Drainage was referred to and the mention of coal ashes brought from Mr. Rudd the statement that if the ashes were well washed to remove the traces of sulphuric acid that remained in them they were admirable for many uses.

Mr. Broadbeck said he had used a layer of coal ashes on a bench with a layer of soil on top and planted roses in the soil with most excellent results during the winter, but when warm spring weather arrived the bench required such an enormous amount of water that it was a nuisance.

Mr. Rudd said the finest bench of adiantum ferns he had ever seen was one where the ferns were planted out in a thin layer of soil on top of a 5-inch thickness of cinders. The cinders had been well washed and a little lime added to counteract the effect of any sulphuric acid that might have remained in them.

Replying to an inquiry regarding the use of lime, Mr. Rudd said that it had very little direct value as a fertilizer, but its chemical action was frequently of very great value in setting free fertilizing material in the soil that had been insoluble. He had seen it recommended to mix bone meal and lime together for use as a lawn dressing and said it was a very bad recommendation, as the result would be that the lime would liberate the ammonia from the bone and thus one of the most valuable constituents of the bone would be lost.

PHILADELPHIA.

Easter Notes.

The Easter stock of flowering plants grown in and near Philadelphia this season was unsurpassed in quality, and in quantity the proportions far exceeded last year. The sales were enormous and very satisfactory; the late date bringing stock into bloom in good time and the cool weather preventing loss in handling, usually a serious drawback to the profit of a late Easter.

Lilies were less numerous than usual. Japan longiflorums were most grown. The lilies of this variety were, generally speaking, dwarf, with three to five rather small flowers on each plant. There were, however, some grand specimens, very tall, with ten to fourteen large blooms on a single plant. Some good Harrisii were to be seen and many Bermuda longiflorums. The growers have some difficulty in timing the Japan bulbs, which are from three to six weeks slower than the bulbs from Bermuda.

Hydrangeas were grown to perfection; the plants well shaped, bearing large, beautifully colored flowers, hard as nails. The large sizes were numerous and in good demand. Formerly the large sizes found a limited demand. Otaksa and Monstera were the varieties. Thomas Hogg is less seen nowadays.

Spiraea astilboides floribunda was very fine. Robert Craig put four large plants into a 16-inch pan, making handsome specimens which were quickly sold. Compacta was hardly as uniformly flowered. Japonica was but little grown.

Azaleas were in large supply. Mme. Van der Cruyssen still leads as the most popular variety in all sizes.

Bougainvillea Sanderiana was the novelty of the season. W. K. Harris grew it superbly. He also had lilacs and deutzias in good shape. Crimson Ramblers from medium to extra large plants were wonderfully well flowered and sold at most satisfactory prices.

Genistas, probably owing to their poor keeping qualities, were rather scarce. So also lilies of the valley in pots. Tulips in pans were plentiful, but Von Sions were somewhat scarce.

There were many other blooming plants, but the above list represents nine-tenths of the stock offered this Easter.

The retailers found plants more in demand than cut flowers. The supply was fully equal to the demand in both branches, although this might not be true had all the late orders been filled. The department stores and street men sold an immense quantity of stock. Prices generally were very good.

G. ROWER.

BUFFALO.

Business has kept nicely going since Easter and we have not felt that dull thud which sometimes is felt after a big event. Flowers seem now at their very best. Bridesmaids have their most beautiful color and American Beauties are plentiful and grand. Carnations have 30-inch stems and the finest of flowers, violets from cold-frames the richest of color and odor and the size of a silver dollar even if they only bring the hundredth part of it. Sweet peas are here with 15-inch stems, and how it adds to them when they have a little of their own growth with them. Sometimes the lateral growth can be spared.

I hear now that all hands were well pleased with Easter. Vases are filled with pansies in Forest Lawn cemetery, so that will give you an idea of the weather. When we do have spring we do have it. Yesterday (Sunday) was so charming that Mr. Mott, of River-ton, who was sojourning here, said he enjoyed it more than the climate of the Delaware Sands, and Mr. Harry Balsley, also a visitor, enjoyed it greatly.

Twenty thousand people visited the Pan-American grounds. This is as it should be, and a view of the activity of the work going on will convince Buffalo people of the immensity of the undertaking and the glorious thing it is going to be for Buffalo in 1901.

I am glad to tell you that Mr. James Brown, an old Philadelphian, who laid out and planted the ground of the late Mr. G. Fargo some thirty years ago, is now with Professor Cowell at the Botanical Gardens. This should be mutually a very agreeable arrangement.

Mr. Joseph Rolker was in town last Thursday and a very good way to pass him along was to jump on the North Main car and steer him out to the farm of C. F. Christenson, particularly as it was my first visit since Chris had begun operations. He has a fine place just one mile northeast of the city limits, but a trolley by his door; four acres of most excellent land. Material is on the ground for a block of six detached houses, each 125x20. All Lockland lumber and 16x24 glass. High grade carnations will be one of his specialties, but whatever he grows you can depend upon it will be grown well, for if he has had a rest for two years he will soon catch up, for he is a gardener born. What a beautiful spot to visit when you have a leisure half day, and what a genial host.

Right across the road there is a refreshment stand where they have a fine pool table, on which Chris badly laid out Walter Mott, who in his old age is learning the seductive game. And across the road in another direction (for the place is at the crossing of the roads) is a summer garden and attachments. Among the latter two splendid bowling alleys, so differently situated from most places. Surrounded as they are by fruit trees and lawn and honeysuckle bower, they are sure to be a resort for the city boys. We never occupy your pages with bowling scores of late, but we did play one game, and having lately read the average of W. K. Harris we were determined to roll or break another leg. So in the only game the score was: W.

Easter Window Decoration of Mr. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo.

S., 175; G. Troup, 164; G. McClure, 138; C. F. Christenson, 116; J. Rolker, 115. Two lowest paid, but that was only a part of it. There is something about the beauty of the country just now that everything you see or hear has a charm, and we all enjoyed it, for we don't get much recreation just now, I assure you.

What has struck the venerable Mr. Harris of Philadelphia that he should far surpass in his score a lot of young athletes? We have all heard of Abraham Lincoln wanting to know the particular brand that General Grant used. We don't want to know the brand, but we should like to know what elixir of life the deacon has got hold of. We are not envious, we rejoice in his nerve and muscle and skill and see in it a possibility of ourselves returning to something like our old form, but the news from Corfu yesterday that I am for the third time a grandpa to another little girl handicaps us still heavier.

Pan-American News.

The long continued cold weather and frozen ground kept surface work on the grounds in abeyance till nearly the middle of April. The past week's warm weather has produced great activity on the grounds, and Mr. R. Ulrich has now five or six hundred men busy in many parts of the grounds, besides many hundreds on contract work. In spite of frozen ground hundreds of large trees have been planted this winter, including many Lombardy poplars, which will be in keeping with the architecture of some of the buildings.

Work on the lagoons and canals has progressed all winter and is nearing completion. The contracts for several of the largest buildings have been assigned and the foundations are going in. The winter has been favorable for the poplars and willows planted last fall, and by the summer of 1901 the whole grounds will be encircled by a pleasing belt of trees and shrubs entirely hiding from view unsightly fences. The southern one hundred acres of the grounds is the beautiful lake region of Delaware Park. Few, if any, points in the public parks of this country surpass in true landscape beauty our "Gala Water," and its wooded banks and magnificent drives.

In this portion of the grounds, on a commanding site, will be situated the Art Gallery to be used during the Exposition, but a magnificent permanent building, the noble gift of our truly public spirited citizen, J. J. Albright. Mr. Albright's gift in round figures will reach half a million. On the north of the lake will be the New York State building, which at the close of the Exposition will be given for their perpetual use, to the Buffalo Historical Society. The Pan-American including, as it does, some of the handsomest portions of the park, has necessitated some costly improvements, chief of which is a commodious and handsome bridge spanning the lake at its western end. It is thus early very evident to see that in the adornment and embellishment of the grounds and planting in harmony with the style of architecture, the bright tinting of the buildings, and gayness of the flower beds, that the Pan-American in horticultural taste and beauty will surpass any previous effort in this country.

The writer thinks he knows a good thing when he sees it, and of all good things connected with this great undertaking, there is nothing inspires confidence combined with encouragement more than the personality of the Director General, Hon. William I. Buchanan. With marvelous executive ability and a world-wide knowledge of men and affairs, his intimate knowledge of the South American countries, his splendid diplomatic career, and his great record from the World's Fair, makes him pre-eminently the man to carry the Pan-American to a glorious consummation. WM. SCOTT.

WINDOW DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the Easter window decoration of Mr. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo. As usual, the picture does not do the subject justice, it seeming impossible to photograph satisfactorily through a plate glass window.

The cross in the center was of lycopodium with sprays of euphorbia (popularly known as crown of thorns), and Asparagus Sprengeri and bleeding hearts at the base. The garland of longiflorum lilies is readily seen. The window also contained some very pretty specimens of Crimson, White, and Pink Ramblers and various other plants.

The general effect was most excellent and the window was greatly admired.

CHICAGO.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening one new member (Mr. Walter Retzer) was elected and the transportation committee reported progress.

The coal question was brought up for discussion by President Harts-horne, who believed that the members who were large users of coal might find it decidedly to their advantage to get together and make their purchases jointly. The matter was discussed by Messrs. Broadbeck and Rudd, and it developed that the former had been paying much more than the latter for the same kind of coal. Indiana block coal had cost the latter $2.10 a ton, while others had paid prices ranging from $2.35 up to $3.10. The difficulty of securing delivery from the middle December on, always claimed to be due to a shortage of cars, was mentioned, and Mr. Rudd said he had made it a point to put in enough coal in the fall to carry him through into March, by which time there was not apt to be any trouble in securing prompt delivery.

very finely and after adding two gallons more of water he used a 4-inch pot full of this solution to 50 gallons of water. He used this on his roses and it made them jump. The winter has been favorable for the poplars and willows planted last fall, and by the summer of 1901 the whole grounds will be encircled by a pleasing belt of trees and shrubs entirely hiding from view unsightly fences. The southern one hundred acres of the grounds is the beautiful lake region of Delaware Park. Few, if any, points in the public parks of this country surpass in true landscape beauty our "Gala Water," and its wooded banks and magnificent drives.

In this portion of the grounds, on a commanding site, will be situated the Art Gallery to be used during the Exposition, but a magnificent permanent building, the noble gift of our truly public spirited citizen, J. J. Albright. Mr. Albright's gift in round figures will reach half a million. On the north of the lake will be the New York State building, which at the close of the Exposition will be given for their perpetual use, to the Buffalo Historical Society. The Pan-American including, as it does, some of the handsomest portions of the park, has necessitated some costly improvements, chief of which is a commodious and handsome bridge spanning the lake at its western end. It is thus early very evident to see that in the adornment and embellishment of the grounds and planting in harmony with the style of architecture, the bright tinting of the buildings, and gayness of the flower beds, that the Pan-American in horticultural taste and beauty will surpass any previous effort in this country.

The writer thinks he knows a good thing when he sees it, and of all good things connected with this great undertaking, there is nothing inspires confidence combined with encouragement more than the personality of the Director General, Hon. William I. Buchanan. With marvelous executive ability and a world-wide knowledge of men and affairs, his intimate knowledge of the South American countries, his splendid diplomatic career, and his great record from the World's Fair, makes him pre-eminently the man to carry the Pan-American to a glorious consummation.

W.M. SCOTT.

WINDOW DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the Easter window decoration of Mr. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo. As usual, the picture does not do the subject justice, it seeming impossible to photograph satisfactorily through a plate glass window.

The cross in the center was of lycopodium with sprays of euphorbia (popularly known as crown of thorns), and Asparagus Sprengeri and bleeding hearts at the base. The garland of longiflorum lilies is readily seen. The window also contained some very pretty specimens of Crimson, White, and Pink Ramblers and various other plants.

The general effect was most excellent and the window was greatly admired.

CHICAGO.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening one new member (Mr. Walter Retzer) was elected and the transportation committee reported progress.

The coal question was brought up for discussion by President Harts-horne, who believed that the members who were large users of coal might find it decidedly to their advantage to get together and make their purchases jointly. The matter was discussed by Messrs. Broadbeck and Rudd, and it developed that the former had been paying much more than the latter for the same kind of coal. Indiana block coal had cost the latter $2.10 a ton, while others had paid prices ranging from $2.35 up to $3.10. The difficulty of securing delivery from the middle December on, always claimed to be due to a shortage of cars, was mentioned, and Mr. Rudd said he had made it a point to put in enough coal in the fall to carry him through into March, by which time there was not apt to be any trouble in securing prompt delivery.

He was strongly in favor of the proposed plan and held that it would certainly do no harm to try it, while the chances were good that a very material saving might be made to all, providing a large combined order could be placed at one time under a suitable contract as regards delivery. He thought that it ought to result in the saving of an average of 10 to 15 cents a ton. The subject was made the special order for the next meeting and it was decided to invite all growers to the meeting whether members of the club or not.

The Market.

As the result of a falling off in demand and an increase in the supply there is at present an oversupply of most everything and prices have eased up considerably, especially on the lower grades. The fakirs are out on the streets in force. Roses have deteriorated in quality to a marked degree, probably due to the changeable weather we have been having, and carnations have suffered, too. Shipping trade holds up very well and this takes care of most of the prime shipping stock. Local demand has fallen off to a very marked degree.

Lots of good lilies are coming in now, but they move slowly. Lily of the valley is in good demand, but other bulbous stuff goes very slowly and generally at a sacrifice. Smilax is in exceptionally good demand.

A vase of Mr. Witterstaetter's new pink carnation Enquirer was noted at Kennicott's. The flowers were immense, of fine color and borne on exceptionally long, strong stems. It certainly is a splendid variety.

Several shipments of cut flowers to New Orleans were delayed several days by washouts on the railways last week and as a natural result the flowers were worthless when received. The shippers are now wondering whether they will be able to collect from the express companies.

Various Items.

Walter Retzer & Co. have purchased the greenhouses, stock and business of Albert Fuchs. There is nearly 100,000 feet of glass and the stock includes 150,000 palms of salable size, in addition to which there are about 100,000 palm seeds in the beds. The stock is in excellent condition. Mr. Retzer is a graduate of the Shaw Garden, St. Louis, and for the past year has been assistant to Superintendent Simonds, of Graceland cemetery. He is a well informed young man, of a genial disposition, and will be a decided addition to the ranks. He became a member of the Florists' Club at the last meeting. Mr. E. R. Tauch is the foreman in charge of the glass.

Mr. Fuchs will retire from the business and on June 11 will sail for Europe for an extended stay.

The George Wittbold Co. have been doing a very large business and now have $7,000 worth of palms on the way from Belgium to replenish their stock of certain sizes that have been heavily called for.

Mr. C. J. Reardon took unto himself a wife last Tuesday and has also taken a position on the Harvey estate at Geneva, Ill.

The Washington grown hyacinths are now in bloom at Lincoln Park and Mr. Stromback invites members of the craft to inspect them. They are in the round bed at the northwest corner of the main flower garden in front of the conservatory.

Bowling.

The series of eight games to determine the membership of the team to play the St. Louis boys when they pay their promised visit was concluded last Friday evening and below we print the scores in full. The first six will compose the team:

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon. President Ammann called the meeting to order with only ten members present. As a rule the April meetings never were well attended, owing to most of the growers being busy at home with spring sales. About the only important feature that came up was in regard to holding a show this year. The old committee made their final report, showing that $320.19 was on hand to pay prizes, and Treasurer Sanders of the committee was instructed to pay out the above amount at once, which will be done in the next few days. The euchre committee was discharged after making their final report, which read that they cleared $72.75, which amount was added to the show fund.

At this point the question came up, "Shall we have a show this year?" and it was finally settled that the club would hold a show this fall, to last only three days, to be known as a Flower and Fruit Show, and all horticultural products will be included. The club then elected a chairman and manager and your correspondent was again elected to fill that position for the coming show. Mr. Fred H. Meinhardt was elected as vice chairman and manager. The chairman then selected his committee to act with him, which are as follows: Fred C. Weber, C. C. Sanders, Emil Schray, Carl Beyer, J. W. Kunz and Frank Fillmore. The committee has full power to act and make their report at the next meeting of the club.

The question box brought out quite a discussion about grafting roses induced by the article in the Review by Mr. George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo. The arguments were very interesting and we are sorry more were not in attendance. No doubt the question will again be brought up at the next meeting.

It was decided that the next meeting will be a miscellaneous flower show and prizes to the extent of $10 will be offered. A committee of three was appointed to take charge of this show and divide the prize money into five parts. Any one wishing information may write to E. W. Guy, Emil Schray or F. J. Fillmore, who compose the committee. This closed the meeting, after which those present had a good time at the expense of President Ammann, who let the cat out of the bag by telling us that he had been elected alderman of the Second ward in Edwardsville, Ill., his home. Congratulations are now in order.

Various Items.

The past week was a busy one among the West End florists. The usual after Easter weddings developed quite lively and lots of stock of all kinds was used. Although plenty of stock has been coming in prices are still a little high, but the way it's coming in this (Monday) morning prices will no doubt drop a notch or two.

Now that Easter is over the plant men have more room and are crowding every inch of space with spring stock and with plenty of orders on hand for bedding they will have all they can do for the next three weeks.

The gentle April showers and warm weather the past few days have started the trees into leaf and a few days more we will have lilacs and other outdoor flowers on sale.

The market florists report an excellent trade in plants since Easter and prices have kept up above those of former years. The general verdict is that trade in plants bids fair to exceed former years and most growers have made great preparations to meet the demand.

The seedsmen also have been having a fine trade this spring and all report a big business in their line.

Visitors in town were Arnold Ringler, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago; A. S. Halstedt, E. W. Guy and Henry Emundt, Belleville, Ill.; F. J. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and F. W. Ude, Jr., Kirkwood, Mo. All spent a day with us Thursday and attended the club meeting in the afternoon.

Mr. Wm. Clamp, of Harper Place, Webster Grove, will soon leave to make his home in England, his birthplace.

The decorations at the First Presbyterian church, of which I spoke in the last issue of the Review, were made by Mrs. M. M. Ayers, on Grand avenue. Mrs. Ayers is to be congratulated on her fine work.

Miss Newman, who has been ill for the past week, is improving and will be back to business this week.

Fred Weber is also improving and expects to attend to business the latter part of the week. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The usual and expected relapse did not occur to business, there having been a fairly good amount of weddings and a general generous and good natured feeling among the people which has been of much benefit to the florists. The wearing of flowers appears to again be on the increase, and from what we see the condition of trade is anything but deplorable. The plant department in every section is a very busy one, the good weather seems to have come to stay, and in consequence everyone seems to be hustling. The general prospects in this section of the country could not look brighter, and if it hasn't reached you it will do so.

Magnolias, forsythias and other flowering shrubs are in bloom and many of the trees are bursting into leaf, putting on their spring dresses, as it were. Observant folks tell us that the season is late, two or three weeks. 'Tis generally better so on account of the fickleness of our climate. We may get a bit of wintry weather yet; we can never be sure till after the 20th of May, though the chances are that we may see nothing worse than an occasional white frost.

The re-echoes from Easter tell us the most gratifying news. Everyone says he has done well and it is now to be hoped that an endeavor will be made to wipe accounts off the books. If the flower business could be put more on a cash basis it would be more respectable. There is a good deal of contemptible smallness about the man who wears clothes which have not been paid for, and he's no better than a mean parasite who lives on what belongs to others. Let us have a rounding up of old accounts, put better feeling and more pleasure into the business by being under less obligations.

Out west we notice there is a breeze over the weekly payment system. Many wholesalers make an effort to pay weekly or semi-weekly in New York, and it's a puzzle how they can do it when to our knowledge they have to wait for semi-annual and in many cases annual payments from some very high sounding retailers. It's a pity, but more of a disgrace, and should be rectified.

On Saturday afternoon a meeting of horticulturists was held in the lecture hall of the new museum building of the Botanical Gardens, Bronx Park, for the purpose of organizing a New York Horticultural Society. About 30 were present. James Wood of Mount Kisco acted as chairman, and Leonard Barron, secretary. A committee of 25 was named to formulate constitution and by-laws, and five of this committee were empowered to suggest names for officers. The next meeting of the committee will be held in the Berkely Lyceum at 4 p. m., on the 9th day of May. Nothing definite was done. The floricultural trade papers are not in the confidence of the promoters and consequently can only surmise.

We are not in a position to say that it is intended to hand over the buildings and grounds of the Botanical Gardens to the proposed new society, but if it can be organized on the lines of the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania societies, it can be made a medium of great good in this city. New York is society ridden; a consolidation of all the small organizations into one powerful body is a most desirable goal; just at present, though, it is inopportune. We would prefer to see every effort concentrated on making the S. A. F. convention a great success, and if there is any good thing on tap in the way of more useful societies, that event would be a good means of reaching forces which are most desirable. However, it is a free country and a splendid missionary field.

The conservatories at the Botanical Gardens will be finished in about six weeks. They are a magnificent lot of buildings, a credit to the great city they represent. It is to be hoped that the profession will assist in filling them with the best in the land.

On Saturday Mr. Van Brunt delivered a most interesting lecture on "Wild Spring Flowers" and illustrated it with beautiful colored stereopticon views. The lecture was given before an audience of several hundred people in the lecture hall of the museum building, at the Botanical Gardens. Mr. Van Brunt has the largest and finest collection of floral views and pictures in the country, and some effort should be made to have them shown at the coming convention; it would be a great treat.

We regret to announce that, after a lingering illness, Mrs. J. L. Schiller, the wife of J. Ludwig Schiller, seedsmen, of this city, died on Sunday, April 22d. Mr. Schiller had charge of the German exhibit during the World's Fair.

The state intends, so it is reported, to create a school of agriculture and horticulture on the Briar Cliff farms at Scarborough, N. Y.

BOSTON.

There is nothing remarkable taking place here. The advent of spring has made roses of all kinds probably more plentiful than ever before in the history of the business. Prices on them depend largely upon the generosity of the buyer, and fakirs infest every street corner with thousands of them. Nothing else has been overplentiful unless we figure upon a slight accumulation of lilies, mignonette and fine white flowers. Good violets are scarce and carnations remain a little so, with a little deviation from that rule in case of Daybreaks.

Not so much talk of building greenhouse additions as usual at this time of year. Probably prices on materials cause an extra amount of thinking before speaking, but Mr. Walsh predicts an appreciable fall in these prices and he is situated better than any one else to hear reasons for any prophecies he may make.

Not so extended a list of sick ones at present. Lester Mann has been having a hard fight with a very severe case of pneumonia ever since his sickness was reported five or six weeks ago and there is no improvement yet. Mr. Flynn, the indefatigable "Larry" of 67 Bromfield street, after a solid week preceding Easter, gave up Saturday night and has been on the sick list ever since. B. T.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Easter trade was all that could be expected. Most dealers report an increase of 25 to 35 per cent, and a decided increase in the sale of plants. Lilies were in good demand and supply about equal to it. Prices were not advanced very much except on roses. Carnations were in short supply. A few of the growers held stock back until the last moment. As a result the dealers pushed plant sales vigorously and when these growers got around with their stock there was not a very brisk demand for it. We live and learn.

The weather was perfect Friday and Saturday and up to Sunday noon, after which we had a good soaking April shower.

One of the local daily papers has set on foot a plan for beautifying the city that promises most excellent results. Prizes have been offered as follows:

By the Kansas City Times—For the prettiest lawn of 25 feet or over—flowers, shrubbery, parterres, etc., all to be considered, $250.00.

By the Metropolitan Street Railway Co.—For the best floral display, $100.00. For the second best floral display, $50.00.

By the Barber Asphalt Co.—For the best lawn kept by children of 16 years and under, $100.00.

By the Kansas City Electric Light Co.—For the best kept garden on one or two lots, front and back to be considered, $50.00.

By the Doggott Dry Goods Co.—For the largest number of plants from seeds, grown by children under 16 years, $25.00. For the second largest number, $20.00. For the third largest, $15.00. For the four next, $10.00 each, $40.00.

By Crutcher & Welch—Second premium, same conditions as Times' prize, except that competition is limited to lots with frontage of 100 feet or less, $50.00.

By Emery, Bird, Thayer Dry Goods Co.—For best and most artistic bed of foliage plants, arranged in formal design on private lawn, $100.00.

By Thomas M. Spofford—For the best lawn, 100 feet or under, taking especial account of shrubbery, $50.00.

By the Kansas City Star—To the owner or tenant of the neatest home in Kansas City, neither cost of house nor size

EASTER FLOWERS.

[Extracts from the Easter sermon of the Rev. W. J. McKittrick, St. Louis, as reported in the St. Louis Republic.]
"God was very kind to the world when he made it the gift of flowers, pushing the wilderness into bloom, starring the meadows with twinkling constellations, sowing harvests of loveliness in waste places, flowers for baby hands, flowers for marriage festivals, flowers at hospital beds, flowers that are voices of love, flowers that are scattered over graves. Our thoughts today are for the Easter flowers. The churches are fragrant with them. The music of the organ pipes and chanting voices goes rolling over their leaves and petals. We welcome their visit. We are glad to see them.

"We will place a bunch of them on the Bible. Let us wreath this old book with a garland of them. Let us cover it over with whole armfuls of them. Flowers stand for beauty. Their ministry to the earth is a ministry of beauty. And are they not at home on this beautiful Word of God? As they rest there, bits of earthly beauty, yellow, red or pink, can we not imagine them falling into quick fellowship with the great masses of heavenly beauty underneath them? Every law of God is crammed with light and glory. All the divinely recorded provinces of God move through these pages with the stately tread of an armored host.

"Let us hang another garland upon the cross. Bring your fairest roses and lilies to twine about the feet of Jesus as He hangs there. Let that cross be enswathed in the sweet odors of our gratitude. How much do we owe to it? More than any eloquence could express, more than all the choirs of angels could tell forth in most melodious-song, for that cross stands above all the jars and discords of selfishness, above all the strivings and battlings of greed, as heaven's supreme illustration of divine life, of the regnant and controlling principle of the kingdom of God, of that great law of God, of that great law of vicarious suffering and service, which must be appropriated and incorporated into our lives, if we would rise above the beasts that perish and hold kinship with our heavenly Father.

"Let us put another wreath of flowers upon the tomb. This is where our thoughts are circling today. Over that broken grave our hosannas are leaping and mounting. Bunches of flowers, crowns of flowers, pillars of flowers, harps of flowers, white as snow, recalling his purity, red as blood, recalling his victory, steeped in dew, telling of descending blessings, bathed in sunlight, telling of rejoicing hopes, opening buds, proclaiming an opened heaven. Let us scatter them broadcast before that tomb from which he rose, and let us spread them about his feet as he stands once again among the disciples, as he sets their hearts aflame by his renewed communion with them; as he breaks bread with them before the fire of coals, as he sits with them on the shore of the sea.

SAN JOSE, CAL.—An action for maintenance has been begun here by Georgiana M. Braslan against her husband, Charles P. Braslan, the seed dealer. Mrs. Braslan alleges that she intrusted him with $2,500 of her own money, and she has been able to secure the return of but $60 of it for her support and that of their 6-year-old boy. Mrs. Braslan alleges that she is entirely without means. She asks for an allowance of $150 a month pending the maintenance suit.

ONEIDA, N. Y.—Haenlan Bros., who leased the uptown place of J. C. Grems, have bought a small farm near Oneida Castle and expect to build several houses this summer. Eugene Haenlan has been gardener for C. W. Chappell, whose beautiful place on Elizabeth street is the finest in Oneida. All wish them success in their undertaking.

WHEELING, W. VA.—The Wheeling Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $4,000. The incorporators are H. C. Hazlett, A. G. Hubbard, N. G. Hubbard, A. W. Paull and Thos. B. Sweeney.

DETROIT.

Death of John Breitmeyer.

Mr. John Breitmeyer, one of the veteran florists of this city, died at his home in Mt. Clemens on Sunday morning, the 22nd. He was pre-eminently a self-made man, coming to this country as an emigrant. Poor but desirous of bettering himself, he succeeded in accumulating a competency and built up a business as a florist equaled by none in the state. His life was a simple one, with no ostentation, and his chief delight was to meet a few friends and chat. His was an open, sunny nature and his friends were many, for none knew him but to love him. The interment took place at Mt. Clemens on the 24th, the Detroit Florists' Club attending the funeral in a body, some fifty in number. Mr. Breitmeyer was only 65 years of age and the cause of his death was pneumonia.

RAG.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather since Easter has been warm and pleasant, with cool nights. Trade still keeps up and stock is just as scarce as before Easter, especially carnations. A run of funeral work has helped to get rid of any surplus that might have accumulated. Roses are $1 to $1.50 per doz.; carnations, 35 to 50 cents; lilies, $1.50 per doz. Everyone is getting their geraniums into 4s; spreading them out and getting ready for a Decoration Day record-breaking trade.

G. F. C.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Easter sales showed an increase over former years and prices averaged better. Flowering plants of all kinds were in good demand. Azaleas sold exceptionally well. Lilies were not as much in demand as formerly.

In cut flowers carnations took the lead with prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen. Roses took second place, ranging in price from $2.00 to $3.00 per dozen. Violets third, at $2.00 per 100. Bulbous stuff last.

M.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society it was decided to hold only one meeting a month until October, and the third Friday of each month will be the day. Two new members were elected. A lecture will be delivered on May 18th by Dr. Whitmore on "Cultivation of Flowers and Their Influence Upon Society." B.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—A floral society was formed here with officers as follows: C. E. Schafer, Pres.; John Van Loon, Vice-Pres.; John E. Hauser, Sec'y. The next meeting will be held May 24.

MECHANICSBURG, O.—Mr. R. Patrick is no longer in the business here.

LOWELL, MASS.

Messrs. Patten & Roberts report a very satisfactory Easter trade. They had one of the finest and largest displays of lilies ever seen here. They were "crackerjacks." Thursday and Friday it looked as though some might be left on hand, as one of the dry goods houses was selling lilies at cut prices, but nevertheless all were sold and many more could have been disposed of. Cut flowers at this establishment were in abundance and of A1 quality.

In the midst of their Easter trade they had a lot of funeral work. One of the designs worthy of mention was a handsome wreath five feet in diameter, made of valley embellished with violets, which was one of the prettiest designs seen here in a long time. They are now certain that their new store at 8 Mark Square is the finest location in town.

McManmon reports a good trade, having sold plenty of azaleas and rhododendrons.

Whittet & Co. say business was very satisfactory.

All the florists in the town are sharpening their axes for the man who sold the lilies to the dry goods merchant.

M.

THE QUEEN OF EDGELY.

On the 17th inst. the silver medal of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was awarded to the Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, for the new rose Queen of Edgely, the pink sport of American Beauty.

The Floral Exchange has recently contracted for 25,000 feet of glass to be used for growing their new rose. One of the houses will have thirteen beds and will be called the Colonial house, each bed being named after one of the thirteen colonies.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Minnesota Botanical Society was organized at a meeting held here April 14. A committee consisting of E. M. Freeman, Mrs. E. F. Elliott and Miss Grace Hayes was appointed to arrange for a summer meeting and excursion at Minneapolis and Lake Minnetonka.

CANASTOTA, N. Y.—Frederick A. Taylor reports Easter trade as excellent. Could have sold more flowers if he had had them, though he added two more houses to his plant during the past year. One of these was 16x80 and the other 10x80.

PLEASANT HILL, MO.

The Kellogg Opera House, erected by Mr. George M. Kellogg, the florist, was opened to the public on Easter Sunday, with a sacred concert. The Kansas City Times prints the following report of the event:

Pleasant Hill, Mo., April 15.—The new Kellogg opera house, one of the handsomest country theatres in interior Missouri, which has just been temporarily completed, was formally opened this afternoon and night with a union Easter service, in which all the churches in Pleasant Hill and the people of the entire county participated. The Kellogg is a substantial brick building of modern architecture 85x100 feet in dimensions, four stories high, including the basement. It has a stage depth of twenty-six feet, four boxes, capacious balcony and a gallery above. The seating capacity of the house is 1,000 persons. The basement is divided into a ball and reception room, a banquet hall with fully equipped kitchen attached. The interior furnishing and finishing are said to be the handsomest of any theatre in the Kansas City territory, and when the building is completed, at a cost of $12,000 it will be surrounded by a park. The building was crowded both afternoon and evening yesterday, and there were large delegations from every town in the county beside Kansas City, Independence, Lee's Summit and Holden. Many could not get in. There was a musical programme composed exclusively of sacred numbers contributed by portions of every congregation in the town. A chorus of sixty voices was assisted by the audience in singing patriotic hymns. There were quartets, piano numbers, vocal selections, etc., W. W. Hunt, a well-known Kansas City tenor, being one of the vocalists.

The night programme was similar in character to that of the afternoon, both being under the management of Mrs. Talbot Winship, a local music teacher. Despite the heavy rain the house was again crowded. The next attraction at the new Kellogg in "Quo Vadis" by the Auditorium stock company on the night of May 7.

DENVER, COLO.

The following scores were rolled by the Denver florists Tuesday night, April 17th. Berry was not up to the mark and Scott had to go it alone:

	1	2	3	Av.
Philip Scott	199	212	231	214
John Berry	183	182	155	173 1-3
Ed. Mauff	165	166	131	154
Ed. Emerick	172	163	124	153
A. M. Lewis	166	140	122	142 1-3
Geo. Zimmer	110	119	141	123 1-3
	P. S.

WARSAW, IND.—Thomas Lewis, florist at Lakeside and Winona Parks for several years, and residing at Warsaw, some time ago lost his eyesight. This calamity has preyed upon him until his mind has given way under the strain.

FAIRBURY, ILL.—Kring Bros. will erect another greenhouse this summer. It will be 30x125 and will cost, including heating apparatus, about $1,500. The glass is already on the ground.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.—The foundation for the new greenhouse for the large hotels here has been laid. Head Gardener Bilton of the east coast hotels will be in charge of the new house, and will use it for caring for and propagating palms and plants for the hotels.

ELM CITY A Grand New White.... Carnation

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini, in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

Genevieve Lord The Peer of All Light Pink Carnations.

Speaking from a dollar and cent standpoint the above is literally true. There may be some larger, but when put to the test of an exacting commercial fire, none will stand the test and bring in the returns like Genevieve Lord. Its color is the kind that sells at sight. Stem the best of any carnation. A perfect, non-bursting calyx. Beautiful distinct form. In fact it has nearly everything that is wanted in a pink carnation. Customers recognize it at a glance, describing it as "that beautiful pink on the long stem." Prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock all sold prior to that date.

PRICES: Doz., $2.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $75.00

Catalogue-free to all applicants, containing complete description of the above as well as all the big new ones, at introducers' prices; the best of last year's novelties and standard sorts, also a fine stock of new and standard sorts of chrysanthemums.

The "Novelty" of Novelties for 1900. New—"Mrs. Kate Gray"—Canna. A magnificent hybrid resulting from a cross of ItallaxMad. Crozy. The color is a rich shade of orange scarlet overlaid with gold, a superb coloring which in open sunlight is simply dazzling. The Form is an ideal of the Crozy type of bloom, the petals being very broad and overlapping, measuring 2 1/2 to 3 inches wide, while the individual flowers are from 6 to 7 inches across. The Texture of the flowers is all that could be desired; they partake of the nature of the pollen parent or Crozy race in this respect, and withstand our hottest summer suns without wilting. The foliage is a bright glossy green, equal to a Musa in size and substance and forms a beautiful foil to the gigantic trusses of bloom. The height of the plant is 6 to 7 feet, the growth is luxuriant to a degree, but very compact; the massive foliage, giant trusses, and enormous individual flower give the plant a noble tropical appearance. It is the only Canna of its kind in existence, and absolutely surpasses all others; its intrinsic value will make it a leading standard sort for years to come. Prices.—Strong roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz; $25.00 per hundred. Terms strictly cash with order, no exceptions. Stock limited; orders filled with strict rotation. Address Howard & Smith, Nurserymen, P. O. Box 484, Los Angeles, Cal.

CLOVER SEED.

Toledo clover seed dealers are more than satisfied with the results of the year 1899 and indications point to a still better business with better prices in 1900.

The following shows the amount of receipts and shipments of clover seed at this point for 1899, as compared with the previous year:

RECEIPTS.

1898	118,940 bags
1899	131,760 bags

SHIPMENTS.

1898	90,000 bags
1899	157,830 bags

Increase 67,830 bags

Prices were much higher in 1899 than in the previous year. The following is a comparative table of prices to-day, as against one year ago:

	1898.	1899.
Prime cash seed	$4.67½	$5.62½
No. 2 cash	3.10	4.65

So far the shipments have been largely for export. The scarcity of prime cash this season is one cause for the prevailing high price of that article. The crop was large but poor in quality. No. 2 cash comprises the bulk of the seed received here. Home dealers have not yet begun buying—waiting for a drop in prices.

As the decline did not come before the first of the year, it is not likely to come now. Local dealers look for a further advance, as the home demand is now in order. Stocks of seed on hand to-day are about 80,000 bags, as against 65,000 this time last year.—Toledo (O.) Bee, Jan. 4.

FLOWER LOVERS.

There are many people in the world who like flowers; there are some people who love them, and these constitute a class unto themselves. The difference is this: Those who simply like flowers are quite satisfied that other people shall have the trouble of growing them; those who love flowers find delightful recreation in cultivating them, in caring in touch with the growing plants and in petting them. As a rule, women love flowers better than men love them, but there are many flower-lovers among men.—Richmond (Va.) Times.

TILE BENCH BOTTOM.

Mr. M. C. Clay, Greenford, O., writes us describing a tile bench bottom made of ordinary 4-inch tiles that have been slit in two lengthwise. An incision is made on opposite sides before the tile are burned and the two halves separate readily afterward. He lays these side by side across the bench, convex side up, and says they make a very satisfactory bench bottom, giving perfect drainage and only half as many tile required to cover the same surface as would be the case were whole tile used. He writes that L. Templin & Sons, Calla, O., have tried this style of bench bottom and are well satisfied with it.

SOME REMINDERS.

Under the heading "A Few Reminders," the Central New York Horticultural Society speaks as follows to members and the general public:

What are you doing for those around you? What can you do for others through our Society?

Why not join hands with us in our endeavor to make this world a little brighter?

Ours is an instructing and entertaining, as well as an educational work.

Our one aim is to uplift and benefit the people.

This is not a corporation organized for individual profit.

We want to teach the masses to love and appreciate the good in Nature, for Nature's work is marvelous beyond compare.

Try to make two blades of grass to grow where only one is growing.

Love the Earth as well as your fellow man.

Give to them both a goodly share of your time.

This will result in many flowers to cheer you and comfort others.

We need your financial and moral support.

We can be a blessing to this community. Is it too much to ask of you?

Have you paid your annual dues?

Are you a member? If not, why not?

We want you to be one of us and one with us.

Remember we pass this way but once. Let us strew the pathway with roses as we journey on.

We will be more likely to have them on our bier.

Bring all the brightness into the world you can. It will make the other world a great deal brighter also.

This was printed on a slip for general circulation, and it seems to us to be an excellent move. A society that invites membership from the general public should not fail to keep the people informed of its aims and objects.

The headquarters of this progressive society are in Syracuse, N. Y., and the officers are: S. T. Betts, president; N. H. Chapman, secretary; David Campbell, treasurer.

WATERVILLE, ME.—H. R. Mitchell & Son are preparing to add several new houses this season. They had an excellent Easter business.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.Plant Registration.

Nathan Smith & Son register seedling canna "The Empress" (Philadelphia x Gloriosa); flowers bright crimson; large green foliage; height two and one-half feet.

John H. Dunlop registers rose "Lady Dorothea," a sport from "Sunset," originated with Mr. Dunlop in the spring of 1895. Color, outer petals deep peach; pink to Indian red at base; inside, soft flesh color, deepest in mid-winter. Other characteristics, as to color, vigor of growth, etc., identical with the parent, but omitting the objectionable feature of malformed buds at any season of the year. Can be disbudded to center bud, which is always perfect.

Lager & Hurrell register Cattleya labiata "Mrs. W. C. Squires." Flowers large, sepals and petals broad and massive, of a dark rosy mauve. Lip very large, with fringed margins, the expanded portion crimson purple, posterior part stained with straw buff and crimson purple. The unusual flowering season of this variety is due to the plant having been imported late in fall. WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

THE "ROSE OF HELL."

"The rarest flower in the world" has again been found, this time by a newspaper correspondent who writes from Los Angeles, Cal. According to the story, two prospectors have brought specimens from a mountain in the interior of Guatemala, and the flower was given its sulphuric name by the natives, because it grows near the crater of a living volcano, which they suppose to be the entrance to the infernal regions.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Arrangements are being made for the holding of a convention in this city which shall decide upon a national flower. There will be two delegates from each state in the union.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 324 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York City.

GENTLEMEN.—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

P. S.—Kindly book my order for another boiler. I will let you know later when to deliver it. J. S.

Commercial Violet Culture.

By Prof. B. T. GALLOWAY, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. This work is thoroughly practical and fully discusses the subject in a clear and comprehensive way. It has received the highest commendation from specialists and from the Horticultural Press. Illustrated with over 60 plates. 224 pages. Price postpaid, $1.50.

THE WATER GARDEN. By Wm. Tricker, the standard authority of America on Aquatic Plants. The cultivation of Water Lilies, etc., is becoming more popular every year, and every florist should be in a position to extend his business in this line. This book is very exhaustive, is magnificently illustrated. Price postpaid, $2.00.

RESIDENTIAL SITES and ENVIRONMENTS. By Joseph Forsyth Johnson. The knowledge to be gained from this book is of the greatest importance to florists, particularly where it relates to the laying out of grounds about country homes, both large and small. The author is a practical man and the contents of the book may be understood. Illustrated by over 50 plans and diagrams. Price postpaid, $2.50.

HOUSE PLANTS and How to Succeed With Them. By M. L. Hillhouse. This book is written for amateurs, but florists can use it very profitably among their retail customers. It should be on sale in every establishment. Write for trade discount. Retail price postpaid, paper 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual. OTT BROWN. Cape May City, N. J.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual. C. J. REARDON. Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

A Chat with the Country Retailer.

It is quite a while since we had a chat with the country retailer. We know he's busy now, but we want to remind him of a few important things. Grow only the best, and grow it well. Nurserymen tell us it has been one of their best seasons; an enormous quantity of all manner of stock has been and is being sold and the small florists have been generous purchasers. This looks like prosperity and confidence in the future, but don't buy with a view of selling everything. Plant a few fine things around your own place. Let the people see that you know what a good thing is. Needn't bother with the wee, small microscopic weeds; they belong to the botanical gardens; recommend and plant the varieties of herbaceous flowers which give most satisfaction and which will also furnish a succession of bloom suitable for cutting.

Many of the best flower buyers live the greater part of the year in their country residences, and even if your place is a distance from theirs they are liable to see what you have if it's worth noticing, and to see beauty is to admire or buy. Therefore every country florist should have an abundance of flowers around his place at all times. This can be had by planting such as Irises, paeonies, rudbeckias, hollyhocks, foxgloves, tall-growing phloxes, delphiniums, pompon chrysanthemums, Canterbury bells, dwarf cannas, dahlias (especially the cactus or star varieties), salvias, asters, stocks, antirrhinums, cosmos, sweet peas, mignonette—the variety is endless; we cannot make a catalogue of our paper; you ought to know the good things; we seldom see them where they should most be.

Many of the very best flowers can be had at a small cost and they pay for themselves tenfold, not alone in the pleasure and brightness they infuse into your life, but in most cases the amount of lucre they put into your pocket. Yes, dig up that bad-looking section along the road, around your house, or along the end of your greenhouses, and make it produce a little of the best of everything from now till next winter. We would like to see more roses grown in the garden and feel sure they could be made to pay.

Roses in pots or flats will sell well next Christmas, or any time during the winter. You must plant them now and grow them so all summer in order to force them into bloom in time. Try a few Ramblers, Magnas, Luizets, Jacques. Magnas will give you perhaps the best results for Christmas, but many other varieties will pay during the season. Good flowering plants sell well at other times besides Easter and Xmas, and the man who has them for sale can dispose of other stock with them.

Many florists who grow geraniums, etc., for the market have their plants grown to such a high pitch by the use of plant physic that when they change hands they usually go back and give disappointing results. This method of growing plants, whilst it may be of temporary or immediate benefit to the grower, is bad and condemnable. A plant should never be degraded and made like an opium fiend. When poor persons buy a geranium to grow in their window or plant on a grave, give them something honestly grown. The tendency of the times seems to wend its way among labyrinths of mysterious concoctions named chemical plant foods. The plant man of to-day imagines he must first be a chemist and last of all a judge of good soil. Instead of leaving experiments to government schools, every greenhouse has its maniac, victim or subject, and the result is pitiable. Many people wonder why their plants look bad or die soon after purchase, and even the florists themselves are puzzled, not knowing that the poor thing is but a superficiality—a victim to some crank's craze for chemics.

The very same thing applies to cut flowers. You may succeed in growing your carnations or 'mums larger and with more color, but they don't keep so well as those which are the product of good soil and intelligent methods of cultivation. If you value your trade, don't buy from the grower who physics his plants continually.

Then again, go shy on newly imported stock. We know the arguments regarding its cheapness and the convenience of not having to grow it so long, yet all the same we say steer clear of it in most cases, and in all cases be sure that it's alive when you buy it.

Now is the time to think of and prepare for the flowers you will want in summer and autumn. Just look over your stock and see if you've got all the good things. You might need variety; in any case it is often desirable for your trade, but it is bad policy to plant out a lot of everything for stock merely because you happen to have it on hand; it will only usurp the place of better things later on. Whilst novelties may be expensive, it isn't wise to let the best be old before you buy.

McIntosh's.

There is a growing demand for continuous blooming roses, which of course are the teas and hybrid teas, so when you dig up your stock at present under glass cut it well back and plant it out in some moist location; it's the kind of stock people often want for immediate effect. If you have a catalogue trade and can purchase a lot of this kind of stock cheap, plant it out and winter it, you can get good big prices for it next spring; or if you sell it next fall give special instructions as to its protection in front yard, deserves much praise; he is a valuable missionary in floriculture. The country florist, who may be said to work and sleep with his hand on the spade (and with all due respects to Mr. Markham, we consider the man with the spade more valuable to the world than "The Man with the Hoe"), should always be ready to either attend to his neighbors' small gardens or give advice on their formation and care. We have referred to bad or dead seeds before; perhaps we're caustic in such references, but plain language is best. To sell a package of dead seed to anyone is nothing but the worst kind of robbery; it is not only taking money for nothing, but it is wasting time and exertion and causing bitter disappointment. So sell nothing but good seed.

abilities required to properly fill a vase or window box. Old soil should never be used, and again only such materials as will give most satisfaction. If contrasts are desired, and they are often best, it's an easy matter to produce them, for there's an extensive collection of stock to choose from. Variegated funkia is valuable for above kind of work. It is much used in New York.

The country florist has now an abundance of good material on hand or within easy reach for wedding decorations, and whenever possible spring blossoms should be made a leading feature. Forsythia and other shrubs are in full glow and very fine work can be done with them. Apple, peach, pear and cherry flowers are plentiful this year, and whilst we don't mean by using them to destroy valuable fruit trees, there are times when the flowers may pay you better than the fruit, and a careful cutting may do little damage.

We must say a word or two to the city florist. There are thousands of half or wholly dead plants scattered all over the cities as the result of Easter purchases. Be careful and diplomatic when asked about their care. Of course you will have to take those from your most important customers, and if they are not special specimens you might better lose track of them and send fresh stock in return. Don't take a plant back unless it will pay you to do so. A grower's greenhouses should not be a hospital for incurables, and you harm the trade to assist in making it so.

Flowers are very cheap now and generosity will not be expensive. A small flower or bunch of flowers given to a child may win the custom and good wishes of its parents. It is miserly to buy barely what you need to fill an order or to expect a full cent for every quarter cent you spend. When flowers are cheap take a look around and note where a few will do most good. The hospitals are the places for left-over stock; a flower is seldom too old to cheer the poor and weary.

IVERA.

severe climates. Many of the sorts, such as Meteor, La France, Victoria, Bride, Perle, Bridesmaid, etc., will stand almost anywhere if protected. A plant which gives a vast amount of pleasure all summer surely deserves consideration for a short period in winter. Neglect or indifference in this regard is ignorance or ingratitude of a very base kind; plant life is like animal life in many ways, especially as regards care and protection.

Quite a large business is being done this year in the planting of small gardens both in city and country. The city florist in most cases finds this kind of work a nuisance, simply because he's either incapable of doing it or doesn't know its importance. The man who creates a beauty spot in the heart of a dismal city, whether it be on the window sill or in the back or Pansies are very good this year. They should have been planted long ago, but it is not too late; better effects can be made by separating the colors.

Don't be in any hurry to put out geraniums and other kinds of tender stock, for if such get chilled by cold weather it requires a long time for them to recuperate.

Vases and window boxes will be more popular than ever this year, and good heavy vines, such as ivy, variegated, vinca, etc., is not overplentiful. Somehow growers don't pay sufficient attention to the cultivation of good ivies. In the spring they are not large enough and in the fall they, on account of being recently "lifted" from the field, are not fit for use.

There is quite a lot of art and other

NEW YORK STORES AT EASTER.

No. 4 is an interior glimpse of McIntosh's store. You will notice that with a few exceptions the plants are trimmed with the tinted papers and tied with narrow edged gauze and figured ribbons. The papers have a semi-woebegone appearance and would look better if confined to pot covering.

No. 5 is a group of plants in Hanft Bros' store. Here baskets, and scarcely any ribbons, prevail, and they look none the worse for it. The market badly needs a cheaper and better colored type of basket.

No. 6 shows a portion of the interior of Lucatos' very pretty store on Columbus avenue. Lucatos is the only Greek florist in New York who commands and deserves any respect. He is an educated gentleman and we are glad of his friendship, but we wish to tell him that we don't like the way in which his man puts skirts on his plants. Those 1849 flounces don't look right today; they are obsolete; the less crinoline used 'round a rose plant, like a girl, the better it and she looks. IVERA.

CARNATIONS.

Mr. E. Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill., believes in garden culture rather than field culture for carnations and also in watering the plants in the summer time. Where he is located there is about 12 inches of light black soil on a heavy clay sub-soil. It dries very hard and then come deep cracks that admit a good deal of air to the soil, and cultivation alone will not prevent rapid evaporation.

His plants are in beds, four rows of plants to a bed, the rows 12 inches apart and the plants 10 inches apart in the rows. Cultivation is entirely by hand. He has water mains all through his carnation field and for watering in dry weather he uses common lawn sprinklers. He holds that if not watered in the field the plants would not only suffer from dryness, but would be eaten up by red spider.

The watering is done at night, a man moving the sprinklers to another section when one is thoroughly soaked. The sprinkler he uses will reach across two beds. He gets his water from an artesian well and a steam pump is used to give the water considerable force, so that it falls on the ground as fine spray. When the ground has dried sufficiently after a watering, the crust is hoed off, and when thoroughly dry another good soaking is given.

White Cloud is such a strong grower with him that it is sometimes inclined to grow too large, and when this is apparent he skips this variety occasionally when watering, which gives a sufficient check to keep it within bounds.

The soil he uses in the houses is prepared as follows: In the fall he plows virgin sod and scatters over it air-slaked lime (just enough to whiten it), to make it sweet. In the spring he makes his compost heap of layers of sod and cow manure, adding a little bone meal to the manure. By this time the lime has about ceased acting and no harm is done to the bone. When this soil is placed in the bench he adds more bone. For later feeding he uses liquid from sheep manure, and to his tank of liquid, which contains 256 cubic feet, he occasionally adds a 6-inch potfull each of sulphate of ammonia and muriate of potash, or nitrate of soda and sulphate of potash. He relies upon the potash to give strength of stem. He thinks the chemicals could be added to the soil in the first place if done long enough before the plants were put in to allow time for the chemicals to first become thoroughly dissolved. He finds that it is the chemical action that takes place while they are dissolving that works injury to the plants.

-As to varieties, White Cloud has been the best paying white with him the past season. Hill has been a steady and continuous bloomer, but the stems rather weak in mid-winter. He finds that Hill does best in a light soil, while White Cloud likes a heavier one.

America has been larger and of better form and color than Crane with him, though Crane has the best stem and produces most freely. The great drawback to Crane with him has been stem rot.

Mary Wood is a grand flower and would be the ideal white were the flowers produced more freely.

With him Joost has been a good and continuous bloomer, but the flowers cannot be classed as fancy. Some buyers say that it goes to sleep quickly, though others maintain that it is a satisfactory keeper. He is inclined to think that dealers would find all carnations better keepers if careful to keep them away from draughts.

He grows Bratt, but finds that it sells readily in limited quantities only.

Melba has a fine color in winter, but with him it has been a weak grower and shy bloomer. Wellesley has been discarded as valueless. He has grown Scott up to this year, but will now drop it.

He would like to get a carnation with the color and stem of Jubilee and the form of Mary Wood or White Cloud.

He does not think that stem-rot is the result of a superabundance of moisture. In fact, he calls it dry-rot instead of stem-rot. With a light soil and only four or five inches of it in the bench, he thinks the plants are much more apt to have too little water than too much. He keeps the soil on the wet side rather than the dry side. He has never watered his carnations overhead. A dry atmosphere and plenty of water at the roots is his rule.

He says the cuttings and plants sent out by introducers of new varieties are usually a disgrace to those who send them out. And he sees no reasonable excuse for such careless propagation. He believes that the usefulness of many promising new sorts is killed in this way. He notes a few honorable exceptions and says he always has more faith in new varieties sent out by certain firms because he knows he will get stock that has some value to start with. A reputation of this sort is becoming more valuable yearly.

THE AMERICAN LOTUS.

The American lotus (Nelumbium luteum) is one of America's floral giants, with its golden blossoms 8 inches and its glossy leaves 12 inches in diameter. It is purely American, no yellow lotus having been found in any other part of the world, and no other variety is found in America. It is met occasionally most all over the United States, but is most frequent from Kentucky southward.

Great fields of it were under cultivation by the Indians on the middle waters of the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers at the time of settlement by the whites. Old settlers now living in those sections can remember when the Indians, after having been driven out, would come back and gather all the seed they could carry away. The seeds were used largely by them for beads, and also as an article of food, under the name "yonker-pins." They were also called "70-year acorns," because it was thought they required 70 years in which to germinate. It is evident that some of the tribes used the root also as food, while some portion of the plant, known only to the Indian, was used as a medicine. The Indian's arrow was modeled almost exactly after the long flower spikes, his canoe was a crude imitation of the petals, and his war club was a representation of the large seed pod. So, while the sacred lotus of the Nile has had its worshipers and the sacred lotus of the Ganges its votaries, the sacred lotus of the Mississippi has had at least its admirers.

In all respects, except color, it is identical with the Oriental nelumbiums. When it first opens the petals are a bright lemon yellow, growing paler each day until almost white. It approaches the Egyptian lotus in size, but is somewhat more globular. Under cultivation it behaves similar to N. album grandiflorum, becoming more "dwarfed" and flowering more freely in limited quarters.

It submits to more rough handling than any lotus, and a smaller percentage of the roots die when transplanted. Last spring we threw some surplus tubers into a cement tank in which there was no soil. They at once started growth and produced an abundance of foliage, with considerable flowers, while floating in the clear water. I have never noticed this of any of the other lotuses. They usually throw out a few puny leaves and then decay.

Yellow is the rarest color in water lilies, and this, being the only yellow lotus, holds a place that cannot be filled by a substitute.

THRIPS.

Mr. E. Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill., says that the English insecticide XL All is certainly effective in combating the thrips, but that it is altogether too expensive to be used regularly.

It cost him about $5 to fumigate a house 18x125, and as it should be done at least once a week, it runs into money rapidly. He had this insecticide analyzed and found that a large part of it was chemically pure nicotine. This is a very expensive ingredient and probably the manufacturer could not afford to sell the preparation at much less than the price he asks.

Where thrips have got a firm hold and are doing serious damage he believes it would pay to use XL All a few times to get them under control, and they can then be kept down by Nikoteen applied regularly and persistently. He evaporates the Nikoteen by the hot iron method. He finds the Nikoteen just as effective as the tobacco extract and cleaner to use. He would like, though, to learn of some method whereby the fumes of tobacco or nicotine may be kept in the atmosphere all the time, without the objectionable plan of strewing tobacco stems around and frequently renewing them. The tobacco extract and Nikoteen are effective only when evaporated by considerable heat. What is wanted is something that will be effective when diffused by the heat of the steam or hot water pipe, as is sulphur in the rose houses.

In fumigating with the Nikoteen for thrips he always uses it two nights in succession. One application seems to merely benumb the insects, but the second one following closely behind the first carries the effect to the killing point. But there are always some that escape, and the fumigation must be kept up regularly every week. The thrips with him confine their attacks almost entirely to his American Beauty roses.

Mr. Buettner tried the Persian insect powder as recommended some time ago and doesn't care to try it again. It had practically no effect on the thrips, but did have a very bad effect on the roses. They looked afterward as though they had been heavily over-fumigated with burned tobacco stems.

PHILADELPHIA ROSE NOTES.

It is very interesting to note the changes in the methods used in cultivating the rose under glass commercially.

Our grandfathers used to grow them in solid beds in even span houses, producing many fine roses, as they were then considered, in fall and in spring, but not very many in winter. We have gone through a great variety of changes, both in the houses and in their arrangement indoors. Now, curiously enough, some of our growers are drifting back to the old methods, or something very like them.

Three of the prettiest houses around Germantown today are solid beds. Two belong to Joseph Bevis, situated at his new place on the Limekiln pike. Each house is 150x20 feet, contains three beds each, 5 feet wide, and four walks. One house is planted in Bridesmaid, the other in Bride. The plants are in splendid condition, with plenty of stout, heavy canes bearing large buds. These houses produced the first prize winners at the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The third house belongs to Charles

E. Meehan, Slocum and Musgrove streets. It is planted with Kaiserin and La France. It is a so-called summer house, just producing its first crop, and the quantity of buds in sight is worth a visit to see. The general plan of the house is somewhat similar to the other, the walks being next the sides.

These houses certainly produce splendid results, skilfully managed, and will well repay careful study.

MIGNONETTE.

The photograph of the three pots of mignonette was taken a few days before Easter. You might merely say that when you meet with success why deviate from the method that gained success, but these mignonette were not the all round success that we expected. The whole batch of about 200 was fine. The 2-ft. rule suspended over the center one will give the size better than any description and they were green to the bottom. They were not tied out in the least. The string that encircled them was merely cut, allowing them to fall loosely apart.

They were handsome, but they did not appeal to the many, as we had to ask $1.50 to $2.50 each. As I remarked in a previous issue, the people of most refined taste wanted one, but that class is far outnumbered by those who want a showy plant, and we had about fifty left. These are not a total loss, as there is a dollar's worth of flowers or more on each.

Why I do not call them an unqualified success is because they were too large, and to make them profitable we had to ask a rather high figure. Had they been half the size, equally well flowered and in 5-inch pots, they would have sold by the hundreds at 75 cents each, and that is what we shall aim to have another year.

The plants pictured were sown in a 5-inch pot early in August and several plants thinned out to the three strongest. We intended to flower them in that pot, but they grew so strongly that we had to shift them in November into 7 and 8-inch. They were pinched in October and again in January. During the whole time they were on a bench very near the glass, very light and very cool, often not over 38 degrees during cold weather.

My plan after this will be to sow in 5-inch pots in September, making the soil very solid. It cannot be too firm, and the colder they are, in reason, during the dark days of winter the stouter and stronger they will be.

It may not be generally known what a fine plant for the house the mignonette is. One of these in the office of Director Taylor, Ellicott Square, has kept in perfection for four weeks, and since that time it has been gazed at by all the civilized and semi-civilized nationalities of the world and heard many variations of lingo, but still retains its freshness and sweetness.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Chronicle.

DRACAENA VICTORIA.—This is an importation from Brazil, and resembles D. Lindenii, but retains its golden variegation as it grows older. The recurved lanceolate leaves taper to each end, and are of a bright golden yellow, with a central band of green, marked with narrow, cream-colored linear streaks. It is one of the handsomest of its class.

WIREWORMS.—Many cultivators have lately used the ordinary commercial flour of mustard against wireworm, and as this substance will not injure plants, it would be well to dig in a good dressing of this. The worms would be very likely to destroy your bulbous irises if you take no means to get rid of them.

this season it carries no fewer than 290, and measures $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet across. I think this close pruning worth repeating, even if one has to wait two years, as the quantity of flower and intense blue is the admiration of all who have seen it.

AZALEA INDICA GRAFTED ON RHODODENDRON COELESTINUM.

—At an evening meeting, on February 12 last, of the Horticultural Society of Vienna, Herr Hofgartner Bayer surprised those present with a magnificent collection of flowering azaleas which were grafted on Rhododendron coelestinum. By employing this species as a stock for the azaleas, strong growth is obtained, together with much freedom to flower, and great endurance in the flower. The adaptability of azaleas on this stock for forcing purposes is not impaired.

Syringa pubescens, Turcz., is the only one with violet anthers; that S. Emodi is the latest to come into leaf, and the only one with protruding stamens; that all syringas may be divided into two very distinct groups, in one of which the inflorescences are borne directly on the wood of the preceding year (S. pubescens, oblata, vulgaris, persica and dubia), while in the other they appear at the extremity of the shoots of the same year (S. Emodi, Bretschneideri and Josikaea).

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

—Good sturdy cuttings sprang up from the base of the old plants; these, having been subjected to a short rest, were duly cut down; upon the old plants being placed in a high temperature, strong suckers were plentiful; these were the ones selected, and they proved to be the best. Cuttings of Mignonette grown by William Scott.

ROSES FOR A PENNY-IN-THE-SLOT.—M. Albert Maumene describes, in a recent number of La Nature, a new variety of the automatic distributing machine, from which roses can be obtained. The idea originated in Germany, and the falling of ten pfennige ensures the movement of a rose from its position behind a glass screen to a place where it can be reached and drawn out by the purchaser. The machine is stocked every day or every alternate day with fresh flowers placed on view in little tubes of water, whence they move, as said above, to a place where they can be obtained by those desiring them.

HYDRANGEA HORTENSIA.—I forward a head or two of the above, and think you will agree with me that the blue tint is far more intense than what is usually met with. The plant stands somewhat in the shade, and we always find that plants so situated are a far better blue than those in a sunnier aspect. Two years ago I hard pruned this bush, as it was trespassing over the walk too much; last year it only had ten or a dozen heads, while ROSE SOILS.—The National Rose Society has obtained a series of analyses by Dr. Bernard Dyer, of certain selected soils on which roses of exhibition quality have been grown for years past. The result, so far as the soil is concerned, is negative, and it is evident that the factors are numerous and complex, and do not permit anyone to say with accuracy: "Ah! so-and-so's soil is much better than mine; no wonder he can grow roses." Whilst soil is not without its influence, it is evident that many other circumstances must be taken into consideration.

DISTINGUISHING THE SPECIES OF SYRINGA.—M. L. Henry has lately published in Le Jardin a table summing up very succinctly and clearly the marked distinctive characteristics of the species of lilac properly so called, now known. Their determination can now be rapidly arrived at, and with certainty. Certain peculiarities which appear not to have been previously noted, are indicated in this work, and deserve to be remembered. Thus, the facts that, of all the lilacs, these were, during the last week in May, inserted singly in small pots (2-inch), plunged in the propagating case, where a steady bottom heat was maintained. Rooting having taken place, the small plants were stood upon a shelf near the glass in the same house in direct sunlight, the usual potting being taken in hand as soon as the plants required it; and the plants were again placed upon the shelf in the same position, which was one facing southwest. The potting materials at this stage consisting of equal parts of peat and good fibrous loam, with a large addition of sand, ample drainage being provided, the growth became both rapid and free. A thin stake inserted in the center of each pot allowed the growths to be looped up readily, and the plant being naturally of a branching habit, no stopping or pinching was necessary. As the plants became too large to remain on the shelf, they were transferred to a warm pit, the growth not being checked. They were fed occasionally with artificial manure, in the proportion of a tablespoonful to a gallon of water. The result is that the foliage has quite enveloped the 4½-inch pots with a mass of flower, which brightens up the show-house considerably.

POT-BOUND ANTHURIUMS.—Many plants continue to flower abundantly, though they are pot-bound, if supplied with moisture and other requirements. We have found no plant do better than Anthurium Scherzerianum, and its varieties. We have some old plants in capital health, full of vigor, which have not been shifted for some ten or a dozen years, but each season they have flowered profusely from February until August. They have been given a surface dressing with bone-meal and fibery peat before flowering each year. Some varieties of cypripediums and cymbidiums have also succeeded with us under similar treatment. They may be watered liberally under such conditions without fear of doing damage to the roots, but neglect of same is most injurious.

A LESSON ON AFFORDING WATER.—The "Answers" column has recently shown that the cyclamen is proving troublesome at this season. The following notes from a recent paper by Wehmer suggest one cause of trouble. Plants of cyclamen were observed to die off after the leaves, and even flower stalks had fallen over and withered. Closer examination showed that this was preceded by the bases of the stalks of apparently healthy leaves becoming swollen, soft and discolored; a few days later the leaf fell over and withered. In the diseased leaf-bases a fungus was found in active growth; it was one of the Botrytis forms, many of which have been described and illustrated in this paper. Observation suggested that careless watering was to blame for the presence of the fungus. Experiments were therefore made by pouring water into the flower pots till the space above the soil was flooded and the leaf-bases stood in water. The water gradually drained away, but several plants so treated showed the above symptoms and became more or less diseased. Other plants watered slowly, so that the water passed at once into the soil, remained healthy. The explanation is that the Botrytis fungus is extremely common, especially under glass; for instance, one is almost sure to find it on withering leaves or flowers of petunia or pelargonium. When the pots are flooded in watering, the spores are floated up and into the space inside the broad leaf-bases; there they germinate, and probably pierce the skin of the leaf or flower-stalk. The fungus spreads rapidly, and in a few days renders the leaf-base soft, so that the leaf falls over by its own weight, and lies on the soil withering. The same experiments were carried out on Primula sinensis with similar results. The cyclamen and primula have both what are known as radical leaves, that is, the leaves are not borne on stems appearing above ground, but rise from underground root-stocks; thus the leaf-bases are on a level with the surface of the soil. Many plants with this habit of growth are reared in our houses; a walk around any greenhouse will suggest other examples. The lesson is that with plants of this habit (indeed with plants of any kind in pots), water should not be poured on faster than the soil can absorb it; there should never be a pool of water in the pot, even for a few minutes; this is one of the elementary rules of watering given by every writer, yet we venture to think it is often broken. There are many reasons for this simple rule other than the reason connected with the prevention of disease described above, but we omit these. If the soil in the pot is what it ought to be, and if watering is regularly carried out, there should never be any difficulty about the soil absorbing the water fast enough, even where the stock of plants is large and time precious.

BUFFALO.

Business Conditions.

There is no item of news this week that stands out very prominently. Everybody seems fairly busy and plant men much more so. Business has kept up very finely. Two large weddings of last week created quite a little stir. A contract one was well done by Neubeck & Myers, where "Louie" had a chance to get in some of his best strokes, and did it well. The other was a grand North street affair and of the "go as you please" order, and W. J. Palmer & Son went as they pleased and greatly pleased their patrons.

I looked in at the store of the latter a few days ago and saw a grand lot of roses and carnations, entirely their own product. When you keep a first-class store and every detail is carried out to perfection, even to a soft white paper wrapping round the box containing one dozen Bridesmaids, and then tied with a narrow pink ribbon, you can get, or they get, almost double the price for the same quality flowers that are sold in some slovenly shops.

The Future.

How we do grow in artistic environments and attachments! At the rate we have evolved for the past twenty-five years, what will another quarter century bring forth? Progress is inevitable; there is no such thing as standing still, for in life there is no rest. Pictures of the future may seem ridiculous to some, but reasonable to others. Perhaps in twenty-five years our patrons will alight from their autos and walk over Turkish carpets to luxurious couches, where college-bred men or Circassian girls will take their orders. Fountains of perfumed water and goldfish sporting in the basins. Showers of violets will fall from the ceiling and the strains of the softest music will float around them. The proprietor will not dream of touching his wares except to hand an exquisite flower to his friend and patron or pass a compliment. His time otherwise will be largely taken up dictating verses to accompany each variety of flower and paying his bills.

Perhaps the greatest change will be in the delivery department. No such plebeian thing as a delivery boy on a bicycle in 1925. The delivery boys will be attired as cupid and very probably fly, but the great medium for distribution will be by pneumatic tube, which will convey parcels quickly to stations in every part of the city. Where the automobile must be used there will be coachman and footman, neither of whom will ever stir from the box, but the footman in the rear will handle the parcels. They will wear breeches and stockings, gold lace and powdered hair, and all the leading florists will have a distinctive livery, which they will guard by patent rights against infringement. Mr. Savin's will be green and gold; Mr. Jhorley's maroon and yellow; Mr. Flushman's, black, with polka dots; Mr. Lift's, blue, with yellow facings; Mr. Kalmer's, grey, with cherry stripes, and so on. All this will come to pass assuredly if you will give us time, but in the meantime we are more than likely to be all swallowed up by the department stores.

Various Items.

Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Scott are not solely employed handing out carnations. They each have half a score of men grading, seeding and planting on our beautiful streets.

It is very pleasant news to tell you that our popular wholesale man, W. F. Kasting, was on Monday appointed by the mayor a park commissioner. The position is entirely honorary, but it brings honor and dignity with it, and whenever there is a vacancy there is keen rivalry among our best citizens for the position. The board has had for years a very clever botanist and honored citizen, David F. Day, but never what may be called a horticulturist, and in addition to Mr. Kasting the board can still bear another of horticultural knowledge.

They now spend thousands of dollars removing trees which should be chopped down and destroyed. If the able James Braik was superintendent instead of assistant, things would be different, but with all these handicaps we have a glorious park, and much of it is due to the great ability, enthusiasm and honesty of the lamented Wm. McMillan. W. S.

NEW YORK.

Nothing very special to record here. There has been quite a number of weddings the past week; it appears that many superstitious people are yet alive, and they imagine it unlucky to be married in May, consequently there was a great rush to the altar the last week of April. The floral decorations of the Benedict and the Morton affairs received elaborate attention from the daily press, and perhaps after all the many exaggerations in this regard were more beneficial to the business than otherwise.

All sections of the trade are fairly busy and for a wonder we hear but few complaints. Growers are busy planting out stock, especially carnations, and the number to be grown this coming season will be enormous. Large quantities of bay trees have been imported; they are of good quality and appear to be selling fast. Palm growers to any extent are daily expecting the arrival of large importations of this class of decorative stock, and the price for any size worth looking at promises to be 'way up next fall. You know it's somehow a rule with the majority that the better things are, the better they are expected to be.

There was but a small attendance at the alleys last night and the scores were:

CARNATION QUEEN LOUISE.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a bench of this new white carnation at the establishment of the originator, Mr. J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Mr. Dillon has had the variety on trial for the past three years and has found it a strong grower, every shoot producing a flower and with such strong stems that no staking was done the past season. It has proved an early and continuous bloomer, is pure white and fragrant, with perfect calyx, and Mr. Dillon says he has cut flowers as large as those of Bradt. He says it promises to be the best white carnation ever introduced.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply is still growing and there is a glut of the poorer grades of roses and carnations, while lilies of even first-class quality go begging for a purchaser. Prices are even easier than last week, especially on the poor grades, and the fakir is having his innings.

Shipping trade holds up very well and but for this the market would be badly demoralized. "Dewey day" (last Tuesday) practically killed what local demand there was, and it was a very quiet day in the wholesale houses. Of course, there were a few decorations for small dinners here and there, but it didn't make up for the loss of ordinary demand. Even the fakir couldn't do any business on the street.

The Coal Question.

The coal question will be the special order of the evening at the meeting of the Florists' Club tomorrow (Friday) evening, Handel Hall building, 40 Randolph street, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting some plan of action will be decided upon, and it is hoped that the result will be a material saving to every grower who takes part. By vote of the club it was decided to invite the attendance of all growers at this meeting, whether members of the club or not. The subject is one that touches the pocket of every grower and there will no doubt be a large meeting and an interesting and profitable discussion.

Various Items.

The decoration of the Auditorium for the Dewey ball last Monday evening was remarkably effective. The prows of ten galleons of ancient type extended on to the floor from the walls at suitable places, and on the foremast of each was placed a very harmoniously combined arrangement of flags. Between two of these galleons, placed more closely together, was erected a private box for Admiral Dewey and his party. This box was decorated with American Beauty roses, and the prows of the galleons were draped with smilax. Palms were placed about the walls in various effective groups. Flags were freely used throughout, but the drapery on the balconies, etc., was of soft green and white, that made an excellent foil for the brighter colored flags. The general effect was excellent, and, though striking, was entirely free from the garishness so common where bright colored flags are freely used. The galleons were of the white staff so largely in evidence at the World's Fair. The designer of the decoration was Mr. James Gamble Rogers, and he is entitled to much praise. The roses, plants and smilax were supplied by Friedman.

In a decoration arranged by P. J. Hauswirth for the monthly banquet of the Commercial Club last Saturday evening, Bradt carnations were the only flowers used. There were numerous plateaus of this carnation and loose flowers of the same were scattered around the candelabra, the latter being decorated with Asparagus plumosus. When filled the plateaus were 20 to 24 inches in diameter and 15 in height. The effect was very pleasing and Phil thinks it was one of the prettiest decorations he ever arranged. The committee complimented him warmly.

He also had a dinner decoration last Monday evening for an affair connected with the Dewey reception at the Auditorium, and for this he used plateaus of sweet peas with asparagus for green. In the asparagus he prefers the paler color noticeable in the younger fronds.

The decorations for Admiral Dewey's breakfast at the Auditorium Annex on his arrival last Monday morning consisted merely of palms and ferns. P. J. Hauswirth banked the windows and Walter Retzer & Co. arranged groups in the room. The mantel in the suite of rooms reserved for the admiral and his wife was handsomely banked with plants and flowers also.

Word from St. Louis is to the effect that the bowlers will be unable to visit Chicago until May 13.

Mr. W. Hizer, Rockford, Ill., was in the city last Tuesday.

Mr. E. R. Tauch, foreman for Walter Retzer & Co., will leave May 12 for a three months' vacation in Europe. He will visit the Paris Exposition.

BALTIMORE.

Personal and Trade Items.

Trade for the week up to date of writing (April 30) has been moderately active, the usual procession of weddings and mild social festivities making a fair and steady demand for cut flowers. These events, with the usual commencement requirements and perennial funeral necessities have kept up a moderately well distributed business. As is ever the case, a good deal of stuff, belated for Easter, has come into the market, especially callas and Harrisii lilies, and run prices down. Violets are about over. Good roses have kept steadily selling and carnations have not been much in excess of demand. Of course, with the freer supply prices relax somewhat all around.

Many roses and carnations are being pulled out now to give room for bedding stuff, and florists who provide this material are busy and expecting to be more so. The weather here continues cool, especially at night, and those who dread the invasion of mildew in their rose houses keep up light firing. The season is still behind hand and many outdoor flowers usually seen on May day will not be in evidence tomorrow. Carnations are being planted out, sweet peas are generally sown, and on every side are seen evidences of the bustle and progress of spring work. Indeed, everyone is so busy now that items of news are scarce and difficult to find.

The handsome palms and other fine foliage plants which have been in the collection of Mr. Wm. W. Spence for many years, and lately under the charge of John Donn, it is reported have been purchased in a block lot by Dr. Douglas H. Thomas, president of one of the largest banks here, who will erect for their accommodation a conservatory at his own residence.

At the Gardeners' Club meeting Mr. George O. Brown, who is a newspaper man, with a great fondness for floriculture, read a paper which was exceedingly well received by the members, who hope to see it published in full. He dealt with florists and gardeners as the ministers to refined tastes and quoted from the poets to show the influence for good which their occupation and labors exerted.

The business of the retail florist is one which, it is assumed with reason, requires some training or apprenticeship, that it may be carried on profitably, but occasionally an instance occurs when a person without training for it, and experienced only in an entirely different occupation, makes it a success. In these cases the traditions of the trade are neglected, but without seeming to lessen the returns.

An illustration is found here in the case of Mr. J. A. Ritter, who for many years carried on a tonsorial establishment on one of the main thoroughfares uptown. In some way he got into keeping a few violets for sale. From this beginning his customers began to inquire for other flowers, and in a year or so he used a room adjoining his barber-shop for the sale of plants. The venture grew, and now he has a neat store room on Charles street and is doing a thriving business, having associated his son with him. He is fortunate in having little competition, and in being located in a very desirable residential part of the city, where a good class of purchasers abounds. He is a judge of flowers, knows just what will please his customers, is enterprising and accommodating, and will build up doubtless a fine business. His Easter trade was phenomenal.

RIX.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade the past week was fairly good and all kinds of flowers were plentiful. The glut is on good and strong. Stock comes in by the wagon load and there is no possibility of selling it all at any price. The street fakirs are having great times now as to who can sell the cheapest and are crowding the downtown street corners with all kinds of good stock.

It's very hard to quote prices of late, as you can buy at your own price. Every grower seems to be in full crop just now and is sending in a fine quality of stock. Maids, Brides, Perles and Meteors, the standard varieties, are selling for $5 for first grade, and from that down to $1 per 100. Some very good stock was bought at the latter price. Fancy Beauties are not so plentiful, but enough of them are in just now. They bring $2.50 to $3 per dozen. A great lot of short-stemmed ones come in, which sell for $1 per 100 up, and are mostly sold to the street fakirs, as the store men have little use for them. Carnations the past week have been a great glut, and are at this writing. Nevertheless some fine Enquirer from Witterstaetter brought $6 per 100, and were worth every cent of it. The old varieties, such as Scott, Daybreak, Portia and all white, went at $1, and much cheaper in 1,000 lots.

Lilacs from the South made their appearance early in the week and sold at $5 per 100 sprays; later in the week $3 was asked. Of Harrisii we have more than enough, and lots of them are going to waste; $6 per 100 is the price asked in dozen lots and $4 in 100 lots. Callas about the same, with plenty of them. Other bulb stock is about cut out and very little of it is coming in now. Tulips are bringing $1 per 100. Sweet peas bring from 25 cents to $1 per 100, and are becoming very plentiful. Violets are about gone and very few can be seen. Smilax is also plentiful and seems to sell well.

The demand for flowers at funerals seems to be on the increase, as nearly all the florists reported plenty of work in that line the past week, and the man with a big job was in his glory, as the prices on stock were low and he bought at his own figure.

Various Items.

Our visitor last week was Mr. Foreman, of Louisiana, Mo. Mr. Foreman reports that he will build a few new houses this summer.

The Junior Florists' Bowling Club have given up rolling for the summer, but by fall they will be at it again.

The Florists' Club meeting on next Thursday afternoon, May 10, will be a big one and all members are requested to be present. President Ammann says it will be a personal favor to him if they would attend. We expect to have a big show of miscellaneous flowers on exhibition; also interesting arguments on rose grafting. A box of fine cigars will also help a little. So if you don't want to miss a good time, come. Three o'clock is the time for opening the meeting and it's held at the same old place, so you can't miss it.

We are pleased to learn, through the Review, that our old friend and club member, Walter Retzer, has branched out for himself in Chicago. We all wish you well, Walter, in your new venture.

The Florists' Bowling Club have been doing but very little rolling of late, owing to sickness and business, and it has been decided that we would not be able to do business with the

The late John Breitmeyer.

Chicago boys before May 13. We noticed some of their big scores in the Review and we cannot afford to go without some little practice. The scores of the last rolling of the Chicago boys would win from any team, but they are not always that good in regular match games. They may be rolling on 36-inch alleys, such as our friend, Phil Scott, and his Denver club admits theirs are. What a picnic that would be for us.

Bowling.

The bowling club has too many members on the sick list and others too busy with spring work to do much rolling, and only two of its cripples showed that they were still able to roll a few good games. The scores below will show what they did:

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Easter trade in San Francisco was very good this year. All kinds of stock was plentiful, with the exception of Harrisii. Although some of our retailers had all the Easter lilies they could handle, others found themselves short about midday, and found much trouble in filling their orders. However, it was a first-class Easter with most of our florists. A few retailers, new in the business, did not fare so well as the older firms; that must be expected; but as each year flies past they will find themselves on a better footing.

Azaleas sold above any other plant. Crimson Ramblers came next. Potted Harrisii went rather slowly; customers seemed to prefer them in a cut state.

Since Easter trade has been very good, and looks likely to continue so. A number of weddings have taken place this week among the upper class and helped to keep our florists on the move in decorations, cut flower sales and collecting bills for same.

Outside roses are now at their best and some fine Jacks, Ulrich, Brunners and Cecil Brunners can be seen in market. Inside roses of all kinds are plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are also in abundance and good quality.

Prices: American Beauties, $1.50 to $2.50; Brides, Bridesmaids, Meteors, Testouts, 35 to 50 cents; Perles, Siebrecht, 35 cents; Kaisersins, 40 to 50 cents; Cecil Brunners, 3 and 6 dozen for 25 cents; Harrisii, $1.50 to $2.50; tulips, 50 cents per dozen; iris, 35 cents per dozen; carnations, Hobart $1, Crocker 75 cents, Bradbury 35, 50 and 75 cents, Bradt, Nugget, 35 cents, Flora Hill 25 to 50 cents, Scott 20 cents, Portia 10 cents.

Various Notes.

Mr. John Jack has given up his position at the Oakland race track. His plans for the future are unknown; possibly may start in as a grower for the San Francisco market. It's a daughter this time—a Queen yet a Jack. The new addition to the family came on Good Friday. Mr. Jack is happy. Congratulations.

Sievers & Borland are out with a new wagon this week. It's a dandy. As an advertisement it is all right, but Frisco's streets hardly suit a florist's wagon; too many cobbles and hills that only a goat could climb. The street cars are best for cut flower delivering in San Francisco.

Stevenson's decoration at the Emporium was made up with four carloads of palms, various kinds, 12 to 20 feet in height; 5,000 calla lilies, 3,000 Harrisii, and 4,000 Woodwardia ferns.

Jones, on Sutter street, had a decoration at the Palace Hotel last week. Papa Gontier roses and ferns only were used.

Charles Stepenback, Polk street, "The American Florist," and the only one in San Francisco, reports a very good Easter business.

E. Gill, 548 Fourteenth street, Oakland, opened up for business on April 19. The new store is fitted in grand style and with the latest improvements in electricity that shower their rays of light on one of the finest displays of cut flowers and plants to be seen in town. Mr. Gill says the others will have to hustle if they want to get ahead of him.

JOHN BREITMEYER.

We present herewith an excellent portrait of the late John Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., whose death was recorded in our last issue.

Mr. Breitmeyer was one of the pioneers in the trade in this country and he kept step with the marvelous progress made during his long life. He was a type of the earnest and progressive business man who tempers his enterprise with wise conservatism, and he amassed a considerable fortune.

For some years he had taken but little active part in the large business he founded, having several able sons who were fully competent to relieve him. His death will therefore make little if any change in the conduct of the business.

IF YOU have not already done so, please send us an accurate list of those in the trade that receive their mail at your postoffice, and greatly oblige the publishers.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ST. PAUL.

Ideal weather assisted in making Easter trade the very best on record, both in the amount of sales and in the quality of stock grown and handled.

Everything in the way of a plant in bloom sold well, while cut flowers were also in good demand. The supply of plants was hardly adequate to the demand and everyone seems to have sold out clean by Sunday noon. Lilies sold readily at 25 cents per bloom. Azaleas were in good demand at from $1.50 to $10 each, the most popular variety being Mme. Vander-cruysen. Hydrangeas in all sizes sold very readily at prices ranging from $1 to $8 each at retail. Choice Brunner roses went like frost on a hot June day; in fact, roses in bloom always sell well on such occasions. Crimson Ramblers in full bloom met with ready sales. Spireas were in good demand and retailed at 50 cents to $1 each. Smaller plants, like hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, etc., in pots and pans, sold fairly well.

In cut flowers the most noticeable shortage was in carnations. Roses were fairly abundant, though more good stock could have been used. Violets were very plentiful and in great demand. Bulbous stock was fairly plentiful and sold readily. In fact, there was nothing that did not sell well in plant or cut blossom.

Retail prices ranged about as follows: Roses, $2 to $2.50 per dozen; carnations, common 75 cents to $1, fancy $1.50; violets, 50 cents per bunch.

Nothing new or striking was seen and the same class of plants that sold well a dozen years ago were in good demand this season. Deliveries were made in open wagons, without protection, and complaints were very few. Shipping trade seems to have beaten all records. Several thousand cut lilies were shipped to Milwaukee and Chicago.

As usual, some plants were too late for Easter; quite a good many lilies and Rambler roses being among the number. The growers seemed to be fooled as much by a late Easter as by an early one.

Trade has been very good of late in all lines; spring has come on with a rush, trees are in full leaf, and everybody and everything full of life and happiness. Owing to the lateness of Easter bedding plants were somewhat neglected and kept back; but the bright weather since has assisted in bringing them along in nice shape, so that they will be ready when the soil is ready for them. There seems to be an abundance of good bedding stock, and indications would point to a good demand for it.

One of our leading firms is offering cash prizes for the best display of sweet peas grown from their seed. This is stimulating a love for the beautiful. A local paper is also offering a cash prize for the most beautiful flower garden; all of which stimulates trade.

L. L. May & Co. report a very successful season in the seed trade, both wholesale and retail. They have commenced active operations at their farm, planting sixty acres to nursery stock and small fruits and a large acreage for onion seed, onion sets, etc., besides extensive trial grounds.

THE COLOR OF FLOWERS.

The red pigment of several kinds of berries was formerly regarded as a blue pigment reddened by acid. Berzelius, in 1837, found this was not so with some berries and leaves he examined. Julius Wiesner, in 1862 and 1872, after a series of experiments, came to a conclusion contrary to Berzelius, that the original and actual color of anthrocyan was blue, not red.

To settle the dispute P. Q. Keegan (Nature) made a research this year, and concludes that there are different stages in the development of the floral pigment. In the lower stages the natural color is red, whatever the chromogen may be, and so far Berzelius was right. In the higher stages, however, the natural color of anthrocyan is blue, or, at least, with some chromogens becomes capable of forming blue compounds or lakes with alkalis and certain metallic salts. This investigation also shows that chromogenes exist which, unless under very exceptional conditions and circumstances, are incapable of producing blue pigment, and these in all stages naturally develop into a red, the brilliancy of which, when contrasted with that of a blue accidentally obtained in an allied species, attests its real, original and proper character.

RICHMOND, IND.—On April 24 the Quaker City Machine Co., makers of the Challenge ventilating apparatus, admitted a new partner in the person of the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Evans. To be sure, he will not be of age till 21 years hence, but he is already making things lively, and is giving John points on several things. Congratulations.

DENVER, COLO.

I send you some scores rolled at the last club roll by Denver bowlers that I think will knock your eye out. There were only two of us at the alleys that night, but we rolled our usual three games just the same.

I got 224 the first game, 234 the second game, and started off the third game with a strike, but got a spare in the second frame and then finished up with ten strikes, giving me 280 total. Now these scores won't look right in the paper, I know, but to satisfy the florists' bowlers throughout the country will say that the alleys are regulation in length but are six inches narrower than they should be. Could we be guaranteed such alleys at New York, I think it would be no trouble to get six men to make the trip, for surely I think we could land the prize.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—W. Hizer opened a down-town store at 115 W. State street, April 10. He reports an excellent Easter trade and feels he has made no mistake in opening a down-town salesroom. He will add some new glass to his greenhouse plant this summer.

MESSRS. Bobbink & Atkins, Ruthersford, N. J., have received a very large shipment from Europe, including 600 Bay trees, 150 cases ficus cuttings, 100 cases palms, araucarias, etc. It occupied the entire fore part of the steamer. The lot of Bay trees is especially fine.

A GERMAN EXHIBITION OF THE FLORISTS' ART.—We are informed by the president of the committee, Dr. M. Schmidt-Metzler, that it is intended to hold a general exhibition of objects of the florists' art—cut blooms and articles used in the work of a florist—in the Palm Garden, Frankfort-on-the-Main, on June 23, 24 and 25, 1900. The exhibition is the outcome of a desire on the part of professional and amateur patrons of the business, which has greatly increased as an industry in Germany as elsewhere, to afford the general public a collective idea of the florists' art of the present day, and of its capabilities. The exhibition will cover the entire area of the florists' industry, such as the decoration of saloons and apartments; the flowers and greenery necessary in carrying out different descriptions of decoration, baskets, china, glass and other objects used in the work, being of German origin. Frankfort has long possessed a reputation for excellence in the florists' art, and it is hoped that an exhibition in that town will lead to an improved taste being displayed in other parts of the country. A large number of prizes in money, as well as gold and silver medals, will be awarded to competitors.

BOSTON.

No change in Boston, except in the weather.

The past week has been one of the rockiest. Goods of all kinds got overplentiful and prices melted away like snowbanks in July. The grower's only hope is that his plants must soon become tired and refuse to supply blossoms in such profusion.

The veteran retailer and violet-grower, A. P. Calder, has closed his doors and advertises himself as located at the green houses. Probably he will reopen next autumn during the violet season, during which time he has a remarkably good trade in his favorite blossom.

Guess spring is here all right. Boston Common is strewn with dandelion blossoms. Of course, robins have bills, but it seems they do not pay them very promptly; at least their notes are being given the florists very freely just now.

The Hawley street auctions are on in full force and present an unrivalled opportunity to procure the class of goods handled there. B. T.

PHILADELPHIA.

Trade has been very good the past week, as weddings have been quite numerous. Pennock Bros. had some eight or ten large wedding decorations to execute. Flowering plants left over from Easter came into play on these occasions.

Prices: Beauties, $5 to $20 per 100; Brides, Maids, Kaisersins, Meteors, Golden Gates, Morgans, $3 to $8; Liberty, $4 to $15; Perles, $2 to $6; carnations, ordinary $1, fancy $1.50 to $3; callas, $8 to $12; Harrisii, $6 to $10; valley, $4; daisies, $1; mignonette, $2 to $4; sweet peas, $1 to $2; adiantum, $1; asparagus, $50; smilax, $20.

Mark Aitken, Springfield, Mass., was a visitor this week. R.

Chatham, N. Y.—R. E. Shuphelt reports an excellent Easter business, but not enough carnations, as weather was unfavorable the week preceding. There was a rush of funeral work, as is usual when burdened with holiday business.

SAGINAW, MICH.—E. A. Grohmann, the florist, was the victim of a very painful accident recently. He and a party of friends were repairing his naphtha launch, when an explosion occurred and he was badly burned. His hair and eyebrows were seared and his face and hands were blistered in a serious manner.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

They all sold out; sold out of house and home at 25 per cent advance on last year's prices. The only trouble was, had not enough stock.

The writer found John Macrae puffing a weed in his new office, which is fixed up in style, showing there're no flies on Mack. John has made great improvements in his place the past year and the boys, including the writer, wish him good luck.

Rennie & Pind are going right ahead in their large store on Washington and Eddy streets. I hear some talk of Rennie inviting the boys down to do the highland fling.

At the meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, held on the 12th, the subject of delinquent members was taken up, and, unfortunately, some weeding out was the result, but I am happy to say all the full-blooded stock is left, and the president says the club shall go ahead. There was quite a discussion on uniform prices. The retail men seemed to think the wholesale men have the best end of the stick.

Seedling pinks are all the rage here and Fred Hoffman has a grand lot. Hoff is on the track.

The only lady landscape gardener is on hand in this neighborhood. Perhaps it's just as well there are not too many of them. SMILAX.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather is fine, carnations are in full crop and of exceptionally fine quality, Flora Hill coming with a stem that ought to be hers all winter, then Flora would be the white, as she is now better than White Cloud. A start is being made to get the carnation crop planted, the weather being fine for that purpose. Business has dropped off considerably, although there is little, if any, good stock going to waste. Cheap goods don't seem to be wanted. Carnations run from 25 to 50 cents per dozen; roses, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; lilies, $1.50. Plant sales are slow and a sort of a lull on hand, giving us a chance to make ample preparations for Decoration day trade.

Ben Pohlmann, foreman for Crabb & Hunter, has gone into partnership with F. Hills, who furnishes the means, and they will build a large range of glass at East Grand Rapids and grow wholesale cut flowers only. And Crabb & Hunter are looking for a foreman.

Van Zonneveld, bulb agent, was a recent visitor. GEO. F. CRABB.

BULB EXPORTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Holland bulb exporters have formed an association with the above title to safeguard their trade interests. The manager is Mr. J. Spoor, Haarlem, Holland. Special features are departments of inquiry and collection.

CANNAS.

The "Novelty" of Novelties for 1900. New—"Mrs. Kate Gray"—Canna. A magnificent hybrid resulting from a cross of ItalaxMad. Crozy. The color is a rich shade of orange scarlet overlaid with gold, a superb coloring which in open sunlight is simply dazzling. The Form is an ideal of the Crozy type of bloom, the petals being very broad and overlapping, measuring 2 1/2 to 3 inches wide, while the individual flowers are from 6 to 7 inches across. The Texture of the flowers is all that could be desired; they partake of the nature of the pollen parent or Crozy race in this respect, and withstand our hottest summer suns without wilting. The foliage is a bright glossy green, equal to a Musa in size and substance and forms a beautiful foil to the gigantic trusses of bloom. The height of the plant is 6 to 7 feet, the growth is luxuriant to a degree, but very compact; the massive foliage, giant trusses, and enormous individual flower give the plant a noble tropical appearance. It is the only Canna of its kind in existence, and absolutely surpasses all others; its intrinsic value will make it a leading standard sort for years to come. Prices.—Strong roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz; $25.00 per hundred. Terms strictly cash with order, no exceptions. Stock limited; orders filled with strict rotation. Address Howard & Smith, Nurserymen, P. O. Box 494, Los Angeles, Cal.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 CHESTNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

American Holly (Ilex Opaca). This is one of America's most beautiful evergreens. Its foliage varies very little from that of the English Holly, and its rich clusters of scarlet berries make a good substitute for flowers in the winter shrubbery. It is hardy in almost any locality. To insure safety in transplanting, the leaves should be removed from the plant at that time. 1 to 2-ft., transplanted heavy, $4.00 per 10; $30.00 per 100. 2 to 3-ft., transplanted, heavy, $6.50 per 10; $50.00 per 100. 3 to 4-ft., transplanted, heavy, $9.00 per 10. Andorra Nurseries, Wm. Warner Harper, Proprietor, Chestnut Hill, Phila., Pa.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Since my notes on Easter trade there has been no great business activity. Flower buyers are evidently slow in replenishing their depleted pocket-books. Demand for funeral stock fairly good. The quality of flowers has improved in the past two weeks, especially carnations. This popular flower may now be seen on thirty-inch stems, perfect blooms, a great satisfaction to the carnation enthusiasts.

We are having ideal spring weather, with plenty of warm April showers. Trees and shrubbery have almost their full leaf and vegetation seems three weeks earlier than last year. The time seems opportune for a few remarks descriptive of the improvements being made in our parks and other out-door places of recreation.

Fairmount Park, of 150 acres, situated two miles east of the city limits, is the best adapted for sports of all kinds, and is equipped with a race track, golf links, bowling alleys, a lake for bathing, boating and fishing, and a theater for summer entertainments. The landscape is rolling and some very artistic effects were seen there last year in summer bedding.

Swope's Park, also outside the city limits, comprises an area of 1,300 acres. Although comparatively new, work is being pushed rapidly, and the park is now open to the public. An intramural railway will traverse the grounds, conveying passengers to points of interest.

Extensive improvements are being made in our many miles of boulevards, for which Kansas City is becoming noted. Several large vacant spots adjoining the driveways will be beautified and added to the park system.

Our beautiful "Paseo," 200 yards wide, when completed will extend north and south through the residence portion of the city for a distance of three miles. One mile has already been laid out and nearly finished. Starting from the north, we pass through the pergola of Grecian architecture by the site of the Spanish cannon captured in the late war and reach the sunken garden, now ablaze with tulips in all their gorgeousness. The colors are most beautifully blended and attract the admiration of thousands of visitors. Late in May these tulips will be replaced with the regular summer bedding, the contract for this work having been let to Albert Barbe and Samuel Murray.

A magnificent terraced fountain 75 feet wide, modeled after the celebrated fountain in Lyons, France, stands on the Paseo near Fifteenth street. It throws a stream 25 feet in the air, the overflow feeding an ornamental lake near by.

Mr. George Kessler, a thorough landscape gardener and civil engineer, has charge of the entire park system. We are rapidly becoming a convention

ABOUT COLORADO.

We have received from Mr. P. S. Eustis, general passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, a book just off the press, which is unusually interesting and artistic. It is on the subject of Colorado, fascinatingly written by James W. Steele, a descriptive writer of great force. The book is lavishly illustrated by engravings of a high order, and the printer's art has not been handicapped by an effort to save expense. To anyone interested in the grandeur of Colorado scenery and particularly to one contemplating a visit to the country described, the book will be indispensable. Copies can be had by sending a letter of request, accompanied by 6 cents in postage stamps, to Mr. Eustis, at his Chicago address, 209 Adams street.

AN EASTER ORDER.

A subscriber sends us a mail order that he received in the midst of the Easter rush that he justly concludes is worthy a place in our "comic column." It reads: "Please send me by mail three sample carnations, for which you will find ten cents enclosed. Please send by return mail." No wonder our subscriber reports a good Easter trade.

"A Horticultural Handbook" is the title of a paper covered book of 160 pages by Prof. J. L. Budd and published by the Wallace Publishing Co., Des Moines, Ia. It contains a great deal of instructive matter about hardy plants, and the price is only 35 cents.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Commercial Violet Culture.

By Prof. E. I. GALLOWAY, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. This work is thoroughly practical and fully discusses the subject in a clear and comprehensive way. It has received the highest commendation from specialists and from the Horticultural Press. Illustrated with over 60 plates. 24 pages. Price postpaid, $1.50.

THE WATER GARDEN.

By Wm. Tricker, the standard authority of America on Aquatic Plants. The cultivation of Water Lilies, etc., is becoming more popular every year, and every florist should be in a position to extend his business in this line. This book is very exhaustive, is magnificently illustrated. Price postpaid, $2.00.

RESIDENTIAL SITES and ENVIRONMENTS.

By Joseph Forsyth Johnson. The knowledge to be gained from this book is of the greatest importance to florists, particularly where it relates to the laying out of grounds about country homes, both large and small. The author is a practical man and the contents of the book may be understood. Illustrated by over 50 plans and diagrams. Price postpaid, $2.50.

HOUSE PLANTS and How to Succeed With Them.

By M. L. Hillebrand. This book is written for amateurs, but florists can use it very profitably among their retail customers. It should be on sale in every establishment. Write for trade discount. Retail price postpaid, paper 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

GENTLEMEN—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Wire Designs.

For the purpose of finding out what was the latest in floral wire designs, we recently visited the extensive manufacturing establishment of Reed & Keller, whose address may be found on the opposite page. This is a most remarkable place. A vast collection of wire designs is to be found there, many of them belonging to and speaking volumes of the past—the very long ago of floriculture, and others as up-to-date as any other element in our business.

Much—in fact, most—of the very best and newest in American floral design work is never illustrated because it is usually done in a great hurry and we have very few retail florists who are also photographers. This is also the case in wire work. Scarcely a day passes but what you, I, or the other fellow visiting Reed & Keller's gets something specially made to suit the exigencies of that particular work; we bind the firm to secrecy, and the thing, in many cases valuable and new, is lost to the trade.

Perhaps you know that the wire-workers of to-day have heaps of trouble of their own. Most every gravedigger looks forward to the few cents or dollars he can dishonestly get by the sale of frames left on the graves—indeed, of late there has been quite a large business done in this way. The wire work in every large cemetery is collected, many times before the flowers of sorrow are faded, sold to speculators, repainted and resold to florists in the city at wholesale prices, and it may be truly said that some frames thus go backward and forward for years. We know that to be "up-to-date" means cheap, shoddy and glarish. That business—we mean of course the flower part, the mainspring of which is sentiment—is often devoid of principle, and is used as a cloak for all that is small or shallow in human nature.

By the purchasing of this kind of material we encourage crime of a ghoulisish variety, and don't doubt it that if the general public or your own customers become convinced of it the trade will suffer; no one cares to put a frame so purchased on the bier of a friend—no, not even yourself—and we'd like to see the miserable traffic stopped. We promise to attend to it in this city. We mention this matter here because we have been looking at several grades of stock. Every good "maker-up" knows the value of strong, well made wire frames; they are the foundation to his work. Well, of late years the market has been flooded with cheap, poorly made frames. The manufacturers tell us it is necessary in order to compete against the cemetery ghouls.

But let us return to the principal object of this article. Whilst most florists are content to have their wires painted green, the tendency, at least for show or sample work, seems to go toward gilded work. They look better and richer if your kind of trade necessitates your keeping frames hung prominently in your store, or your customers always "want to see the size."

There is nothing specially new in wire work, but there are many very useful designs which deserve to be better known. Every florist is supposed to be acquainted with the badges and insignia of every important society, for many of them will have nothing but a facsimile of such sent as tokens to funerals of members; therefore, if you have not already done so, get a collection of national and international flags and society emblems; you may not need them to-day, but you might to-morrow. The designs mentioned and sketched here have mostly been originated by Reed & Keller.

The casket log cross makes a most beautiful design. It can be made any size, the most popular being 42 inches long with 18-inch cross beam. The frame is round and stands on feet which raises it just sufficiently to clear the casket when finished. It is necessary to make this design solid. This can best be done by the use of violets, carnations, lily of the valley, pansies, or any small flower. One flower or color is best; a cluster can be arranged at the cross beam. Emblematic designs must of necessity be made somewhat stiff to conform to outlines, and many times the finest effect and most expression can be got by compact work; the finish is the important part. You know there is not so much talent required to what artists call "block out" a design as there is to "tone" it.

The cross, no matter how made, will always represent one emblem of Christianity. The wreath stands for immortality and is the most classic of all designs. A few years ago crescent wreaths were most popular; now the even width is mostly used. Many imagine that the tendency to narrow the variety of funeral designs injures that section of our business; that people don't care to send the same kind of design. It is true that the craze for distinction is still rampant, but it is not so fierce as it used to be. People recognize the fact that comedy can be employed even in a funeral design, and though many florists are willing to play the comedian if paid for doing so, still the age is becoming more intelligent and values incongruity at the market rates. You can put varietal values even in wreaths and bunches, and we would rather see a demand for greater variety of flowers than an extra rush on foolish designs.

There is, though, an inclination on the part of some florists to dispense with mossed designs altogether. You are doubtless aware of the fact that there has recently been an infusion of high-collared, kid-gloved, dry-goodsie looking know-it-alls into our retail business who do not like to dirty their bejeweled fingers by using wet moss. That's the element floriculture has most need to dread and no retailer should employ a man who thinks himself too good to moss a design. The best men prefer to either do this or stand by and see that it is properly done.

Casket covers, scrolls, lettering frames and many other kinds of work no longer need to be mossed or be clumsy and heavy. Moss can be dispensed with altogether by the use of strong, finely woven mosquito netting. Paint it green, put it on a steel wire skeleton frame, any desired shape; you can fasten the greens and flowers on it by wire hooks bent on the reverse side. You can make very clean, light and artistic work in this way, but this system is still in embryo.

Regarding festive decoration designs, the folding canopy is the most useful and convenient article. It is suspended by attachments to the cornice. It is usually 4x3 feet, and when not required can be folded as flat as a screen.

The arch canopy is another great help to decorators. It is very strong and substantial, is made in section, and can be raised any desired height. The frontal arch may be used separately and can be easily made the support of a natural looking arch of roses or other flowers.

A device for holding tilted plant pots can easily be made by fastening together two different sized half diamond shaped steel wires; this kind of a stand needs to be unobtrusive, for there is usually no time to cover up unnecessary wire work.

The wire tree with glasses is often very useful for special flowers in window decorations. At the last American Rose Society show Mr. Kift exhibited many novelties in glass holders. Some of them are destined to become very popular, not only with the florists, but with the general public, for use in table decoration. Mr. Kift's patent holder is a good thing; the rods may appear a little formal, but in the hands of a good man loose and natural effects can easily be produced and the system renders work less difficult. It is often the case that has patented his system, which consists of movable clasps on steel rods.

Flowers in Season.

Gardenias are the choicest material for both corsage and boutonniere at present.

Violets are getting very pale and small. Their season will soon be at an end; they have paid well this year.

Stephanotis is coming in and will be the very cream of material for brides' bouquets and grooms' coat flowers.

White orchids have not been overplentiful. An orchid, no matter what sort, is always select goods. There has been quite a run on anything white for brides' bouquets. Our orchid growers seem to want to give us nothing but cattleyas.

Just at present large quantities of Cattleya Mossiae are coming in and most of them are extra fine. If you have any fine work to do, no matter what it is, you cannot get anything choicer than cattleyas just now.

Out-door bulb stock is in and is used only in cheap forms of decorations, being coarser and stronger scented, yet much of it is very beautiful. We never despise beauty because it appears plentiful.

THE IMPROVEMENT OF CARNATIONS IN AMERICA.

BY C. W. WARD, QUEENS, N. Y.

[Read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.]

Our carnation, Dianthus caryophyllus, erroneously called Pink by many people, is a native of Southern Europe. In its original state it is a half hardy herbaceous perennial, growing about two feet in height. The original flower was flesh-colored and contained five broad petals. Its natural period of blooming in the open air is from June to August. It is said to exist in a wild state in England, where it was introduced supposedly about the time of the Roman invasion. As long ago as 300 years B. C. the carnation was described by Theophrastus, who gave it the name of Dianthus, from the Greek Dios, divine and Anthos, flower. The name caryophyllus was undoubtedly taken from the clove tree, Caryophyllus aromaticus, and was applied to the carnation because of the clove like fragrance of its blooms. The name carnation, derived from the Latin Carnis, flesh, refers to the flesh colored flowers of the original type. The carnation has been in cultivation for more than 2,000 years and in early Greek history is mentioned under the name of Gillyflower. As early as the beginning of the 16th century the development of the carnation began to attract the notice of historians, and the European gardeners contributed so many varieties that Girard, in 1587, wrote that to "describe each new variety of carnation were to roll the Sisyphus stone or number the sands."

The carnation has been divided into several distinct classifications. The French arranged all varieties into three classes, the Grenadines, Flamens, and the Fancies. The English divided them into four classes: Selfs, those comprising only one color in the petals; Flakes, those having a pure ground of white or yellow and flaked or striped with one color; Bizarres, those having a pure ground color, but marked with two or three different colors; and the Picotees, the latter class having a pure white or yellow ground, each petal being bordered with a band of yellow at the margin. The English still maintain this classification, and in the twenty-second annual report of the National Carnation and Picotee Society, Southern Section of England, we find a total of 42 classes described in their premium lists, covering the above four classifications.

In the early part of the 19th century the English gardeners paid particular attention to growing carnations, and produced fully as large flowers as any that we have upon the table here today. They practiced what is known among English gardeners as dressing—removing all imperfect and superfluous petals with a forceps and arranging the remaining petals in a perfectly formal manner. Frequently the calyx was cut down between the points, to prevent what is known as bursting; that is, the growing out of the petals at one side of the calyx. All of these artificial details seem to have proved of doubtful benefit to the carnation, and eventually to have wrought its downfall, as we find that from about the middle of the 19th century little is heard of the carnation among English gardeners, until within comparatively recent period.

The type of the carnation, however, that was developed and grown by the English gardeners is not the same type that we grow at the present time, but is distinctly a race of summer flowering carnations. The usual plan of growing them is to keep the plants in cool houses or cold-frames during the winter and to bring them into blooming quarters in the early spring. They were usually had in perfection during the months of July and August, each plant producing a profusion of blossoms during this short season. While the English seem to have lost much of their interest in the carnation about 1850, that interest seems to have been steadily reviving during the past few years.

Referring again to the annual report of the National Carnation and Picotee Society, we find that there are a total of 319 premiums offered in the 42 classes, and that this society is supported by a list of 380 subscribers who have donated sums ranging from 5 shillings to 50 pounds each toward maintaining its premium list, these donations amounting to 317 pounds sterling, or about $1,500. We also find that this report contains as patronesses the names of Lady Ardilaun, Baroness Burdett Coutts, the Duchess of Marlborough, and as patrons, Lord Balfour, Lord Henry Grosvenor, Lord Rothschild, and Baron Schroeder, and many other prominent people. Among its vice-presidents is found Sir John T. D. Llewellyn, member of Parliament. The mention of these names will give some idea of the present interest shown by the English people in carnation culture.

In America we have also the American Carnation Society, a national body devoted to the improvement of the divine flower. This society is composed of a membership of upward of three hundred, the majority of whom are either carnation enthusiasts or engaged in the cultivation of the carnation either commercially or as amateurs. The work of this society has been of incalculable benefit and to its efforts may be largely attributed the advancement which has been made in the American carnation. This society holds its annual meeting in February of each year at different points throughout the United States, upon which occasions are exhibited magnificent displays of the finest carnations that can be grown. The membership of this society is open to any and all persons who are interested in or have any love for the carnation. None are barred—amateurs and professionals are equally welcome.

termed monthly carnations. It is from the productions of Alegatiere that our American race of carnations was undoubtedly obtained.

As early as 1866 a number of varieties were imported into this country by Messrs. Dailedouze & Zeller, horticulturists, who were then located in Flatbush, L. I., these gentlemen having imported Edwardsii, Pres. Degraw, La Purite and a variegated La Purite. These varieties were grown during a period of ten years as pot plants for summer and winter blooming. It may be of interest to state that at the present time Mr. Charles Zeller, the survivor douze Bros., of Flatbush, L. I., and many others whose names are not now at my command.

The foregoing historical treatment of the carnation I have gathered largely from the Cyclopedia of American Floriculture recently published by L. H. Bailey of Cornell University.

To-day it is my purpose to give you an illustration of the development of the carnation from the original five-petaled bloom to the 4-inch flower of the present date. We find from the ancient descriptions that the wild carnation was a five-petaled flower about one inch in diameter, and that it was commonly of a flesh or lavender color. Fortunately, among hybrid seedlings of to-day frequent reversions furnish us with flowers that are almost identical with the original type as it existed 2,000 years ago, save perhaps in the matter of color.

In Fig. 1 we have the original five-petaled flower, but the color is of a deep crimson. In Fig. 2 we have the first step toward the improvement of the flower, this being the addition of a single petal, producing a six-petaled bloom. The next step is shown in No. 3, where three or four small, short petals have been added to the center of the bloom, producing a semi-double flower. In the next step, No. 4, still more petals have been added, and we now have a fairly double flower. The fourth step was made by adding still more petals, making a full double flower, as shown in figure 5. But you will notice that in all of these the relative size of the bloom remains the same, namely, about one inch in diameter.

After the carnation hybridizer had succeeded in producing the double bloom shown in figure 5, his next aim was to increase the size of the bloom, improve its strength, as well as to elongate the stem, and to improve and diversify the shades of color. This has all been so faithfully done by our American hybridizers that you now have before you these magnificent blooms measuring from three to four inches in diameter, with perfect calyces, and supported upon stiff stems two feet or more in length, some of them being equal in form to those produced by the artificial manipulation of the English dresser, embracing almost every tint of color known in flowers, save that of blue, and the approach toward this latter color is shown in varying shades of purple; several California varieties have been introduced in a distinct shade of mauve.

The study of this plate is decidedly interesting, as it shows the comparative difference between the carnation as we know it to-day and the original flower that aroused the sentiment and admiration of the ancient Greeks and Romans. This comparison is accentuated when we throw upon the screen Governor Roosevelt, a seedling four inches in diameter, as the photographs from which these slides Steps in the Improvement of the Carnation.

The carnation commonly grown in America was derived from the French strain, known as the remontant, monthly, or perpetual flowering carnation. This distinct race originated about 1840, and is said to have been produced by M. Dalmais, a gardener of Lyons, France, the original variety, called Atim, having been sent out about the year 1844. This improvement was followed in 1846 by M. Schmitt, of Lyons, who produced several fine varieties that remained in cultivation a number of years.

M. Alphonse Alegatiere was the next horticulturist to aid in the material development of this new race of carnations, and he succeeded, by skillful crossing, in obtaining fine varieties with stiff stems. In 1860 the number of these varieties was largely increased and this class received the name of tree carnations; but in America they were generally of the firm of Dailedouze & Zeller, still lives in Flatbush, a hale and hearty gentleman upward of eighty years of age, and it has been my pleasure to hear Mr. Zeller frequently declare that he was more than proud to have been one of the first who brought the carnation to this country. Mr. Zeller's partner, Mr. John Dailedouze, has long since passed away, but has left worthy sons who have succeeded to and preserved their father's love for the carnation.

The work of improving the American carnation has been taken up and carried on successfully by such men as the late Charles T. Starr and W. R. Shelmire, of Avondale, Pa.; Wm. Swayne, of Kennett Square, Pa.; Jos. Tailby, of Wellesley, and Sewall Fisher, of Framingham, Mass.; Fred Dorner, of La Fayette, Ind.; R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, O.; Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass.; the Daillewere made were taken of the same relative size. We will also find in this bunch of seedlings before us a number of these single petaled blooms.

Possibly a brief description of the process of hybridizing may be of interest. You will see projecting above the flower two horn-like growths. These are the pistils, or female organs of the flower. Where the petals and pistils have been removed, you will notice the anthers, which contain the pollen. In hybridizing, this pollen is removed from one flower and spread upon the pistils of the flower which we wish to bear the seed. This is done by tweezers or a camel's-hair brush, and in some instances by simply taking the flower and scattering the pollen over the pistils.

When the flower has commenced to wither and the petals are closing together, it is an indication that fertilization has taken place, and it will be seen that the ovary or seed pod is commencing to enlarge. After fertilization has taken place this pod continues its growth for four or five weeks and usually ripens its seed within six or eight weeks after the date of fertilization. Seed ripening, however, takes place much more rapidly in April, May and June than during the winter months. After the seeds are ripened they are carefully sown and treated the same as the

In a week or ten days after germination the root system has reached considerable proportions and the first true leaves are beginning to form. When the seedlings reach this stage they are taken from the seed beds and pricked off into flats, where they remain three or four weeks and are then potted up in small pots, from which they are planted in the open ground about the first to the tenth of May, where they come into bloom during the months of August and September, at which time the plants bearing promising flowers are lifted and planted on the greenhouse benches, and thereafter treated the same as in ordinary carnation culture.

While this growing of seedling carnations is an intensely interesting work, and one well worthy the careful attention requisite to obtain material results, it is not only tedious but expensive, and the seedling grower who produces a distinct advance upon the existing type of carnation is well worthy the plaudits of his fellow carnation men and richly deserves the praise of all those who are interested in or imbued with the love of flowers.

In figures 6 and 7 we have a snow white seedling which for beauty of form and purity of color was unsurpassed, but, unfortunately, it was not sufficiently free in blooming to warrant its commercial introduction. In the front view of the flower the petals are not crowded, but there are sufficient of them to give the effect of a well formed, shapely bloom, and in the side view of the flower you will note that the guard petals are broad and stand out flat from the calyx without recurving, while the center of the flower is well built up and the calyx and stem are proportionately strong.

In figures 8 and 9 we have Governor Roosevelt, a seedling of 1897, which is particularly distinguished by its symmetrical form, large size, splendid calyx and excellent stem. This variety is possibly the most advanced step in the development of the the secondary flowers might have developed additional pistils. The flower was nearly four inches in diameter, and is the most remarkable freak that I have seen among carnation seedlings, but, unfortunately, we cannot proceed further in hybridizing with this variety, as it produces neither seeds nor pollen.

I am asked sometimes why carnations purchased from the stores frequently keep but a few days, and I am oftentimes asked for instructions as to how to care for carnation blooms. In my opinion, the reason for carna-changes in temperature, such as chilling them and again overheating them, the plants eventually fade away and die. This is especially the case with a member of the plant that has been severed, such as the cut flowers.

The treatment that I would recommend in order to keep carnations as long as possible is to plunge the stems in water from which the chill has been taken, so that it feels just slightly warm to the hand. Then place the vase of flowers in a room not colder than 45 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit and allow the flowers and water to cool down with the room. Treated in this way we keep carnations from two to three weeks, and in some instances have kept some varieties four and five weeks. If the blooms are kept in a room ranging at from 40 to 50 degrees during the night time, they may be brought into the living room where the temperature is quite high during the day time, and returned to the cool room each night without serious injury. Treated this way, carnation blooms should last from 7 to 12 days and even longer.

I have found an unoccupied bedroom on the north side of a house in which there was no direct heat, or at least very little heat, the temperature ranging from 45 to 55 degrees, an excellent place in which to keep carnation blooms. It is in this kind of a room that we are able to keep the carnations from two to three weeks, and even longer, as I have before said.

After listening to this technical description of the advanced improvement in carnation culture, a few statistics concerning the magnitude of the business, the value of the product sold, the capital invested and the persons employed, may not come amiss. It is impossible at the present time to make correct statements regarding the amount of capital employed, as we have as yet no accurate statistics. From a rough computation I am inclined to think that there is perhaps two millions of dollars invested in carnation growing in the United States today and that there are probably employed in the production of carnation flowers something like 5,000, possibly more, people. These employees receive wages ranging from $35 to $100 per month, the average wages probably being $45 per month.

It is still more difficult to arrive at the value of the product produced, but basing our estimate upon the retail prices, the probable value of blooms and plants sold should be from three to four times the capital invested. There are about two and one-half millions of young carnation plants and rooted cuttings sold each year, and florists produce an equal amount which they themselves use for growing and which are not sold; so that the entire production of rooted cuttings and young carnation plants will approximate five millions per annum. Of these plants, at least four-fifths are grown under glass during the winter time for cut flower purposes, some carnation yet achieved. The flowers reach $3\frac{1}{2}$, even four inches in diameter, with stems from 2 to 3 feet in length.

In figures 10 and 11 we have quite a new departure in carnation seedlings. This is what we may term an anemone-flowered carnation. You will notice that this flower is composed of a single row of broad guard petals that stand out well from the calyx. Around this is a thick, bunchy wreath of fine, feathery petals, the same as seen in the anemone-flowered chrysanthemum. In the center of this bloom are six miniature flowers, the largest of the secondary flowers being surrounded by the five smaller. This flower also has four pistils instead of two, and probably if it had been left to develop some of nations not keeping after they have passed through the commission houses and stores arises from the variety of improper treatment which they receive. I have many times seen dealers take carnations from the box as they arrive and plunge the stems immediately into ice cold water and set the flowers in a cold ice box. I think that this alternate chilling and heating of flowers, such as plunging the stems in ice water and chilling the flowers, and then placing them in highly heated dry rooms, is the reason for the premature withering away of the carnation flowers.

You will understand that a flower immediately after being severed from the plant is in a delicate condition. We all know that if we subject our plants in the greenhouses to these sudden three to four million plants per annum being used for this purpose. Assuming that they produce an annual average of twenty flowers to the plant, would give sixty millions of blooms produced upon the American continent each year.

What becomes of this enormous number of flowers is somewhat of a mystery. They are put to innumerable uses. The carnation is a flower that awakens the love of almost every person; and as the average carnation blooms are sold at much more reasonable prices than many other flowers, they come within reach of a larger class of people than do roses and orchids; consequently the consumption is larger.

There is no use to which flowers may be put for which the carnation is not fitted. It lends itself to almost every scheme of decoration. Its delicious, clean, pungent, aromatic fragrance admits it to almost every sick room; it is unsurpassed for dinner or center table decorations; it is universally used in the making up of set pieces; it is also one of the best flowers for boutonnieres that the florist has at his command; and finally, its wide range of pleasing colors, its lasting qualities and fresh, rich, clove fragrance combine to make it one of the most popular, as well as one of the most sought for and profitable of florist's flowers.

Personal and Trade Items.

The influence of the advent of lilacs and other hardy flowers is being felt on the market and blooms from the glass houses are less in demand and lower in price, only good stuff keeping fairly up to the expectations of growers. First-class roses continue in fair request and will go off at remunerative figures, but the bulk of the mediocre material is away down, as usual at this season.

Up to this date, May 7, the supply of carnations is ample for all calls, and prices droop off slightly. For the past week there have been numerous commencements of medical, dental and other colleges, making a distributive demand.

The expected sale in a bulk lot of the plants of Mr. W. W. Spence was not consummated, and they will be sold at public auction on the 9th. John Donn, who has had them in charge for several years, will, as we understand, go again into trade, and is now looking around to locate himself suitably.

Mrs. Amelia Schuler, a Baltimore florist, doing a fine business and with an exceptionally good class of customers, is much gratified, as is natural, at the award to her son, Hans Schuler, who is well known to the trade here, of the scholarship in Paris of the Rinehart School of Sculpture, the value of the same being $1,000. Mr. Schuler is now studying his art in Paris, where he has already made marked progress and received several awards of prizes, which point to his achieving a probably distinguished career.

The Rosen Zeitung, a journal published in the interests of the lovers of the rose at Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, and edited by P. Lambert, in its last issue has a colored plate and an account of the rose White Maman Cochet, which originated with John Cook, of this city. It congratulates that gentleman on his good luck in such a find and describes in glowing terms the excellent qualities of the rose, which from the tenor of the article seems peculiarly adapted for growing in Germany in frames without fire heat. The illustration of the variety is handsomely executed and the editor plainly regards it as an acquisition of value.

An afternoon call at Mr. Cook's place a few days ago found much to interest, for that enthusiastic and enterprising gardener has always something new and good to present. His hybridizing of roses in the search for valuable sorts is a perennial occupation and is pursued with a zeal and discrimination which promise even larger results than those already achieved. His rose Baltimore, although late in the season, showed great blooms and immense, strong stems, some of them reaching six feet in length. He has another favorable seedling which he considers as offering much promise. This is a bright pink with sturdy stem and grand leathery foliage. It comes from a white seedling of his own, fertilized with pollen from the American Beauty.

This pursuit of new varieties worthy of propagation and dissemination is a fascinating one, and none the less that it is certain in advance many will fail to turn out any improvement on older sorts. In the effort, however, for forcing roses quite a number which come short of all the qualities needed for their end are proving admirable garden sorts and deserving of general cultivation. Doubtless some of these will be heard from later on.

On this place is to be seen a well-grown specimen of a variegated Asparagus Sprengerii. Remarkable to say, the seedlings from it come true. Here also is a cross between Asparagus decumbens and Sprengerii. Sprengerii is grown here not on standards, but on benches, with arched-like frames of poultry fencing wire between the rows to keep the sprays off the soil, as was a few years back practiced with carnations. It has a full southern exposure in the houses.

Another asparagus grown here, a variety of great substance and vigor, is pyramidalis erecta. It is well adapted for decoration work, especially where considerable masses are to be used, but so far we believe it is not in commerce, at least not in this country.

A great many fine statured plants are kept in these houses for decorating churches, dwellings, etc., but some of them have by their growth exceeded their accommodations, and another winter will find their places filled by successors. Other subjects are kept either for sale or the pleasure of the owner, and new things are added from time to time. We noticed a more than usually well-conditioned specimen of the Chamerops Fortunil.

Mr. Cook believes a good deal in specialties and novelties. At his store in the city his almost daily effort is to have something new or striking. This great collection readily enables him to do this. His immense beds of daffodils, The Emperor, must have been a gorgeous sight when in bloom, and besides the local demand 20,000 flowers were shipped to New York.

He finds the Japanese double cherry a very taking thing, and of fine lilacs, like the making of books, there is no end. Indeed, were one to attempt to merely catalogue the lovely and attractive things to be found on the well-stocked twenty-seven acres of this genial and devoted horticulturist, it would be a Herculean task, which will not be attempted by RIX.

checked by severe dryness, they are seriously hurt.

The soil was 40 per cent loam, the same of leaf mould, and 20 per cent rotten manure. The finest cyclamen grown here or in Europe are grown through the summer in hotbeds, but they are not necessary to grow a fine plant, and a plant 18 inches across, well flowered, will suit your trade more often than the prize-taking 30-inch plant.

Primroses.

It is now time to sow the Chinese primula as well as P. obconica and Forbesii. None of these are heat-loving plants, so after the plants are up coolness is rather the object to be sought. We find a bench in a shaded house does them very well in the summer months, but they must have plenty of fresh air. P. obconica has proved to be one of the best plants we have, not only as a pot plant but for cutting. While a gold-frame is a splendid place for the primulas during the summer, we have got along very well in a house where there was an abundance of air and very little shade. There are some great improvements in the obconica of late and you should get the best seed procurable.

Boston Ferns.

There seems to be no let-up to the popularity and usefulness of the Boston fern, "N. e. Bostoniensis," and after New Year's it was impossible to buy medium sized plants. A plant that fills a 5 or 6-inch pot is in greatest demand. All the young plants you can get together should be planted out on a bench as soon as you have the room. If you don't have them, buy them now in 3-inch pots. Four or five inches of soil is enough, one-half loam and the remainder rotten manure and leaf mould. If you don't have the leaf mould, decayed refuse hops will suit them finely.

Give plenty of water, a syringing in the morning and shade from the hottest sun, and by October they will be fine plants and lift without losing a frond. I can add nothing to the well known qualities of this fern, but it really seems to be the most perfect house plant we have, thriving everywhere.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas that you did not force for Easter but rested as long as possible will now be coming into flower. Look out for red spider. We have had the flowers ruined on them during hot weather before we knew what was the matter. It is not only the want of syringing, but allowing them to wilt for want of water, that promotes greenfly. If in small pots they should be supplied with liquid manure. Any one-year old plants of hydrangeas that were forced for Easter and did not sell, if cut down low, partly shaken out and started growing again, will make the

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Heat and Shade.

We find from now till about the 20th of this month to be our most crowded time, and every inch must be made use of. Cold-frames help very much and should be used as largely as possible, for with all the hardier bedding plants, such as geraniums, you can give them the full sun if plunged in some material and on fine days remove the sash, which hardens them for their future use.

Ten years ago we used to make the mistake of shading our houses, perhaps all of them, about the end of April, and then for economy's sake letting the fires go out. This, to coleus, cannas, acahyphas, and other tropical plants that you have been previously growing in a brisk heat, is murder. They will just stand still, if not even go back. Get all such plants in houses that you don't need to shade for anything and make up your mind to fire till the end of this month. More favored conditions may exist in some localities, but here it is necessary. Last night, May 5, we had a decided frost.

Geraniums, petunias, ageratums and the colder blooded plants will do without fire if the glass is unshaded and you make allowance for the absence of heat by more careful watering.

Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums grow fast now, and it is a good time to put in big batches of cuttings. We never seem to have too many. Although the sand in your propagating bed is getting cooler every day and less conducive to quick rooting, you can overcome that by giving an abundance of water. Twice a day a heavy watering is not too much and never let them wilt, either from sunshine or want of water. You must attend to these things, or in June when the benches are empty you will have to buy.

Don't think for a moment that chrysanthemums are going out of fashion. The great big "ponderosa Paderewski" type at $9.00 per dozen may be, but $2 and $3 a dozen flowers are as essential to us in the fall as the roses and carnations, and they just suit the plant men near the cities who can fill up again with lilies, azaleas, etc.

Cyclamen.

It is just about now that the most beautiful of our winter flowering plants, the cyclamen, gets neglected. If they are in 3½ or 4-inch pots and plunged in a mild hotbed, then they have a fine place, providing they get no neglect, but there are many ways in which they can be neglected just now, and for another month I would prefer to keep them on a light bench in a house where you will keep a fire for the next 30 days, and in addition to regular fumigating, scatter tobacco stems between the pots.

We have never had our cyclamen grow so freely and robust as this year, and from one particular cause, which has taught us a lesson. Instead of putting them in 2-inch pots from the seed pans, we planted them in flats two inches apart. They have grown as they never would grow in pots and needed a 3-inch when potted. Now they are in a 4-inch. The lesson was that in the bulk of soil contained in the flat there was not the drying out and starvation that would be liable to occur in a tiny pot, and shows they must grow right along; once finest plants for another Easter. Why I don't know, but the two-year-old plants give us a much brighter flower than the young plants. I prefer to keep them in pots plunged all summer out of doors.

I am in duty bound to say that the Aphis Punk for which I had a good word to say at the Carnation Convention and which up to that time I had found most convenient to use and most efficacious in killing greenfly, has recently seemed to have no strength. I trust the manufacturers will inject some nicotine into their future make. Perhaps a great demand did not allow proper time to add the essential qualities, and the label and advertising was in greatest supply. "When you get a good thing, push it along," but be sure the quality is of the same excellence that gained the article a reputation. "Coleman's mustard," "Cross & Blackwell's pickles," "Lee & Perrin's Worcestershire sauce," "Bass' pale ale," and a number of those things they make in the "slow, old island," are the same to-day that they were 50 years ago, and no matter where you buy them, whether it be in Chicago, Bombay, or Botany Bay. So let us have Aphis Punk as you first made it, for then it killed greenfly as well as Mr. Ward's favorite cat.

I hope that you have most all your bedding plants shifted into their selling sizes, but your labor with them hotbed manure, and those without, is remarkable. Possibly the leaf absorbs some benefit, but the absence of extreme dryness has much more to do with it. It takes a little while to throw this material up to each row as you are setting the plants over, but the quality will repay a hundred fold; and then the sun can pour down on them without harm.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The first summer exhibition of the American Rose-Society will be held in the Winter Garden of the Eden Musee, New York City, June 12, 13 and 14.

The premium list has been issued and copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Mr. Leonard Barron, 136 Liberty street, New York. There is a large number of cash prizes in addition to many silver cups and medals. The display of hybrid perpetual and hybrid tea roses promises to be especially fine.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The printed proceedings of the ninth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, held at Buffalo February 15 and 16 last, has been issued and a copy has reached us.

It is handsomely printed and contains a stenographic report of all the discussions, in addition to the essays read at the meeting. These discussions, by the way, are always the most interesting part of the proceedings.

The report is a valuable addition to

is not finished. Now is the time of greatest growth and the zonal geraniums particularly want at least one stand-over before they are sold. It seems to do them an immense amount of good and the reason is the added light and air that you let in among them. An expert hand will move several thousand in a day and it must be done if you are going to produce good plants.

I don't like to advocate extra labor, but the difference between geraniums and fuchsias or anything that has over a 3-inch pot when plunged, or even half plunged, in hops or old the literature of the carnation, and Secretary Herr is to be congratulated on having put the matter together in such convenient form.

The Carnation Society is doing excellent work and its membership should be even larger than it is. You can become a member, which entitles you to the report, by sending $2 to Albert M. Herr, secretary, Lancaster, Pa.

CHICAGO.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club the coal question was discussed and action was finally taken by the appointment of a committee consisting of W. N. Rudd, A. McAdams, Peter Reinberg, Walter Retzer and J. C. Vaughan, to get the coal users together and endeavor to effect a saving by purchasing in quantity for those who desired to take advantage of such an arrangement.

It was ordered that a question box be made a feature of future meetings, and members having problems to solve are requested to write out their questions and deposit them in the box.

The programme arranged for the next meeting includes a paper on the planting of small grounds by the florist, by Walter Retzer, and W. L. Palinsky will open a discussion on some subject of his own selection, probably spring bedding plants.

Mr. Thomas Savage, Joliet, Ill., was elected to membership.

A 6-inch pot plant of Petite Ami chrysanthemum in fine bloom was exhibited by John Rearson. He apparently has chrysanthemums in bloom all the year around.

The Market.

With some the supply has shortened somewhat since our last report, but with others there has been quite a marked increase. But all note a lessened demand, especially local, and there is a big lot of stock in the market. Shipping demand holds up very well, but the recent rainy weather seems to have killed what little local demand was left after the paralyzing influence of the Dewey celebration. Possibly aquatic flowers were what were needed during the admiral's visit, and certainly they are the only kind for present conditions, for the streets have been literally flooded by the storms. Few possible flower buyers are on the streets at such times, and even the street men cannot move the accumulation.

Paeonies are arriving and in a few days the supply will no doubt be large.

The prices of roses and carnations have not materially changed from last week, but you get a higher grade for your money.

Out-door valley is arriving and has had the effect of lowering the price of the indoor product.

Lilac is being received in immense quantities and is moving by fits and starts. On Tuesday it seemed to be moving backwards. The price varies from 10 cents to 50 cents a bunch, quite a wide variation. This is due almost wholly to the way it is cut and bunched. That cut with good long stems and arranged in loose, shapely and attractive bunches is the kind that brings the top price, and certainly a little skillful labor devoted to the bunching brings mighty big returns. The little bunches of short stemmed flowers are always the ones that are left unsold and when they do sell they go at a very low figure.

Smilax is more plentiful and a shade lower in price. Lilies are good and plenty, but move slowly at low figures. Sweet peas are also hanging on the dealers' hands.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a good many Golden Gate roses and the best are selling readily at $10 to $12 a hundred, even during present conditions. It is an illustration of the desire for variety in rose stock.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are receiving the usual large quantity of outdoor bulbous flowers that come to them at this season, and there will be a flood of paeonies soon.

The shortening in the rose supply at some of the wholesalers' is undoubtedly due to the fact that quite a few growers are beginning to throw out and replant. This is notably the case with Bassett & Washburn. They have already replanted about a third of their Beauty houses and the teas are being likewise replaced as rapidly as possible. Mr. Bassett believes firmly in early planting, that he may have strong, vigorous plants ready for a good winter's work.

Wild smilax is about out of the market. The early spring in the south started the new growth and it is too soft to ship satisfactorily. Leucothoe and galax are also about past for the season.

Various Items.

At Morton Grove, Poehlmann Bros. are breaking ground for three new houses, each 20x300. They are the largest growers of chrysanthemums for this market and are rooting 150,000 cuttings this season. Their roses are in fine shape. They are already replanting some of their Beauty houses. A bench of Marguerites in large pots was a sea of flowers. They find them quite a profitable flower. At Christmas they marketed a cut of 17,000 flowers at $1 a hundred straight. They are still cutting fine lilies, but the bulk of the crop has been marketed. They forced 7,000 bulbs. They force valley largely and the crop now in shows some extra fine spikes. Mignonette has been a feature with them and it has proven a very profitable crop. The spikes are of medium size only, but there are lots of them, and they sell well, and, last but not least, the odor has not been lost through effort after size.

Adolph Poehlmann is negotiating for the purchase of land near the Morton Grove Greenhouses, and as soon as a perfect title is secured he will begin building.

At Niles Center, F. Stielow has his rebuilt range in fine shape. He is enthusiastic about the Garland iron gutter and says he would never dream of building any more houses without it. He feared that it would require more labor to put on the roof, but found it could be done fully as rapidly with the iron gutter as with the wooden one. The iron posts are set on a hard burned brick and the hole in the ground around the post filled in with cement. He expects his grandchildren to get just as good results from these houses as he does and that they will be "new" for an indefinite period.

Many of his rose beds are solid, with a layer of 3-inch sewer pipe under the prepared rose soil that is changed yearly. He is a believer in lime and evidences of it are seen under benches and in and around the sewer pipe in his solid beds.

Mr. Stielow finds that Brides and Maids like a heavier soil than other varieties. He still grows Buttercup carnations and says it is as free a bloomer as Gold Nugget.

John Brod is doing well with the former Schiller range of glass and has a house of La France in splendid bloom.

Adam Harrer has been cutting some splendid spikes of that white stock of which he keeps the name to himself.

Jacob Meyer's roses have bloomed well, but his young stock is troubled by a disease, of which we shall have more to say later.

The construction of Wietor Bros.' new range at Rogers Park is progressing rapidly. There are 16 houses, each 30x300, and they cover a little over 4 acres of ground.

McKellar & Winterson have begun manufacturing wreaths of the small prepared cycas leaves and are turning out some remarkably effective specimens. They meet with quick sale.

Weiland & Risch have filled their window with araucarias, which they are offering to the trade.

Bassett & Washburn have signed their coal contract for the ensuing year. It calls for 350 cars of coal. They used about 8,000 tons last season and expect to use about 10,000 tons the coming one.

The tulip beds at Lincoln Park are now a blaze of color and are well worth traveling a few miles to see. The hyacinths are still in fair condition, though a little past their best. The spikes from the Washington-grown bulbs were much the best of any of the hyacinths at the park this season.

Among recent visitors were W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia; Challenge Ventilator Evans, Sr., Richmond, Ind.; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

P. J. Hauswirth made a flying trip to St. Louis this week.

The bowlers rolled a few games at Anson's after the club meeting last Friday evening. They will bowl again at the same place tomorrow (Friday) evening and get the finish on their training for the coming contest with the St. Louis team, which is to take place at Anson's on the 13th. Reserved seats have been arranged for the spectators and Captain Winterson says it will be a hot time.

The Park and Outdoor Art Association meets in the Art Institute, this city, June 5, 6 and 7.

The American Association of Nurserymen also meets in this city next month, at the Chicago Beach Hotel.

Mr. G. H. Pieser, secretary of Kennicott Bros. Co., is in poor health and has gone to West Baden, Ind., for a two weeks' stay.

BUFFALO.

The principal feature at present writing is the large supply of flowers. They are coming in from every direction and in larger quantities than can be profitably consumed. We must expect that, and possibly no one is suffering by the overflow, and the public are getting some fine roses for the popular price of 5 cents. Good carnations are not in such great supply. Violets are done for the season, but in their place we have an abundance of sweet peas, and they are favorites with all. A great many flowers are disposed of just now and they need be, to keep down the stock.

How strange it is to hear of the floods out west and 9 inches of rainfall in Colorado during April, lands that want irrigating usually by May 1, while we are actually parched; only a few flakes of snow and scarcely rain enough to lay the dust since the last great snow storm in March. Thousands of acres of forest fires in the nearby counties of Pennsylvania.

Carnation planting is going on just now. This is a long time after the orthodox date for this most important operation, but was as soon as we could get at it this spring.

W. J. Palmer & Sons have a 150x20 foot house of Liberty rose planted and growing. This is wise and no doubt will be a most excellent investment, and could only be improved on by having two instead of one. Those wonderful flowers that W. J., Sr., saw in Toronto convinced him that Liberty well grown is a wonder.

That rural town of Corfu has been shipping a lot of flowers of late and has not done badly all winter. Old John Briar Root Weigel has been running the houses of Mrs. Edwards this winter and has done well. T. A. Webb has given up roses entirely and has five large houses of carnations and four of lettuce. He thinks the latter pays about as well as the flowers. Mr. James Farnham has sold his house on Railroad avenue and is building on the main street, where he intends to remove his glass and add to it. Mrs. Tyrrell tells me she is better pleased with this year's business than for several past. The greatest cut of carnations I ever saw at one time was in the three long houses of Edward Giddings. I have a picture of his Daybreak house, taken a few days before Easter, which will convince anyone that Daybreak is not yet gone. It was remarkable.

At the east end of the village on a 12-acre lot Aleck Scott holds forth, and his specialty is girl babies, but incidentally he has four fine houses of carnations of many kinds, two of violets, about gone, and one house that is a most pleasant place to smoke a good 5-cent cigar (that's enough to pay). The red, almost purple, foliage of the Kaiserin Augusta roses that are planted in a solid bed, rested all winter and started April 1, will give you a feeling of peace and contentment, and the fumes of even a Dutch drummer's cigar would seem like the Cuban weed.

A country village is a dirty looking place "just as snow goes down," but Nature, in spite of man's vileness and ignorance and laziness, steps in and covers a multitude of sins with her grass and leaves and other blessings. Corfu would be a pretty place if it were not for two unsightly spots. One is the Union Hotel and the other is the ruins of Mr. Gidding's old houses. When he moved them last fall he made three new out of five old ones, and the site they once occupied is now a dreadful sight. He forgot to clean up and the ruins of a junk shop cannot be worse to look at than the remnants of a broken down greenhouse. W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The glut is still with us and for the last ten days stock of all kinds has been coming in in large quantities, and the warm weather has injured the quality of the stock quite seriously. Saturday, Dewey day, the stock sold out quite clean, as nearly all florists had something to do, and besides, there has been plenty of funeral work the past week, which helped to clean up some of the white stuff.

Really good selected stock held the same figures as last week; the poorer grades much lower, especially in large lots. Outside of the work for the reception of Admiral Dewey and funeral work, there is not much doing, and complaints of poor business are general. Transient trade is almost monopolized by the fakirs. It has been a long time since prices on carnations, roses and other flowers have been so low. Carnations and roses have suffered most, as more of them have been coming in than the market could consume. Harrisii and callas are down with the rest and are a greater glut than ever before; almost any price will buy them. Violets are all out. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are coming in from the open ground, but there is very little demand for them. Sweet peas are coming in large quantities and sell fairly well at 25 cents per 100.

Various Items.

The flower beds and lawns at the parks, and especially Forest Park, present at this time a most attractive appearance. Young Fred Pape, the superintendent, deserves great praise for the way he handles the work.

Visitors: Mr. Denker of St. Charles, Mo., and Henry Johan of Collinsville. Both report business good with them. Our old friend Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, is also in town attending the Red Men's meeting at East St. Louis.

Riessen Floral Co. had the honor of furnishing the flowers for the Dewey banquet at the Planters' Hotel. It was quite a large affair and well handled. They also furnished 1,000 roses a day for the anniversary of Mermod-Jaccard Jewelry Co. They report big business all of last week.

A severe wind, rain and hail storm swept our city Saturday night and early Sunday morning, causing considerable damage throughout the city and county. It did little or no damage to glass. The worst damage was done to park and fruit trees. The damage is estimated at $20,000 to orchards alone.

OBITUARY.

We regret to have to record the death of Helen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis, on May 1, aged 12 years and 9 months. She had recovered from an attack of diphtheria, but paralysis of the heart followed and death resulted in spite of every effort made to save the young life.

At the funeral there were floral designs from nearly every florist in St. Louis, and the St. Louis Florists' Club sent a large pillow with "Helen" lettered upon it.

Mr. Beneke has a host of friends in the trade and all are deeply grieved to learn of his affliction. He has requested us to express to his brother florists his appreciation of the kindness they have shown him in his hour of sorrow.

BOSTON.

Floral news is pretty thin, and yet there is much being done. All kinds of flowers are coming in quite plentifully and practically none going to waste. Neither is there so heavy an overflow of them upon the streets as during one or two previous weeks. Back Bay florists begin to complain of a falling off in their business, proving that summer is approaching. Well, the almanac talks that way, too, but the weather does not yet remind us of it.

Prices have been steadier this week, probably because salesmen are discouraged in trying to obtain better. American Beauties, in 3-foot lengths, sell for $3 or $4 per dozen; 2-foot at $2; 1-foot at $1. Jacks are getting scarce. Meteors in fair supply at from 2 to 12½ cents each; pink, white and yellow, enough at from 1 cent on culls to 12½ cents for a very few extra. Pinks, from 1 to 3 cents; violets getting scarce; but a few very good ones, and half a dollar a hundred is about the limit on the best now. There has been a flush time on Easter lilies, but now they are not crowding in so fast so that prices have struggled to 6 and 8 cents each. Small white flowers for filling funeral designs plentiful enough at fair prices; smaller bulb goods holding out very well yet. Bedding plants are getting ripe, but the weather is yet a little cool to move them swiftly.

City Forester Doogue is using a heavier appropriation than usual and the amount of work being done upon the common and public garden is simply enormous. It seems he has over 30,000 trees under his charge. Many of them are getting a "shave and a haircut," and much work upon grass land is being done, and there is already a good display of flowers.

The May exhibition of flowers, fruit and vegetables held in Horticultural Hall was very fine and attracted a large crowd of admirers.

An attractive feature of the show was a vase containing a large bouquet composed of blooms of the new rose "Queen of Edgely," originated at the nurseries of the Floral Exchange in Philadelphia.

It is a pink American Beauty. This beautiful flower is a full blood sister of the American Beauty, having the same parentage, the same grace, fragrance and habit of her lovely sister, the only distinction between the two being the color.

There was a good display of vegetables. - B. T.

"FAKE WRITE-UPS."

As reports show that the class of journals (?) mentioned below have begun sending their letters to florists as well as manufacturers, the following report of an association of trade journals, of which the Florists' Review is a member, may be timely:

"At a recent meeting of the Chicago Trade Press Association, an organization whose membership comprises the most influential trade journals in the West, it was determined to take some action to protect manufacturing and mercantile firms from the depredation of the 'fake write-up men.'"

"A number of alleged trade journals, several of them being printed in the Southern States, send out thousands of circular letters to merchants and manufacturers, enclosing proofs of ingeniously prepared write-ups. Each person to whom a letter is directed is led to believe that he has been selected because of the prominence of this firm. The men whom it is sought to victimize are informed that no charge will be made for the printing of this complimentary notice, but that sample copies will be sold at 15 cents per copy, or at 8 cents per copy in thousand lots. These journals have no legitimate standing in the community, and represent nothing except the desire of their managers to extort money from business men. The circular letters are so shrewdly worded and the office of publication is usually so far removed from the persons to whom the letters are sent, that many firms have been victimized. Almost every department of industry is represented by one or more reputable journals, and manufacturers and business men generally are advised to communicate with publishers of whom they have some knowledge, before being led into fake schemes.

"The several papers comprising the membership of the Chicago Trade Press Association have agreed to print this statement with a view of protecting their patrons, and business men generally, from loss through such deception."

ORANGE, N. J.

A very flattering audience, considering the busy season with the cultivators, gathered at the monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, on Wednesday, May 2, in the society's rooms, in Orange, to listen to the veteran horticulturist and pomologist, Dr. J. B. Ward, of Lyons Farms, who delivered an instructive and scientific address on the culture of the strawberry. The doctor touched successively upon preparation, planting, varieties, treatment after fruiting, manuring, mulching, etc., and much interesting matter was brought out in the discussion which followed. In connection with forcing, President Peter Duff was called upon, Dr. Ward preferring to listen to one who has had more experience on this particular point.

The committee upon the free distribution of chrysanthemum plants to the school children reported encouragingly. Additional offers of plants were received from George Smith, Popken & Collins and C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y. Much interest is being shown in the scheme by the school teachers and pupils. The distribution will take place in two weeks.

Schedules of the Rose Society were presented to members. J. B. D.

The Florists' Manual

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

PHILADELPHIA.

At the Florists' Club meeting of May 1, Wm. Craig, in the absence of his father, read a paper on "Experience Gained by Easter Trade of 1900." It was an interesting subject and well gotten up. Too bad that there was not a larger attendance.

At the above meeting Henry F. Michell said that he recently had an interview with a grower of lilies from Bermuda, who reports the outlook for healthy stock much better than for the past few years. This industry having had such a setback the past few years, some extreme measures had to be taken. On the appeal of the lily growers, the English government sent specialists to study the disease. Now not more than 5 per cent of the crop shows any signs of the trouble. A grower found with diseased bulbs is compelled to destroy them. The Bermuda growers are investigating the soils, climate, etc., of Puerto Rico, with the view of planting lilies there.

Notes.

P. Alberger, East Ridge avenue and Huntington street, reports a rushing business in bedding out and filling vases. They are about to pull down the old houses and replace them with new ones.

W. L. Schaeffer, 223 North Sixteenth street, has been very busy the past week with funeral work. He has also a big lot of garden work on hand.

A great many growers of bedding stock in this vicinity are already sold out.

Prices: Beauties, $1 to $3; Kaiserins, Brides, Maids, Meteors, Golden Gates, Morgans, $5 to $6; Liberty, $8 to $10; Perles, $3 to $5; carnations, ordinary $1 to $1.50 per 100, fancy $2 to $2.50; callas and Harrisii, $8 to $10; valley, $2 to $4; daisies, $1 to $1.50; mignonette, $2 to $3; sweet peas, 75 cents to $1 per 100; adiantums, $1; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, 20 cents.

WASHINGTON.

Business since Easter has been good with everyone; but with warm weather, stock of all kinds has deteriorated in quality. Beauties are selling at 25 to 50 cents; Kaiserins, 10 to 12½ cents; Brides and Maids at 4 and 6 cents; La France and Gates at 6 and 8 cents. Carnations, 1 to 2 cents; mignonette, 1 cent; peas, 1 cent; gladiolus, 8 cents; smilax, 20 cents.

On account of the warm, dry spell some of our growers are backward in planting out-of-door stock. Young carnation stock in general seems to be better this season than last. Bedding plants seem to go a little slow for this season of the year.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.....Caxton Building.....CHICAGO.

BANGOR, ME.

Funeral work has kept Adam Sekenger very busy since Easter, which was the best on record. The dull weather prevailing makes flowers scarce.

Walter Mott arrived on the 5th in a snow storm and said it made him pine for his sunny home at Riverton. We hope for bright weather very soon, when planting will be rushed.

Carl Beers has struck upon a novel plan in holding weekly auction sales, well advertised. I cannot state whether or not the plan is a success.

F. H. Moses is making preparations to open his store at Bar Harbor and anticipates a flourishing season.

Wm. Miller, superintendent of the Mount Desert Nurseries, thinks the Paris Exposition will be a strong counter attraction. Next year he hopes to take in the Pan-American. He could make a fine display at Buffalo of pines alone, of which he has a complete collection.

J. E. Killen, of New York, was a recent caller and gave an interesting talk on the lily disease, chiefly the cause. The effect we are acquainted with. He sees a remedy in sight, which he will impart later on. The lily problem is an all important one with the craft, the consensus of opinion being that Japanese stock is the purest and best to force, but as the time of receipt cannot be depended upon, Harrisii will yet be forced in some numbers. Those who kept the bulbs growing from the start have been the most successful.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business is still very good, there being plenty of funeral work. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful. Some very good lilies are to be seen yet, but roses are getting small and are badly mildewed. Some very fine carnations are coming in, such as Triumph and Bratt, which are of fine quality. The florists are through planting their carnations out in the field.

Jacob Schultz will rebuild several houses this coming summer. Joseph Coenen & Co. report trade very good and Wood & Stubbs, seedsmen, are still very busy filling orders for seeds and bulbs. E. G. Reimers reports his Easter trade the best in years. Hy Fuchs is cutting some very fine carnations and has lots of funeral work. William Walker has some very fine Kaiserin roses just coming in. C. H. Kunzman is building a new carnation house. C. W. Reimers' place is in fine shape at the present time. Wm. Mann is still up to his ears in business—funeral work, lots of it.

Some very fine beds of tulips are to be seen in Cave Hill cemetery this season and also some very fine beds of tulips in St. Louis cemetery.

HY LICHTFELD.

COATESVILLE, PA.—James Brown has lately added a mushroom house. His plant houses are in fine shape.

FRESHLY IMPORTED ORCHIDS!!

We beg to announce that after three years of futile efforts, we have at last succeeded in collecting a grand lot of plants, which we now beg to offer.

This beautiful cattleya has been up to the present the "missing link" in the chain of a continuous flowering season of cattleyas the year round. Cattleya Percivalliana ONLY will fill the gap left blank between Cattleya labiata and Cattleya Trianae, and will prove itself to be a welcome acquisition and an ideal Christmas Cattleya. Also the following, just arrived:

FINE PLANTS, WELL LEAVED AND FREE FROM ALL DISEASE.
 Cattleya Mendelii, in good condition,
 Cattleya Citrina, Cattleya Mossiae,
 Laelia Majalis, L. Anceps, L. Autumnalis,
 Epidendrum Vittellinum Majus,
 Oncidium Tigrinum,
 Odontoglossum Rossi Majus,
 Dendrobium Phalaenopsis Schroederianum, D.
 Formosum giganteum, D. Wardianum,
 Vanda Coerulea.

Due shortly:—Laelia Anceps Alba and Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Lager & Hurrell's ORCHID RENOVATOR, specially prepared by us, guaranteed to restore to health and vigor any kind of Orchid in a run-down condition. Instructions how to use it will be furnished with each order.
 Price, $10.00 per 100 lbs.

Genevieve Lord The Peer of All Light Pink Carnations.

Speaking from a dollar and cent standpoint the above is literally true. There may be some larger, but when put to the test of an exacting commercial fire, none will stand the test and bring in the returns like Genevieve Lord. Its color is the kind that sells at sight. Stem the best of any carnation. A perfect, non-bursting calyx. Beautiful distinct form. In fact it has nearly everything that is wanted in a pink carnation. Customers recognize it at a glance, describing it as "that beautiful pink on the long stem."

Prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock all sold prior to that date.

PRICES: Doz., $2.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $75.00

Catalogue free to all applicants, containing complete description of the above as well as all the big new ones, at introducers' prices; the best of last year's novelties and standard sorts, also a fine stock of new and standard sorts of chrysanthemums.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.Club Meeting.

The Florists' Association held the regular monthly meeting at Garfield Park Tuesday evening, May 1. Those who came early were shown through the greenhouses by Mr. McKeand and they all spoke very highly of the excellent condition of the plants. Mr. Langstaff presided at the meeting. Mr. O'Pfium gave us a lecture on temperature that was very humorous and much enjoyed by all. The question, "Is Greenhouse Stock Taxable?" was brought up and quite a discussion followed. Would like to have the editor and the readers of the Review give us their opinions.

Florists here will try to buy their coal for the coming winter as soon as possible, fearing a rise in prices. Some of the members are clubbing together to buy their supply from the lowest bidder. Messrs. Junge, Hartje and Heidenreich were appointed a committee to see different coal agents and get bids. Next meeting will be held at Garfield Park, and there will be a discussion on rose soil by our rose growers.

Notes.

The bedding season is now here, and as it advances the florists have their hands full. A few of the market florists made an agreement to raise the price on bedding stuff, but it's the same old story. Some of them will agree to anything and then turn round and cut prices. How do they ever expect to get decent prices for their stuff under such conditions?

Mr. Braendlein is cutting some very fine sweet peas that are much admired.

Good roses are scarce, while carnations are plentiful and sell cheap.

Mr. Rieman had a vase of a white carnation seedling on exhibition at the last meeting which, with a little better stem, would be hard to beat. Baur & Smith exhibited some carnation sports that were very good. Both received honorable mention. FRED.

DENVER, COLO.

The following scores were made by Denver bowlers Tuesday May 1.

Mr. Applegate rolled with the club. He is not a "new bowler," though, as he did fairly well for a starter:

	1st.	2d.	3d.	Ave.
Benson ..	133	136	125	131 1-3
Applegate ..	168	201	154	172 1-3
Lindsay ..	118	150	114	127 1-3
Berry ..	152	143	149	148
Scott ..	214	10	193	195 2-3

P. S.

RICHMOND, IND.—E. T. Grave is building two new houses, each 26x200, both for carnations. E. G. Hill is on the way to Europe on a business trip.

OTTAWA, ONT.—The district swept by the big fire is a sad sight, but am glad to say there were no florists in the part of the city that was burned.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Mean, wet, cold, soggy weather is now our portion, with frost thrown in by way of variety; still it is good carnation growing weather, and those who are fortunate enough to have them all in are thanking their lucky stars.

Business continues brisk, shipping steady. Prices are about the same as in my last report, with a surplus of Daybreaks on hand and the supply of white and red about equal to the demand. G. F. CRABB.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—A good thing! Greeks are getting Buffalo's surplus of roses and carnations and selling them on the streets here at 25 cents a dozen for roses; carnations, 15 cents. What will the store men do? S.

TOLEDO, O.—A terrific hail storm did considerable damage to greenhouses here on May 7.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

GENTLEMEN:—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers.
They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far
I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers.
They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Decoration Day.

Let us stop a moment and think, and ask ourselves these questions: Are we alone responsible for our success? Do we owe nothing to this country? Have we done or do we do our duty as Americans? Do we realize or appreciate the full meaning of Decoration Day? Or has life any ambition or thought beyond that of self and its gratifications? Many may read this and mutter, "I'm satisfied; I'm making a living—what else should I care for?"

How small man appears as viewed from a high pinnacle; how often he really is so when judged from the point of true patriotism! "The land we live in" means only the land we rob or despise to many, but we are glad to say that element is daily becoming smaller. Yet to-day we may see many who forget their disguise and become ridiculous in their adoration of some foreign and corrupt monarch. But they will not go back and enjoy the glory of living under that potentate, not they, indeed, for they'd go hungry if they did. They like the United States, for the dollars are large and plentiful here. 'Tis a queer world and this country is the amphitheater for its tragedy and comedy—a stage upon which tolerance is forever fighting ignorance and on the latter prosperity with inexcusable impartiality often smiles in vain.

It is impossible for us to picture the American to whom the numerous small mounds in Arlington yonder are mere tufts of grass and nothing more; such a person doesn't exist. Yet it is true that there is a vast army of people here who eat up the products of the land and enjoy all its munificence without knowing or caring how such was made possible; envy cannot enter into any argument here, for there's room for all, but time is an impatient master and the ideal of everything depends on unity. That is the principle, the ambition of floriculture; our standards may vary exceedingly, but it is idealism we aim for; we mistake in not more forcibly applying it to the nation. Decoration Day should mean more to the florist than it does to the average citizen, because in addition to the sentiment or the eruption of memory, it is a day of special recognition of his art; the public turn to him for materials by which they may express all that is best in them, and if betimes the results are unsatisfactory the florist is often to blame, mostly for two reasons: he is not in sympathy with the occasion or the stock is inappropriate or too poor.

In our business it pays to foster patriotism and the best way to encourage is to set example. Even a mercenary motive behind such example need scarcely be discernible and the habit may become a virtue. Life, after all is said and done, is but a short bit of road; it is immaterial what part of the world it may be in, 'tis all the same and just as short. The ruins or glories strewn along it are but the results of our own acts; many times the river of adversity can be bridged only by the strong and ambitious; those who fail should not be condemned, at least hastily. What we have been writing here applies to the average American florist. We know—you all know—some particular man who grows his plants well for certain special occasions and his success comes quickly; others who either cannot or will not produce good stock, their struggles are pitiable.

A vastly larger quantity of good plants could be disposed of on Memorial Day if individual and united action would be concentrated to that end. We don't believe in giving away stock where such would tend to cheapen, demoralize or degrade the business. Heaven knows it costs much to produce plants and flowers and the public only too seldom recognize that fact. It is only that in the failure to push business on a day like this the florist is at fault, and may also be suspected of lack of interest in the event.

Last year we advocated the plan of having the local florists decorate the public soldiers' monument gratis. This would not have cost them much, it would be patriotic and remind the public of their duty. There is scarcely a town or city in the Union without some monument of national significance, and they should be decorated by the florists, inasmuch as otherwise they will not be attended to. Years ago it was customary to elaborately decorate all the public statues; some vile work used to be done on them, too. We've seen Lincoln's arm filled with potted plants, sometimes a wreath of hemlock 'round his neck. Grant's chest covered with an immortal shield or a wreath on his hat. Farragut grasping a tin-foiled anchor. And Washington and Lafayette would be transformed into comedians.

We would rather assert that the reasons for the lack of monument decorations to-day are due more to the bad taste displayed in the work of former years than to the decline of American patriotism. We have seen the beautiful creation, the soul-dream of some eminent sculptor, made a thing of ridicule by the florist whose duty it was to still more beautify, and can we blame the people if they stop it, or if other arts refuse to recognize the full importance of ours? The sculptor of to-day may in confidence procure his models from the floral artist of ancient Athens, and the floral artist of to-day should be equal to the highest standard of refined art.

We may imagine that the tendency of current styles incline to the large and gaudy displays, but it is our duty to advocate substance and beauty; for instance, a laurel wreath of two or three thousand leaves carefully arranged can be more expressive than a quantity of laurel streamers or entwined. In this class of work we should not go in so much for covering space as we should to conform to the outlines of the subject and yet individualize our own design. Harmony in work is like that element in society—both produce pleasure. In the case of equestrian or other statues, the florist's work should be confined to the base or pedestal, and even there a concentration of effort gives best results. It may be different in the decoration of monoliths or other forms, but clumsiness or indifferent work will spoil all.

Appropriate material is a very important matter to consider. Decoration Day should not be considered in any funereal light; it is no longer a day of mourning; it is a day of fond memories and great joy, for with garland and flower we pay our tribute to the dead and our joy has its spring in the fact that the country is secure and prosperous because of the sacrifices made and the ever present spirit of emulation.

Fortunately, the celebration occurs at a time of the year when an abundance of material is available, and the lateness of the season this time will provide even a greater variety than usual. Colored flowers are most suitable; the variety of color is immaterial—the grouping of them is essential. In extensive work of course a separation of color is desirable, such as wreaths or garlands composed of all one shade. In the matter of greenery, we should remember that the laurel and palm are most appropriate emblems, still fine effects can be obtained by the use of almost any kind of foliage; we regret, though, that there are many florists to-day whose ideas of appropriateness is limited to galax leaves; they advocate them for everything because they are cheap, and their ability is limited.

For a long time it has been customary for school children and other organizations to decorate monuments with quantities of small potted plants. The intention is sublime, but the result disappointing. In most cases it is possible to plant them, thus insuring several months of pleasure, instead of permitting them to dry out in pots and become a nuisance. A special effort should be made to induce organizations to observe the beautiful custom of decorating the graves, and the right kind of material provided at reasonable price. Where there are public parades in honor of the day no man should be without his sprig of green or boutonniere of red, white and blue flowers, and they should not be artificial or dried.

The American flag is a grand emblem—a garland of roses does not destroy its beauty. Whatever we do this Decoration Day, let us be careful to give satisfaction. To make this earth more beautiful, to assist nature in providing humanity with all that is purest, sweetest and brightest, is the special mission of the florist. Let us not be content with being mere providers. Let us demonstrate an equality in all that is good, all that is American, on May 30th. IVERA.

WIRE DESIGNS.

The casket lyre makes an exquisite design—that is, if it is properly done; all casket designs are, of course, flat. This particular one is long and tapering, an idealic rather than an exact reproduction of the ancient Egyptian musical instrument. It must also be made compact and the strings must be of tinsel braid or silk. Classic emblems should always be of rich material; they look abominable if of cheap or clumsy arrangement. This makes up specially fine solid with violets, silvered wires, a spray of white or lavender orchids at the place where the strings are fastened to the cross-beam. The design is usually raised on feet a little on the slant from top to bottom. By "feet" we don't mean stands or wires, which spoil the beauty of the design, only short supports which don't show, yet help to lend character to the work.

The casket heart is very long, in the hands of some it is easy to make it appear abnormally so, but an artist can make it appear more expressive than the round, flabby, chunky looking thing most wireworkers send out to represent the incubator of all that's good. This should also be made solid of one kind of flower, except a cluster of pink or red either in the center or half way down the left side. The usual size made is 36x16 inches.

Another casket design is the Empire wreath, copied from the principal decorative idea employed in the days of Napoleon I. We read of how Napoleon entered the cathedral at his coronation ceremony wearing a wreath of golden laurel. This particthe Empire wreath is a mere presumption on the part of the wire-worker, for in the hands of a careless florist it is apt to be made to look like two horseshoes.

The styles in funeral designs, like everything else, vary and change with the whims and dictates of circumstance. day; even the pillows, anchors, stars, hearts, and the designs of the past 15-years are no longer asked for unless in poorer sections, where size, or perverted taste, or limited intelligence rules. Of course, size counts for much to-day, especially where subscriptions are raised to pay for designs, but funeral designs of to-day as a rule are made more with a view to quality and good sense than they have ever been before. The standing wreath may make more show, but as an expressive design it is a failure; the stand makes it a circle on a stick, nothing more. IVERA.

Nowadays the back of every well made wreath, etc., is carefully greened, thus insuring more harmony. Foliage has taken the place of tin foil in almost every kind of work. A WRINKLE IN BULB GROWING.

The grower of the finest bulbous flowers for the Chicago market is undoubtedly Mr. August Jurgens. He grows large quantities of hyacinths in pots and pans for Easter, and the spikes are always large, not too tall, and with thick, strong stems. We asked him if these fine spikes were the result of careful selection of the bulbs, or of the method of growing, and he replied that it was due entirely to the way the bulbs were treated.

Though there is a good deal in the temperature given, it being frequently changed as the needs of the plant demand, considerable of the size of spike and stoutness of stem is gained by removing a portion of the foliage and throwing all the strength of the bulb into the flower. In the case of some that need more strength than others, all the foliage is removed, some without foliage being frequently desirable in pans of six or more bulbs. As late in the season as Easter there is not apt to be any unevenness in growth in the bulbs in a pan, but when such is noticed the lagging flower spike can be encouraged by the removal of the foliage. When this can not be done or is not sufficient, he cuts out the backward bulb and inserts another of same kind from a 4-inch pot.

The partial or entire removal of the foliage from bulbous plants has proved useful with him in many ways. In the case of lily of the valley, where the flower spike is deficient in length, he removes one leaf, and this always stimulates the growth of the spike. If the spikes are unusually short he removes all the foliage and depends upon the foliage of other batches for leaves enough to put with the spikes in marketing.

But where the foliage has been removed, more care must be exercised not to overwater, for the plant has little surface left with which to throw off excess of water.

In a batch of paper white narcissus in which the flower stem showed but declined to grow long, the desired result was accomplished by the removal of the foliage.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

Kindly tell us through The Review the proper distance apart to plant Asparagus plumosus under glass for cut strings. For years we have been growing it one foot apart, with strings every six inches, but find it gets badly tangled and runs together. How can we remedy this? We have one house devoted to this asparagus and think of planting another. K.

The principal thing to observe in growing asparagus, and even smilax, to avoid that tangle, is to give them prompt attention as soon as they want strings. If neglected they soon get in wreaths or garlands composed of all one shade. In the matter of greenery, we should remember that the laurel and palm are most appropriate emblems, still fine effects can be obtained by the use of almost any kind of foliage; we regret, though, that there are many florists to-day whose ideas of appropriateness is limited to galax leaves; they advocate them for everything because they are cheap, and their ability is limited.

For a long time it has been customary for school children and other organizations to decorate monuments with quantities of small potted plants. The intention is sublime, but the result disappointing. In most cases it is possible to plant them, thus insuring several months of pleasure, instead of permitting them to dry out in pots and become a nuisance. A special effort should be made to induce organizations to observe the beautiful custom of decorating the graves, and the right kind of material provided at reasonable price. Where there are public parades in honor of the day no man should be without his sprig of green or boutonniere of red, white and blue flowers, and they should not be artificial or dried.

The American flag is a grand emblem—a garland of roses does not destroy its beauty. Whatever we do this Decoration Day, let us be careful to give satisfaction. To make this earth more beautiful, to assist nature in providing humanity with all that is purest, sweetest and brightest, is the special mission of the florist. Let us not be content with being mere providers. Let us demonstrate an equality in all that is good, all that is American, on May 30th. IVERA.

WIRE DESIGNS.

The casket lyre makes an exquisite design—that is, if it is properly done; all casket designs are, of course, fiat. This particular one is long and tapering, an idealic rather than an exact reproduction of the ancient Egyptian musical instrument. It must also be made compact and the strings must be of tinsel braid or silk. Classic emblems should always be of rich material; they look abominable if of cheap or clumsy arrangement. The principal thing to observe in growing asparagus, and even smilax, to avoid that tangle, is to give them prompt attention as soon as they want strings. If neglected they soon get in such a muss that it is almost impossible to get them going again and making a fine, useful string. Guide these young shoots the way they shall climb, and when they are older they will not depart from it. This is a truth with climbing plants, but not so certain with other shooting and sprouting things.

One foot apart is rather close. I would rather have them 15 inches each way, or, better still, 18 inches between the rows and 15 inches between the plants. There is one great authority in this country on asparagus, namely, William H. Elliott of Brighton, Mass., who like all good gardeners, is ready to impart his valuable knowledge for the good of mankind. WM. SCOTT.

PRICES OF BEDDING PLANTS.

Mr. Robert Kift, in an able article in the "Philadelphia Florist," quotes the prices on bedding plants this season and adds that they seem too low. Three and four cents for 3-inch stuff and 7 and 8 cents for 4-inch must seem low to the man who broke the record with the prices he obtained for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. These spring plant prices certainly allow him little or no chance for record breaking. Yet when one sees the thousands and thousands of little soft-wooded spring plants which have sprung up in a night, as it were, their cheapness is hardly surprising.

This year Easter was late, too late for the spring plant men. Their stock in consequence is much smaller than usual to-day at the opening of the planting-out season. There are some fine blocks of plants on the benches, but the bulk of the plants are small, seemingly dear at last season's figures.

It is very unusual to find the grower of bedding plants resorting to the trick of overshifting his stock in order to get full value from his product. This year, however, there are plenty of plants in 4-inch pots that would hardly sell as full-sized 3's. The man who has a contract for planting a bed that last year cost him $14.00 in material (200 geraniums at $7.00 a hundred), may consider himself lucky if he does not have to buy more plants to make his work creditable.

R. E. WORG.

GERANIUMS.

Referring to the single scarlet geranium Gen. Sheridan, Mr. August Jurgens, Chicago, says it has been grown here for many years. He knows of no better bedder, especially for a very hot position, such as against the front of a south facing brick or stone house, but at the same time it is not a first-class market plant, as it isn't very showy as a pot plant in the spring, unless extra well grown. But as a bedder it is a wonder, standing in the hottest sun and blooming continuously with remarkable freedom.

Considering market qualities as well as bedding qualities, he places S. A. Nutt at the head of his list, and says it is surely the best of all dark scarlets. John A. Doyle, a new one, he thinks very highly of, and says it is by all odds the best of the light scarlets. Alphonse Riccard is a splendid red, and Francis Perkins decidedly the finest of the double pinks. La Favorite is his best white.

Of Mrs. E. H. Hill, salmon, there seem to be two forms. In one the flowers are split, while in the other they are full and round. The latter form is the one to have. Beaute Poitevine is a fine semi-double salmon, and Mme. Jaulin a semi-double peach-blossom pink.

Mr. Jurgens says most people water their geraniums far too much, and he has noticed the result of this error in the parks and on private places where competent gardeners are employed. Overwatering results in a rank growth and fewer flowers. He would never water geranium beds more frequently than once a week, even in the hottest and driest weather. He would then give a good soaking and let them alone for a week.

PANDANUS VEITCHII.

This plant is one of the very best house plants under cultivation when it receives intelligent care. Many of our retailers won't take the trouble to teach their customers how to care for the pandanus, and so miss many sales. Nearly every plant lover admires Pandanus Veitchii, and nearly every one can grow it in a dwelling house if they will use a little judgment in its care.

Pandanus Veitchii requires little or no moisture on the leaves in winter; it must not be kept very wet; it must not be allowed to get a sudden chill.

Remember these three points, and with good stock, properly grown and properly potted, you can succeed with Pandanus Veitchii wherever other foliage plants can be grown.

JOHN WELSH YOUNG.

BUTTED GLASS.

We expect to reglaze some of our houses this summer and are in doubt whether to butt or lap the glass. Would prefer butted glass only for the fact that when a pane is broken there is sometimes trouble to find another of exactly the same size to put in its place. If it should be a trifle larger it won't go in, and if it is a trifle smaller it will leave a crack for air to get in or heat to escape. What does Mr. Scott say?

HIAWATHA.

Evidently from the above the houses have been previously glazed with lapped glass. Then the sash bars would be entirely unsuited for butted glass. Don't attempt to butt glass unless you have the bar and cap which is made for butted glass. Butted glass on the ordinary sash bar and fastened down with brads or laid with putty would be an everlasting nuisance and failure; and from this mistaken use of the method has arisen much of the abuse of the system.

If you had the cypress bar and cap you would not find the difficulty you mention about putting in a new light, because the new one goes in from the bottom and the others are pushed up tightly, and you can always make a fit at the bottom by raising or lowering the nail or whatever you use as a stop. Once more, don't attempt to butt glass without the correct bar and cap. Other methods are dismal failures. W. S.

A ROSE DISEASE.

We recently inspected some diseased rose plants at the establishment of Mr. Jacob Meyer, Morton Grove, Ill. It seemed to attack young plants in the 2-in pot stage only, and when the plants had successfully reached the 4-inch pot stage they seemed to be immune. The fungus seemed to always start at a bud or thorn on the side of the stem and work down to the roots. Numbers of plants were noted where the bark was badly affected and the roots still in a healthy condition. This rather suggested that the germs of the fungus were carried to the plant in the water, but if this is true, why are not the young growths of the older plants also affected? Can some practical man suggest an explanation?

Some specimens were forwarded to Prof. J. C. Arthur of Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and his letter regarding them is printed below. He also sent us the drawing of the fungus from which the accompanying engraving is made.

The young rose plants came in good condition, and it was not difficult to see that they were suffering from a semi-parasitic fungous disease. The fungus works under the bark, entering through the lower cut end, or through a wound in the stem made by breaking away a thorn, leaf, or bud. Having gotten a start inside the cutting or small plant, the tender cells are killed, and the bark soon turns black. After that the roots and leaves die because the stem can no longer transport the healthy sap.

The fungus is one of several that are known as cutting-bed fungi, although this particular one is new to me. It forms colorless threads that grow out into little glistening white tufts on the surface of the bark, just discernible by the naked eye. On the end of each branch is borne a spore, that finally drops away, and at once is ready to grow into more fungous threads to spread the disease. The spores are colorless, and either before or after dropping away from the stalks that bear them, become two-celled by a cross wall, and occasionally three-celled.

In all details affecting treatment this fungus agrees with that of the well known Botrytis, which also attacks roses in this same manner. Both fungi can flourish on decaying flowers, leaves, and almost any vegetable matter, and only occasionally take to killing growing plants.

The first thing to do in ridding a house of such pests is to fumigate with sulphur. If flowers of sulphur be evaporated over a flame in an open vessel until the air of the house is decidedly pungent, and the process repeated twice a week for two or three weeks, there should be no more trouble from surface infection for some time. During the operation the sulphur should be watched and not allowed to burst into flame, or the contents of the house may be ruined.

But the fungus can also flourish in rich soil where sulphur fumes do not readily penetrate. To guard against this danger, the cutting bench should only receive sand that is clean and never before used in a greenhouse. Until the plants are well established, the soil should not be too rich, and if a naturally rich loam must be taken, as in some prairie regions, sand should be added to the soil when the cuttings are first potted off. Of course fresh soil that has had no chance to be contaminated from indoor use is safest.

J. C. ARTHUR.

Indiana Experiment Station, Lafayette, Ind.

We also sent specimens to Prof. Byron D. Halsted of the N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station, who replied: "The young rose plants have been examined and the trouble is the anthracnose, treated of fully in my late paper before the American Rose Society." This paper was printed in The Review for March 29 last. From it we reprint an extract below:

"It will be gathered from these remarks that rose anthracnose is a specific disease, caused by a well defined fungus that grows rapidly from spores, penetrates the substance of stem and leaf and finally causes defoliation and death of cane. The anthracnose, because of its multitude of spores produced in pimples on leaves, particularly fallen ones, and the canes, and the ease with which they are transported by water, also rapidity of germination, all combine to make this fungous enemy of the roses very contagious.

"This class of fungi to which the Gloeosporium belongs is amenable to treatment by fungicides. A coating of the Bordeaux mixture or cupram upon the leaves and stems prevents in large degree the entrance of the germs. Therefore all rose-houses where there is any anthracnose should be sprayed with one of the above compounds. It goes without further saying that all plants that are nearly leafless from this cause should be either cut down close to the soil or thrown bodily into the burn-heap."

Fungus Affecting Mr. Myer's Roses.

A. Fungus, magnified.
B. Spores, magnified.

In his description of the ravages of this disease the professor makes no mention of decay of the roots, and this was the case with all the affected plants in an advanced stage of the disease.

TAXING FLORISTS.

Editor Florists' Review: Will you please answer the following questions through your paper:

Are plants in pots taxable?
Are plants planted in bench taxable?
Is the soil in bench taxable?
Our local assessor claims they are and wants to tax us for same as personal property.
Ohio. K. B.

I cannot say what the general practice is, but ordinary justice would indicate that greenhouse stock, whether in pots or on benches, is no more taxable than a farmer's half-grown crops; in fact, not so much so.

Greenhouse stock, unsold, has no value, as it can neither be eaten, worn, burned nor made to serve any other purpose. When it has been sold it appears for taxation, either in money or other form of property. But until the sale has been made, how can a valuation be put upon that which may have to be consigned to the dump?

As to the soil in the bench, if the local assessor can find any monetary value in that, he must be a wonder.
Cleveland, O. A. GRAHAM.

I can not see how plants are any more taxable than a crop of growing corn or wheat in a field and I think it is very unjust in the local assessor to attempt to assess the same; in fact, I can not see how it can stand or where there is a law, at least in this state—Illinois—giving him a right to do so. It has never been tried in this locality, and if it were I would most assuredly protest and make my complaint to the Board of Equalization, which we have for that purpose, and which I would advise K. B. to do also if his local assessor insists on including plants, soil, etc., as personal property.

J. F. AMMANN.

Edwardsville, Ill.

Plants in pots are not taxed with us and we should "kick" if they tried it, as our taxes are heavy enough as it is.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

Chatham, N. Y.

Our assessor regards plants as natural products, like wheat or corn in the field, and therefore not taxable. As to taxing the soil in the bench, I should say not!

EMIL BUETTNER.

Park Ridge, Ill.

Plants in pots or on benches are not subject to any tax in Philadelphia. The dealers have to pay a trifling mercantile tax from which the growers are exempt.

JOHN WELSH YOUNG.

Germantown, Pa.

Greenhouse stock, either in pots or planted in benches, is taxable in Ohio, the attorney general holding that such stock does not come under the head or the intent of the law as to growing crops. THE GOOD & REESE CO.
Springfield, O.

So far as I know the custom here is for the assessor to place a valuation on a greenhouse establishment for taxation. Plants in pots, etc., are certainly personal property.

A. HERRINGTON.

Madison, N. J.

We are taxed on greenhouses and property as a whole. We pay no tax on plants, pots or any other contents of the houses. Of course, our tools, wagons, horses and other outside property is taxed.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

The answer to the inquiry should be "No." Each year that a new assessor is elected we have this matter brought up, but after inquiry into it by the county auditor, it is never brought up by that assessor again. I have never had greenhouse stock assessed here, nor do I know of any that have been. The only thing taxable about greenhouses is the buildings themselves. This year the greenhouses are being assessed as real estate instead of as personal property.

R. WITTERSTAETTER.
Cincinnati, O.

We are taxed only for greenhouse structures and not for plants in pots or benches, neither for soil, which last I think would be absurd.

Bellevue, Pa. F. BURKI.

Some years ago the assessor here listed market gardeners' products. They raised such a rumpus that the mayor ordered all such goods off the list. I put in a claim that plants in pots and in open ground were in the same class and since then they have not been listed, being taxed only as real estate, which is enough, the crop being subject to climatic conditions.

Davenport, Ia. J. T. TEMPLE.

[We shall be pleased to hear from others on this subject.—Ed.]

pect flowers, unless they are given the proper soil. Dig holes two feet wide and a foot deep for each plant and work in half manure. Stake them early. Mulch them after they begin to grow and a good soaking of water every week—not a sprinkling, but a soaking. Keep the laterals pinched out of the main stems and you will have all the earlier and better flowers. Three feet each way is close enough for any dahlias. They should have the full sun, but if sheltered from the prevailing winds, all the better.

Cannas.

Although not cultural, it is business to say that the canna is ever growing in popularity, and you must add to your collection yearly or you will drop behind the procession. Obtain plants of the new ones and plant out at once; that is a surer plan than trusting to buying the clumps in the fall. Last year we bought Tarrytown and found it a most excellent bedder. It is a dwarf, free, cherry red. But there are several new ones that you must have, and the cheapest way to get stock is to plant them out now.

Number of Plants to fill Beds.

Along about the bedding season we are continually asked how much a flower bed of a certain size will cost, and about 90 per cent of all the beds where there is only one on the lawn is a circle. Now, when the customer says "The bed is eleven feet across," you begin to figure out and waste time. Have a card with the number of plants it will take from a 6-foot diameter up to 20 feet. We reckon geraniums, coleus and that sort of plants at one foot apart; cannas and caladiums, 18 inches. It is usual to begin by saying a bed is 10 feet across and you keep the first plant back 6 inches. Don't do that. Say the bed is 10 feet in diameter, so the first row is three times that, or thirty, and with geraniums you will come out just right, and if you have all this to refer to you can say in a moment: "The bed is 10 feet across; that will take 93 plants at $1.50 per dozen, about $11.50; or if coleus, at $1.00, about $7.50. I have not stopped to make my figures accurate to a "York shilling," but you can easily have it all figured out nicely and it will save you much time along the 28th of this month, when your every moment is precious.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Plant Out your Stock Geraniums.

With us there is a little lull in business between getting out the hardy plants and the plants that will not endure a single degree of frost. It is seldom we get a frost after the 15th of May that will hurt a geranium, and now is the time for you to select plants for your own stock and get them planted out; then they can't be sold. I mention geraniums because they are one of our most important plants, and to have a good supply of cuttings in September you must have a good lot of plants. You can get all you want of salvias, ageratums, coleus or acahyphas from a few plants, but not so with geraniums; with this universal favorite propagation is slow, and if you want 10,000 cuttings in September you must put out at least 1,000 plants now.

Never mind if the foliage does get a little red with the cool nights; they will be making roots and make the best kind of cuttings. On one occasion we planted 500 geraniums for stock on the 15th of May; on the 20th we had a frost that blackened every leaf and stem, but after being cut to the ground they made the finest plants we ever had. I don't say this freezing is an essential, but I would rather it happen than plant out a lot of culls near the end of June. Our experience is that if you don't get this stock out before the grand rush, you won't get a chance till it is over, and as for keeping so much put away for your own planting, it is an impossibility in a retail place, for they become the most attractive, and when your good customer says, "Oh, can't I have them?" you say, "Well, really, they are not for sale; but I will have to spare you a few," and this is repeated till they are all gone.

Propagators of roses and carnations are much more particular in selecting good cuttings from the most healthy and vigorous plants than they were a few years ago, and the same good law applies to everything, especially by this artificial way of increasing or multiplying our plants. So in everything select for your stock the plants that possess the characters that are prized, and good health is sure to be one.

Asters.

Last year was the driest in July and August that we remember in a long time, and many a fine field of asters that promised so finely just wilted away or their flowers were useless. I am by no means an advocate of indiscriminate watering, and the geranium just spoken of above is a half succulent, and in ordinary seasons thrives splendidly without a drop of artificial watering if well hoed. But there are some things that cannot be grown without the liberal use of the hose, and the aster is one of them, so don't put them out of the reach of it. Sweet peas, gladiolus and dahlias must be watered, unless we get frequent rains. I still stick to my previous assertion that we should never water carnations in the eastern states, however much they may have to do it in the west.

Asters should have a deep rich soil, and if it is a little on the clay side, none the worse; they will be all the finer blooms, providing it is rich and well cultivated.

Dahlias.

Dahlias are not grown as much as their handsome flowers deserve. Many of the pompon varieties are beautiful and most useful to the florist. It is useless to plant dahlias out and ex-are who in early days "pioneered" this part of the country.

In speaking of "early days," we refer to the 60's, when the discoveries of placer gold brought seekers for the precious metal to the great west. They certainly endured many hardships, and had many trying and dangerous experiences. That day is over, and we no longer live in fear of being scalped by Indians.

Perhaps, however, this is foreign to the subject on which you have requested a few lines. Still, florists, naturally, for some reason or other, associate their business with refinement and culture, and in this connection it is safe to say that although the contour of the country here may be rugged and rough (and one is always influenced by environment), still we have esthetic ideas and nice views on matters. We even have "society," for our population is composed largely of persons who have come here from other states, from the south, the east, in fact, from all parts of the world. These people brought their civilization and refinement with them to the Rockies. Thus it is that in Montana (and Helena especially), flowers are used by many as lavishly as they are in other states, and whilst some stock is shipped in, most of it is produced here.

The American Beauty roses grown by the State Nursery Company have given Helena a name, and persons coming from other places are rather surprised to see as fine roses and carnations as are found anywhere.

Most interesting, however, to the majority of your readers perhaps is the fact that the greenhouses of the State Nursery Company, located close to the famous Broadwater Natatorium at Helena, are heated by the natural hot water as it is piped from the springs. These springs rise about a mile above the greenhouses and the water is conveyed in wooden pipes to the natatorium before mentioned, passing through the land of the State Nursery Co. on their way and running within about thirty feet of their greenhouses. This company have arrangements with the owners of the springs to use the water for heating their greenhouses.

The water is led into the pipes, and having a good pressure circulates through the houses as artificially heated water does, with the exception in this case that it does not return to the boilers, but runs away after having performed its duty. With the exception of perhaps thirty of the coldest days in winter, or when the thermometer is below zero, the natural heat of the water is sufficient. During these very cold days, however, the natural hot water is connected with boilers and the fires run the temperature up to the desired point. This method of heating has been in successful operation for about two years, and is believed to be the first case on record of heating greenhouses by the natural heat of the water from hot springs. Are you aware of any other instance of hot springs having been utilized for this purpose previously?

Paderewski, the great pianist, and his wife were visitors at the green-

Bellevue, Pa. F. BURKI.

Some years ago the assessor here listed market gardeners' products. They raised such a rumpus that the mayor ordered all such goods off the list. I put in a claim that plants in pots and in open ground were in the same class and since then they have not been listed, being taxed only as real estate, which is enough, the crop being subject to climatic conditions.

pect flowers, unless they are given the proper soil. Dig holes two feet wide and a foot deep for each plant and work in half manure. Stake them early. Mulch them after they begin to grow and a good soaking of water every week—not a sprinkling, but a soaking. Keep the laterals pinched out of the main stems and you will have all the earlier and better flowers. Three feet each way is close enough for any dahlias. They should have the full sun, but if sheltered from the prevailing winds, all the better.

Cannas.

Although not cultural, it is business to say that the canna is ever growing in popularity, and you must add to your collection yearly or you will drop behind the procession. Obtain plants of the new ones and plant out at once; that is a surer plan than trusting to buying the clumps in the fall. Last year we bought Tarrytown and found it a most excellent bedder. It is a dwarf, free, cherry red. But there are several new ones that you must have, and the cheapest way to get stock is to plant them out now.

Number of Plants to fill Beds.

Along about the bedding season we are continually asked how much a flower bed of a certain size will cost, and about 90 per cent of all the beds where there is only one on the lawn is a circle. Now, when the customer says "The bed is eleven feet across," you begin to figure out and waste time. Have a card with the number of plants it will take from a 6-foot diameter up to 20 feet. We reckon geraniums, coleus and that sort of plants at one foot apart; cannas and caladiums, 18 inches. It is usual to begin by saying a bed is 10 feet across and you keep the first plant back 6 inches. Don't do that. Say the bed is 10 feet in diameter, so the first row is three times that, or thirty, and with geraniums you will come out just right, and if you have all this to refer to you can say in a moment: "The bed is 10 feet across; that will take 93 plants at $1.50 per dozen, about $11.50; or if coleus, at $1.00, about $7.50. I have not stopped to make my figures accurate to a "York shilling," but you can easily have it all figured out nicely and it will save you much time along the 28th of this month, when your every moment is precious.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Plant Out your Stock Geraniums.

With us there is a little lull in business between getting out the hardy plants and the plants that will not endure a single degree of frost. It is seldom we get a frost after the 15th of May that will hurt a geranium, and now is the time for you to select plants for your own stock and get them planted out; then they can't be sold. I mention geraniums because they are one of our most important plants, and to have a good supply of cuttings in September you must have a good lot of plants. You can get all you want of salvias, ageratums, coleus or acahyphas from a few plants, but not so with geraniums; with this universal favorite propagation is slow, and if you want 10,000 cuttings in September you must put out at least 1,000 plants now.

Never mind if the foliage does get a little red with the cool nights; they will be making roots and make the best kind of cuttings. On one occasion we planted 500 geraniums for stock on the 15th of May; on the 20th we had a frost that blackened every leaf and stem, but after being cut to the ground they made the finest plants we ever had. I don't say this freezing is an essential, but I would rather it happen than plant out a lot of culls near the end of June. Our experience is that if you don't get this stock out before the grand rush, you won't get a chance till it is over, and as for keeping so much put away for your own planting, it is an impossibility in a retail place, for they become the most attractive, and when your good customer says, "Oh, can't I have them?" you say, "Well, really, they are not for sale; but I will have to spare you a few," and this is repeated till they are all gone.

The half-tone engraving is from an actual photograph, taken from the hill a short distance away. The range of greenhouses now contains 35,000 square feet and a new section of about 18,500 square feet is contemplated as an addition to the plant this season.

Visitors will be gladly shown over the premises, and, if necessary, they can bathe in the hot water. To use a western phrase, "the latch string hangs out" at the State Nursery Co.'s place.

FLORISTS' BOWLING LEAGUE.

To the National Florists' Bowling League, greeting:

To an enthusiast of this, which may truly be called the national game of the American florists, it is a great pleasure to peruse the scores and read the various accounts of the contests as they appear weekly in the trade papers, and note the interest that is being taken in the game in the different floral centers of the country.

An evening now and then passed in the company of congenial spirits, engaged in friendly rivalry at a game of tenpins is not, as some who take a narrow view of life seem to think, "time wasted." Such an occasion brings together socially and affords much needed recreation to men whose business demands almost their entire attention, but who manage to get an hour or two occasionally to indulge in this popular game and derive much benefit from the exercise and amusement it affords them.

The inter-city matches which take place from time to time are very interesting events and give great pleasure to the contestants, as well as their friends who come to cheer them on to victory, or condole with them in defeat, as the case may be. Whatever the result of the game, however, it has no serious effects on the spirits of the players. They have enjoyed the excitement of the game, had a good time socially, and return home much benefited by their outing.

The last national tournament during the convention of the S. A. F., at Detroit, and others that have gone before, still linger as pleasant memories, and from the reports of the games now coming in weekly it is seen that the interest is being kept up with the hope, no doubt, of winning distinction and prizes at the coming national contest at the meeting of the S. A. F. in New York next August. This tournament promises to eclipse all previous contests of similar character. It is safe to say that more clubs will be entered and many more prizes offered than ever before. The New York club has already secured several valuable trophies and the national association also has, in addition to its sweepstake prize of $100 or over, had given to it several handsome cups to be offered as its committee deem best.

In order that there shall be no confusion and that everything in the matter of schedules and prizes shall be ready when the time for the contest arrives, I have appointed a committee to take charge of these important matters and assist the officers of the national organization in carrying them out. The committee consists of John Westcott and George Watson, of Philadelphia, and Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston.

It would be well for all clubs intending to take part in this contest to individually get together at once and discuss the situation. The committee would be very glad of suggestions from any of the clubs about prizes, or rules for conducting the tournament (although the regulations adopted at Detroit, after careful discussion, seem to meet every requirement), or anything that anyone has to offer. The one rule that I might call attention to is that all contestants must be members of the S. A. F., identified with the business, and also belong to the florists' club of the city which they represent. While it is a hardship to clubs which, after coming a long distance, to find on the day of the games that they are a player short, it is not fair to the other fully equipped teams to have perhaps a strong bowler substituted, as it leaves the weak club open to the charge that it was done intentionally, so that they might gain by such an addition.

Any city may enter the tournament with a team, provided its members have the necessary trade and S. A. F. qualifications, and be entitled to a chance at all prizes offered except the sweepstake prizes of the national organization. Membership in the National Florists' Bowling League costs each club $10 annually; these dues are used to purchase prizes to be bowled for by the membership clubs only. Several of the clubs have forwarded their dues for this year to the treasurer, Mr. J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and I would request all others who desire to join the league to forward the amount to him at once, as, with the membership known, the committee can work more intelligently, and, having the prizes in readiness before the contest, can arrange the schedule so that all shall have an even chance to win. ROBERT KIFT,
President F. N. B. L.

OBITUARY.

Charles F. Baker.

Charles F. Baker, the well known florist of Utica, N. Y., died suddenly May 11 while at work arranging a funeral design intended to be placed upon the grave of another. Death was caused by heart disease. He was in his 60th year.

Mr. Baker was born October 16, 1840, in the town of Marcy, near Stittville. His father was Warren Baker, one of the pioneer settlers, who came from

New England. He remained at his father's home until he reached his majority, when he established himself in the mercantile business at Stittville. He later engaged in business at Pit-hole, Pa., during the palmy days of the oil region and finally came to Utica. The condition of his health induced him to enter the florist's business in 1876. This he rapidly enlarged until he developed the largest business in this city. He was a hard worker and his application to his business was intense. He was an exhibitor at various flower shows and worked up a large shipping business with outside points.

Mr. Baker was a member of the Society of American Florists, of the American Carnation Society, and was treasurer of the Utica Florists' Club during the existence of the local organization. He produced two excellent carnations, Oneida and Red Jacket, and was an indefatigable student and experimenter.

His son, Frank J. Baker, has been for many years his father's co-worker, and last April was admitted to partnership in the business.

In character Mr. Baker was a man universally esteemed and those who had known him longest liked him best. He was extremely honorable in business and other relations. He was twice married and is survived by a widow and three children.

At a meeting of Utica florists held at W. J. Crowe's, at which twenty-five members of the craft were present, and at which J. C. Spencer was chairman and Charles Matthews was secretary, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The Supreme One in His wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst Charles F. Baker, one who by his integrity, industry and estimable character found a place in the hearts of those engaged in the trade with him, and it is but fitting that we here assembled should express in some manner our high regard for him who has been taken from us; be it, therefore,

Resolved, That we tender to the family our sincerest sympathy in this, their hour of darkness and sorrow; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and that we attend the funeral in a body.

C. C. Morse.

C. C. Morse, the well known seed grower, died at his home in Santa Clara, Cal., May 5, aged 57 years. He was born in Thomaston, Me. He came to California in 1861 and after some mining experience he engaged in the seed growing business in 1877, which he developed to very large proportions. A widow and four children survive him. The management of the business will devolve upon the son, Lester L. Morse, who has been associated with his father for some years.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Mr. F. W. O. Schmitz sailed for Europe with his family on the steamship Southwark on Wednesday, the 16th. He expects to arrive home again July 31.

BUFFALO.

At last overcoats are put away for the benefit of the moths and something like spring is here. It has been one of the best seasons for nurserymen that we ever remember, for instead of jumping from winter to spring, as we used to read in those publications sent to "Hold Hingland" to induce settlers to cross the Atlantic and take up land somewhere a little south of Hudson's Bay, it has been a long, slow, cold time, with nothing to start vegetation.

There is an abundance of flowers—rather too many. One of our very large clothing stores was giving away roses to every customer. I understand they were supplied at $10.00 per thousand. Perhaps there is no great harm done. It may foster a love for flowers in some homes where they were before strangers. On account of the Pan-American, which is already bringing many strangers to our city, there is going to be an increase in the decoration of the grounds on our leading residence streets, and by 1901 there will be a marked increase in all kinds of decoration, so the plant men have a bright future for at least two years, and it is likely to be permanent.

A good many bay trees have come to Buffalo this spring, the elegant dining room and smoking and reception rooms of the Ellicott Club buying no less than three dozen of the various styles and sizes, and several fine pairs are now seen on Delaware avenue. From what we hear the importation of these must have been immense. How long it will last is a guess.

There is one thing helps to sell them; you can truthfully tell your customer, even in this blizzard afflicted town, that they can and should go out on the lawn by the middle of April, and should remain out ordinary seasons till the end of November. During their four or five months' hibernating a coach house will keep them about as well as a greenhouse, and better than a hot one. In a warm hall or room they are only a partial success, doing very well for a few months, but gradually giving up the ghost. Billy Palmer, who takes lunch every day in the Ellicott Square, says so many of these funeral trees makes him think he is again in Florence, where he acquired the correct Italian accent.

Our markets are getting to be great places for the distribution of plants. It is to be hoped they will rush them on and get as many killed as possible, then by June 1st the greenhouse men who don't go to market will have their innings. Not only pot plants, but now you can get everything in Washington Market—fruit trees, herbaceous plants, vegetable roots, herbs, and all other green things, and sweet scented things, including codfish, sauer kraut and limburger, but the aggregate and conglomerate odor would never be mistaken for "the spicy breezes that blow soft o'er Ceylon's Isle." And a walk through the labyrinth of stalls is depressing to your spirits and you feel that you are in a cheap business, but a look at a Main street store revives you again and you sensibly think that there is a sloppy side to every business.

Mr. Nelson Bogue, of Batavia, was in town this week, and so was Mr. A. Dimmock, of England and Belgium.

Mr. Danl. B. Long has removed from rather inconvenient quarters to a fine room in the Lewis Block, corner Swan and Washington, where I lately found him arranging his immense stock of designs, calendars, and other florists' requisites in the literary line.

"Nellie" Scott is visiting her brother, D. John, in Philadelphia, and has strict orders that if David has any "entangling alliances," he must go to night school and play bowls only once a month. In fact, the journey is to look into the general behaviour and welfare of the youth.

Pan-American News.

During the progress of the exhibition the Horticultural Department will hold several exhibitions of flowers. Premiums, medals and diplomas will be offered for the best exhibits for various classes at each exhibition. The announcement is thus early made so that intending exhibitors will have an opportunity to prepare suitable stock to produce exhibition quality. The dates are not definitely settled on, and in the case of roses it will be difficult to fix a date to suit wide degrees of latitude, but there is probably not more than two weeks' difference between New York city and St. Paul, and the second week in June will find many fine flowers in both localities.

The second week in May will be devoted to carnations. Roses the second week of June. Sweet peas during the first or second week of July. Gladiolus the first and second week of August. Dahlias the first week of September. Cannas the third week of September. The writer would be glad to hear from anyone who can suggest a better date to suit the majority of our northern growers.

BOSTON.

The Market.

At this rate flowers must be scarce at the end of the month, and this particular rate will not have to continue much longer to bring about that state. Nothing is really over-plentiful and the coming crops cannot become far enough advanced to be of use for Memorial day without unexceptional weather conditions, if at all. Roses seem to be in the most dangerous situation and it would seem as if no outdoor goods of any amount can be looked for to help the situation.

Of course, the wholesalers are busy arranging their stock of dry and metallic floral supplies, which, however, have not been used to such a heavy extent during the past two years as formerly, probably on account of lower prices on the genuine goods.

Prices.

Prices have run low the past week to the regular trade, but the street boys have complained that they have hardly been given a fair show. The point of view makes a difference. But it is hard to please even one of these two classes of retailers, and woe to him who supplies a street stand near the door of his regular customer of more pretension. At least he must not take a sensitive ear into the store upon his next visit.

Daily papers tell an interesting tale of how two wide-awake real estate agents have formed a syndicate with sufficient paid-up stock to replace the old Horticultural hall with a first-class modern office building as soon as the Horticultural Society can remove into their new building, one year being given as a limit.

There is an uneasy feeling among bedding plants. As yet there is no call for them, and if as heavy a demand as usual does come, there are not enough goods to supply it. Disappointment seems inevitable and all hands are praying for the time-honored permission to choose the lesser of two evils.

PHILADELPHIA.

Various Items.

The cut flower market is in very bad shape at present, there being a surplus of all kinds of flowers. It is almost impossible to sell anything but roses. There is little or no call for carnations or other flowers.

It looks very much as though Philadelphia was going to get rid of the flower fakir at last, as the police have received orders from headquarters "to start" them wherever seen and arrest them if they resist. The question is, What will become of the surplus stock?

Out-door valley is very plentiful this year, while the stems and bells are not so large as in former years. It sells from 1 to 2 cents. Cannas are again very scarce, which is due to the great numbers frozen out the past winter.

Griffin Bros., Frankford, Philadelphia, report the present season as being the best they have ever had in the history of their business. Bedding stock is their specialty.

Rupert Kienle, 12 South Seventeenth street, opened up his new store the past week. He will run it in connection with his old store for the present.

Chas. Fox, Jr., has opened a hotel in Atlantic City for the coming summer, which he will run in connection with his florist business in this city.

Pennock Bros. have their window very attractively decorated with wistaria blooms. It made a very good effect.

Prices: Beauties, $1 to $3 per dozen; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Golden Gate, Meteors, $5 to $6; Perles, $3 to $5; Liberty, $8 to $15; carnations, ordinary, $1 to $1.50; fancy, $2 to $2.50; daisies, $1 to $1.50; callas, $6 to $8; Harrisii, $5 to $6; mignonette, $2 to $3; sweet peas, 40 to 75 cents per 100; adiantums, 1 cent; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, 20 cents

Visitors: We had for our visitors the past week Herman Steinhoff, West Hoboken, N. J.; Geo. Leadly, Detroit, Mich.; P. L. Carbone, Boston; S. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y., and A. B. Ellsworth, Allentown, Pa.

NEW YORK.

Various Items.

New York weather has been having fun with the people lately; last week we were on the freezing point, and now we are basking in the 90th degree. The backwardness of the season has been playing havoc with the plantmen, and yet the cut flower end of trade has been unusually dull for the time of the year.

Summer conditions seem to have appeared very early this time, and the only reason apparent is the rush to Paris. Every boat leaving New York for Europe is packed with humanity on pleasure bent, and, of course, this takes away considerable of the best cut flower trade. The hot spell we are having is hastening the end of greenhouse flowers and hurrying forward such outdoor stock as peonies, etc. There are those who predict gloom in the fall on account of it being general election year, but the same amount of stock will be grown, whatever betide, and we must hope for the best.

Everybody is on the rush just at present with bedding plants. Whatever good stock gets to the auction rooms brings good prices, and down at the plant market the following prices prevailed on Saturday: Geraniums, $1 to $1.25 per dozen; verbenas, 50 cents; stocks, 50 and 75 cents; pansies, 25 to 50 cents a box of 25; nasturtiums, 50 cents; fuchsias, 80 cents to $1; petunias, 60 cents; antirrhinums, $1; ageratum, 65 cts; candytuft, 60 cents; coleus, 50 cents; roses, $3 to $4 per dozen. This stock all in pots. Roses were scarce and sold well. Some finely grown heliotrope is coming in, especially the sort known as Little Giant; it brings 75 cents and $1 per dozen; double General Grant still leads in geraniums. Whatever good stock comes to this market at present sells well; but there is a large quantity of poorly grown things, and the wonder is that they sell at all at any price. It is hard to imagine that the bad quality is produced by poor houses alone; small growers either grow too many kinds of plants or the varieties are poor. A good trade is expected for Decoration day.

In the cut flower markets Beauties bring $10 to $20; Brides and Maids, $6 to $8; Meteors, $3 to $6; Jacques, $6, $12 and $20; Victorias, $3 to $8; Christys, Brunners, Nerons, Gloire de Paris and Baroness, $10 to $25; moss roses, 75 cents per bunch of 6 sprays; carnations, $1 to $2; outside valley sells well, $7.50 to $10 per 1,000; indoor valley, $2; smilax, very plentiful, poor sale, 10 cents; lilac, $1.50 per barrel; lilies, $4 to $5; gardenias, $1.50 per dozen; extra grade narcissus, $3; cattleyas, $25 to $30 per 100. These prices are obtainable only for the higher grades of stock. There is a vast quantity of poor quality, especially in roses, which is hard to dispose of at any price. Much of it is bundled off at from $5 to $7.50 per 1,000; immense quantities of soft stuff are coming in and whatever goes out brings from 5 to 15 cents per bunch.

There was quite a little crowd at the Florists' Club meeting on Monday night. Nothing very special happened. President O'Mara seems to have everybody on committees and much of the time was taken up in listening to good reports from same. The committee on sports reported that they had partly secured alleys and shooting grounds, and that Hitchings & Co. had offered a $100 cup to be bowled for during the tournament. Some team will need a truck for the prizes. Wonder which it will be? Several questions were raised as to whether bowlers were compelled to be members of the S. A. F. or not, etc., which questions ought to be fully settled and at once by the National Bowling League. Gentlemen, don't leave disputes till the last moment; have an understanding at once, because there is pride, reputations — yes, and lots of other valuables at stake.

The convention meetings will be held on the same floor as the shows; there's room enough for all. The committee having charge of the horticultural exhibition has decided to have a manager to attend to the requirements of that section. Everything looks very bright for a rousing good convention. Manager Cleary reports space for trade exhibits is going very quickly, and requests all to make application as soon as possible, in order that exhibits may be properly prepared for and grouped. A very valuable souvenir of the convention is being prepared, which will be a splendid medium for advertising, and Chas. Weathered, 46 and 48 Marion street, this city, would like to get your adv. for it.

Daly Bros., of New Durham, N. J., exhibited a new pink geranium, a sport from Contrast; it appears to be a very good thing and the club's committee requested that it be shown again later in the season. Mr. Ebinger, of Boskoop, Holland, was an interested visitor at the meeting.

On May 9 the gentlemen interested in organizing the new Horticultural Society of New York met at the Berkeley Lyceum and decided to meet again a month from that date.

The monthly flower show of the Farmers' Institute was held at the same place and time, and Messrs. Roehrs, Lager and Hurrell and Siebrecht & Son showed pretty groups of orchids. C. W. Ward staged vases of his fine new carnation Governor Roosevelt.

There were few at the bowling alleys Monday afternoon and this is what they did:

Market Conditions.

The street car strike the past week has thoroughly demoralized the cut flower trade, especially of the downtown stores. Even the fakirs complain that their business is dead and only a few are to be seen on the street corners.

The wholesalers are thoroughly disgusted the way the stuff has piled up. All kinds of flowers are now a glut, and anything like a settled price is, of course, out of the question. As to the staples, roses and carnations, it is useless to quote prices, as, the way the wholesalers put it, "any old price will buy them just now"—$4.00 per 1,000 for carnations and $1.00 per hundred for roses, and good stock at that, is considered a good price. Sweet peas are in fair demand; supply plenty; price, 25 and 50 cents per 100. To swell the already overloaded market comes outdoor valley, tulips and early red paeonies from the south; also some good iris and other truck is coming in every day.

The plant men at Union market also complain that the street car strike hurts their business. The past week, which should have been their best, was their worst week, and should the strike continue another week they claim they might as well close up their stands, as the season will soon be over.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting on Thursday was poorly attended, owing to the strike. There were present two downtown florists, three from Belleville, one from Edwardsville, and two from South St. Louis, who came up in a wagon, and only two brought flowers for exhibition at our miscellaneous flower show—a large bunch of mixed flowers by F. J. Fillmore, and a bunch of 25 very fine Mrs. F. Joost carnation by E. W. Guy, of Belleville.

The regular routine business was transacted and all committees were given until next meeting to make their reports. The meeting adjourned early. The miscellaneous flower show was postponed until the next meeting of the club, which will be held on Thursday afternoon, June 14. Three prizes will be offered for the best vase of cut flowers, $5 for first, $3 for second, and $2 for third. The committee in charge of this is Messrs. Guy, Fillmore, and Schray, from whom information regarding the show may be obtained. We all hope by that time the street cars will be running, so we shall have a large attendance.

Notes.

W. D. K. Smith, representing the Dayton Folding Box Co., of Dayton, Ohio, called on the trade this week.

Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, who was in town last week attending the Red Men's convention at East St. Louis, called on the trade Thursday evening, trying to find out when the bowlers were coming to Chicago. No definite answer could be given him, as nearly all our members are in bad shape just now and we fear that it will be some time next month before the trip can be made. Phil was so busy on the other side of the river that he did not have time to have a game of bowls with the boys. The contest between Phil and Degnan is watched with interest by the St. Louis bowlers.

The bowling club will have to postpone its regular bowling until the strike is settled, but no doubt by next Monday, our regular bowling night, the trouble will be over and the regulars will again be found at the alleys getting in shape for match games. Below will be found the averages of our April series:

The Market.

Market conditions are decidedly unsatisfactory. A stretch of burning hot weather has brought out an enormous supply, at the same time seriously deteriorating quality, and to make matters worse, what little demand there was has shrunk to exceedingly small proportions. Nothing seems to move and the quantity is greater than ever before seen in this market at this season. There are literally flowers to burn and evidently burning is what will have to happen to the great majority.

Roses show the effect of the heat more than the carnations so far and some of the specimens that reach the market are truly fearful and wonderful. An extreme case noted was some curious objects seen at Geo. Reinberg's. They were little sticks with what appeared to be a discolored pickled onion at the end. The foliage alone made it possible to believe that they were originally intended for American Beauties. Of course this is an extreme case, but all roses have suffered seriously in quality, and one dealer tells of getting only 80 shipping buds out of a thousand that he sorted over. Even the fakirs are unable to make a notable impression on the immense quantity of lower grade stuff and prices are anything the dealer can get rather than let a possible buyer escape.

At the same time there is really none too many roses of shipping grade and the dealer has to earn his money by a lot of careful work in sorting.

These conditions prevailed on Tuesday and that evening the temperature dropped 36 degrees in four hours. No doubt many were caught without fires and while the big burst of bloom may be checked, mildew will no doubt be rampant. Wednesday was comfortably cool only, but greenhouse stock without fire on Tuesday night must have suffered seriously, especially after having been almost roasted.

Unless the change in weather cuts supply down to a very marked degree there will be a great abundance of stock for Decoration Day.

There is a tremendous lot of fine lilac in the market as well as a great deal that is not so fine. But even the fancy goes begging for a purchaser. Peonies are in almost the same fix.

Various Items.

The hot weather has brought vegetation along with a jump and the parks and gardens are full of beauty. The red-bud is in bloom and in the hardy garden at Lincoln Park such natives as Mertensia virginica, the wild geranium, trilliums and dodecatheons are in full bloom.

McKellar & Winterson are continually enlarging their supply manufacturing department and are now making a sickle and sheaf on an easel decorated with grasses that is very handsome.

Local retailers who depend largely upon funeral work say the big strike in the building trades has very materially cut down business in their line, as money is now very scarce with the workmen.

Mr. E. R. Tauch, of Walter Retzer & Co., accompanied by his wife, sails from New York for Europe, June 9th, on the Graf Waldersee. He will visit England, France and Germany, and possibly Holland and Belgium.

Mr. August Jurgens, 150 Herndon St., has a house of fine plants of Hydrangea Otaksa in splendid bloom.

There are 6 to 9 fine heads of flowers on each plant.

The bowling match with the St. Louis boys has been indefinitely postponed, as they are unable to say when they can visit us. The local bowlers rolled a few games last Saturday and some good scores were made.

We learn that Walter Heffron is to leave his position with E. C. Amling July 1.

Arthur H. Luck, representing the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., is in town.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the usual place to-morrow (Friday) evening.

The bedding plant season is open and the plant men are hustling.

BALTIMORE.

Few lines are required to record the trade news of the week ending with this writing, May 14. The weather has embraced extremes of temperature from 32 to 91 degrees. Frost, with some destruction to garden crops, has been followed by a torrid wave, and the transition season is over and summer is upon us. The markets are full of hardy stuff, plants and flowers grown under sash, and the varied products of the greenhouse. Before the gardening fever has fairly stirred the amateur blood and incited to the plying of the spade and the hoe, that tired feeling accompanying the sudden elevation of the mercury has supervened and many intended schemes remain unexecuted.

Yet, notwithstanding the enormous supplies of flowers, trade continues quite brisk, and for the season, prices are maintained at, at least, fair figures. Good roses continue in demand, carnations are abundant, but first-class ones do not upset the market. Prices necessarily go down, but at last firing is over, or seems to be, and the cost of production is correspondingly lessened. Saturday was notably a good day all around.

Weddings continue to require many flowers, the ill name of May having little deterring influence. Halliday Bros. had a wedding decoration where peonias and blue and white flags were the flowers exclusively employed.

One of the more beautiful recherche and expensive wedding decorations of the season was furnished last week by William J. Halliday. No expense was spared, everything was ordered to be of the choicest character, and the most sumptuous gifts were bestowed upon the happy bride, but, strange to say, though both church and house were elaborately adorned for the ceremony and the following breakfast, no reporter "caught on," no description was given in the papers, no formal invitations were issued, and only about twenty-five persons were in attendance. The lady was averse to the usual publicity given to such events, opposed to the give-and-take system of wedding presents, and wished a beautiful service and decoration, without the flare and glare which so often accompany the marriages of today. Her wishes were respected, and the preparations at the church and home were visions of delicacy and loveliness. Bride roses and asparagus were the predominating materials used at the house.

The sale of the plants of William W. Spence drew a crowd, but the prices realized were beggarly. Fine palms and other plants, which, as the advertisement truly declared, had received the care of a lifetime, went for a few dollars. Few of the trade were present; indeed, there was not much in the collection to attract them, and the great size of many of the specimens unfitted them for most amateurs' use.

It was a pleasure to see William H. Perot a purchaser of many of the orchids. This gentleman was for years the president of the Maryland Horticultural Society and by his spirit, zeal and influence promoted its activity and usefulness. At the very head of the merchant princes of Baltimore, esteemed for his commercial integrity and high sense of honor, he was an ardent lover of gardening in its every department. He not only admired plants, but had a nice and discriminating knowledge of them and of their cultivation and care, and the ability and disposition, as his many business cares permitted, to give time to their practical manipulation with his own hands. His collection of orchids was for a time the most extensive and valuable in this vicinity and his beautiful country place on Charles street was long and remains the local Mecca for all lovers of rare and fine trees, velvety lawns and well kept hedges.

Some splendid American Beauties sent last week by Henry Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., to the Florists' Exchange here might well make our local growers hide their diminished heads. The stems were three to three and a half feet long, the foliage absolutely perfect, no spot, no blemish, of texture like leather, and of dark, rich green color, and the blooms bright, large and faultless. Whether it is the mountain air or the skill of cultivation, they were models of floral beauty.

The firm of Fischer & Ekas, it is understood, is about to be dissolved. These young men have worked hard, gained a reputation for themselves and established a flourishing trade, notwithstanding some hard knocks of Fortune. Just on what lines the change will be made is not publicly known, but both have the good wishes of many friends in the trade in the change to ensue. RIX.

DAYTON, O.—Ritter & Co., the seedsmen, are preparing to build a warehouse at their greenhouses and will give up the city store, transacting all business from the office at the warehouse.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

CHESTNUT HILL HORT. SOCIETY.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society, the following premiums were awarded:

For calceolarias, to William Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener. For three ferns in not over 6-inch pots, to George W. Brown, gardener to Robert N. Carson. For three heads cauliflower, to William Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper; for three heads of lettuce, to John Little, gardener to John Lowber Welsh. For one bunch of asparagus of 25 stalks, to Harry Harris, gardener to Mr. Gratz.

First prize for rhubarb also went to William Robertson, while the premium for the best specimen palm was taken by George W. Brown. Mr. William Boyce, gardener to Randal Morgan, was awarded first for the best collection of vegetables, and Mr. Frank Gould, gardener to John T. Morris, was awarded the first premium for the best collection of herbaceous cut bloom. The following items were also of special interest: A collection of very fine double flowering wall flowers (Cheranthus Chiri), grown by Mr. Frank Gould; a grand vase of assorted roses, exhibited by Mr. Kleinheinz; specimen plant of Weigelia (Eva Rathke), in full bloom, exhibited by Messrs. Landreth & Sons. Mr. Robert E. Carey, gardener to Thos. C. Price, was also given notice for a handsome vase of mixed carnations, and Mr. Michael Punch, gardener to R. Le Bouteiller, was awarded special mention for a well flowered plant of Maxillaria tenuifolia. Another novelty, which was possibly shown for the first time in this country, was a small plant of Edelweiss (leontopodium alpinum), shown by Mr. Albert Knapper, of Frankford, Philadelphia.

Ten were admitted to membership and fourteen persons proposed. The society is going forward at a good pace, and every indication is that with the end of our first year we will have a fairly established society.

MADISON, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Morris County Gardeners and Florists was held at the Masonic Hall on Wednesday last, with President Duckham in the chair.

It having been decided at a previous meeting to proceed at once to the preparation of a schedule for the fall show, this was the main business of the evening. The president reported having secured the Madison Assembly rooms for the dates chosen, November 7 and 8. A schedule was next drafted, but cannot be completed until the June meeting, as the committee having this matter in charge are assiduously working up the special prize feature, and quite a few donors of prizes have yet to be heard from.

Among those already announced are a prize of $50.00 offered by H. McK. Twombly, for 36 chrysanthemums in 6 varieties, 6 blooms of each; $25.00 offered by D. Willis Jones, for 18 blooms in 3 varieties; and the "Fair Oaks" prize of $10.00 for 12 blooms, from Mrs. G. F. Stone. Similar special prizes will be announced later for the plant group and rose classes, also for vegetables, and the interest already manifested is a happy augury of another successful show. H.

TOLEDO, O.

A hailstorm heavier than we have had for 15 years visited Toledo in the afternoon of Monday, May 7, causing heavy losses to the trade. S. M. Peck's Broadway greenhouses are almost a total wreck, as is also the downtown establishment of Imobers-tag Bros., comprising 6,000 feet of glass. Henry Krueger and H. A. Mills, of East Toledo, also suffered quite heavy losses.

At the other establishments the damage done was light, the heaviest part of the storm seeming to have followed the "Muddy Maumee" river.

No hail insurance was carried, but you bet there will be some lively hustling to get insurance. The hailstones averaged about the size of hickory nuts, but a few were found as large as small hens' eggs. Plants under the broken glass do not seem to have been seriously damaged.

The Walbridge Park conservatories were damaged considerably in the palm section. This structure was only built last summer. F. A. I. O.

MILWAUKEE.

On May 6 this city was a great bouquet of trailing arbutus. Women went to church with the pretty little flower nestling in their bosoms; men wore boutonnières of arbutus, and children toddled along, crumpling it in their chubby fingers. The flowers came from Rhinelander and Tomahawk and their distribution this morning marked the climax of a happy suggestion for arbutus day made by Lester A. Rose, secretary of the Advancement Associa-

FRESHLY IMPORTED ORCHIDS!!

We beg to announce that after three years of futile efforts, we have at last succeeded in collecting a grand lot of plants, which we now beg to offer.

This beautiful cattleya has been up to the present the "missing link" in the chain of a continuous flowering season of cattleyas the year round. Cattleya Percivalliana ONLY will fill the gap left blank between Cattleya labiata and Cattleya Trianae, and will prove itself to be a welcome acquisition and an ideal Christmas Cattleya. Also the following, just arrived:

FINE PLANTS, WELL LEAVED AND FREE FROM ALL DISEASE.

Cattleya Mendelii, in good condition,
Cattleya Citrina, Cattleya Mossiae,
Laelia Majalis, L. Anceps, L. Autumnalis,
Epidendrum Vitellinum Majus,
Oncidium Tigrinum,

Odontoglossum Rosell Majus,
Dendrobium Phalaenopsis Schroederianum, D.
Formosum giganteum, D. Wardianum,
Vanda Coerulea.

Due shortly:—Laelia Anceps Alba and Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Lager & Hurrell's ORCHID RENOVATOR, specially prepared by us, guaranteed to restore to health and vigor any kind of Orchid in a run-down condition. Instructions how to use it will be furnished with each order. Price, $10.00 per 100 lbs.

CORRECTION.

Through a misunderstanding of instructions an error was made in the advertisement of Mr. S. Whitton on page 739 of our last issue. What Mr. Whitton wished was the omission of 2-inch pot plants of verbenas and the offer of rooted cuttings continued, whereas the cuttings were omitted and the plants continued. Mr. Whitton still offers mammoth verbenas, rooted cuttings, large and stocky, with plenty of red and pink, at 50 cents per 100 and $4.00 per 1,000.

UTICA, N. Y.

The Syracuse florists paid us a return visit last week and we entertained them to the best of our ability, though we couldn't permit them to win at bowling. The visitors were: Charles Fox, David Campbell, I. B. Terry, F. F. Dunn, H. Bishop, William Dow, Charles Smilie, Albert H. Davies, R. H. C. Bard, George Ham and Joseph Huller.

They were met by a delegation of Uticans and taken to Crowe's greenhouses, where they were shown around. Shortly after 6 o'clock they were conducted to Maennerchor Hall, where Caterer Bodmer served a banquet of five courses at 7 o'clock. The tables were literally buried under the weight of flowers and the air laden with their fragrance. After enjoying the good things to eat and drink the company adjourned to the alley.

In the three games the Uticans won out by 129 pins. The scores follow:

CROWE.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We are experiencing a chunk of torrid weather, warm enough to bake a Hottentot; it takes the water this weather to keep things wet. Most of the florists have their carnations planted; a few nights were frosty enough to injure a great many on low land. Prices remain about the same and most folks find it too hot to even die and thereby provide an outlet for surplus funeral flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Wasserman, of Muskegon, spent Sunday in the city. They report Easter trade excellent; over 50 per cent better than last year.

G. F. CRABB.

CAPE VINCENT, N. Y.—The Cleveland Seed Co. is planning to erect a warehouse 40x180 feet and four stories high, on the west of the property recently purchased of Stephen Hosmer of Avon. The building will have facilities for cleaning and storing large quantities of beans.

Always mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

WASHINGTON, IA.—E. C. Keck has added a new house and made improvements in other directions.

CHESTER, PA.—The firm of Col-flesh, Titlow & Co., florists, have dissolved partnership.

CAMDEN, N. J.—L. M. Mowers, the florist, was burned out here in the big fire May 13. His loss is estimated at $3,000.

BURLINGTON, WIS.—The Burlington Floral Co. are building a new greenhouse 25x160 feet on Pine street. The officers of the company are A. Helfrich, president; F. Mueller, vice-president, and M. Helfrich, treasurer.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.—The annual floral parade exceeded all expectations and was a wonderfully beautiful pageant. On the first prize float a young lady symbolizing California rode in a floral bell with butterfly fairies floating on golden wings.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Frank F. Paine, the Florist, committed suicide by hanging himself, May 6th, in his barn on the Stone road, about a mile south of the village of Charlotte, under circumstances which make his family think him to have been temporarily insane. His affairs were all prosperous, and he was as cheerful as usual, and no motive, so far as can be found, existed for the deed. Mr. Paine was 45 years of age. He leaves a widow, daughter, and one brother in this country, besides several brothers in Canada.

BEWARE OF SAP in Cypress lumber for Greenhouse material.

A little sap in lumber to be used for interior finish in dwellings won't hurt. But in greenhouse material it is a FATAL defect.

The moisture inside the greenhouse makes the difference.

The sappy piece is the first to decay and is the weak link in the chain.

Outdoor lilacs, crab apple blossoms and wild flowers from the woods knocked the stuffin' out of the flower trade here last week. It was the worst week since Easter.

The ladies have been housecleaning, painting, papering, etc., getting ready for the National Congress of Mothers next week, and no big functions have come off, although an occasional funeral has kept us from utter despair. We hope to make up for the dullness by the expected extra demand during the congress, as many social events are planned for that occasion.

Commercial Plants

Their Propagation and Culture.

By GEORGE W. OLIVER, Propagator to the U.S. Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C., and late of the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh.

A Working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist or Gardener, and those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer.

The plants dealt with comprise those which are commercially handled by Florists, Gardeners and Nurserymen, and include Florists' Flowers, Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Annuals, Shrubs, Hardy and Tender Vines, and a chapter on miscellaneous subjects in connection with the above.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound to stand rough handling and plenty of it. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

N. B.—The book is now in preparation, and as we expect a large sale for it we would take it as a favor to have your order in advance, and you can remit when notified that the book is ready.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

North Adams, Mass. M. S. WORDEN.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

Hartford, Conn. GEO. S. OSBORN.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

Rutherford, N. J. BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

Milwaukee, Wis. N. ZWEIFEL.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y. BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

Milwaukee, Wis. C. C. POLLWORTH CO.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.

Germantown, Pa. JOHN WELSH YOUNG.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.

Columbus, O. B. BUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

Milwaukee, Wis. W. A. KENNEDY.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill. F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.

Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours, COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS, R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Publishers, Florists' Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.

From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial plant culture in America, or some portions of it rather, have been placed on the market; but the teachings which they convey have, as the years rolled by, become to a greater or less extent obsolete, owing to the continued mutability in methods, etc., so that the Manual containing, as it does, matter which is strictly up-to-date, and thoroughly practical, should meet with a ready acceptance among all engaged in the industry upon which it treats. The caliber of Mr. Scott's instructions, in matters horticultural, is too well known to the trade to require any elaboration at our hands; suffice it to say that the same soundness of doctrine, and masterful handling of every subject dealt with, generally characterizes the text of the book now before us. Nearly 200 individual items are discussed, and, as regards plants, largely those of commercial value, the staples of the trade receiving greatest attention.—Florists' Exchange.

The Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is GENTLEMEN.—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

The Flower Garden.

We have in our minds eye at present thousands of greenhouses filled to overflowing with all kinds of what is called "bedding stock." Acres of gardens and armies of impatient customers and busy gardeners, and what can we say that will be of benefit to all? Much is being written and talked of every day on the well worn subject of bedding plants, and the floricultural head, like the overfed stomach, is in trouble with indigestible food. Differences of opinion often bring out the best points in any matter, and if there is any element more prominent than another in the florist, it is that of imitative inclination and timidity in originality.

Let us size up the situation. We are on the continent of America. The peoples, the climates, and the innumerable important factors combine to make it all-powerful—a world by itself. Though we still import much of the material we use, we no longer look afar into the midst of other lands for ideas as to the methods and uses of whatever stock we may have. It is true that we have many "schools" in what is called, landscape architecture, and with them, as in others, there is a vast amount of pure humbug. Dear reader, did you ever walk over a contemplated garden with some high conceited landscape engineer and listen to his "Garden of Eden" stuff? We have, and the experience is a continuous effervescence to our comic section.

We would not refer to them now, only that many—alas, too many—of our flower gardens are outlined and restricted by the men whose living is derived by the employment of fine language, whose experience is paper splashed theoretics, and whose doings in the garden are crimes against horticultural intelligence. A few years ago it would have cost any gardener his position if he disturbed the "weeds" Mr. Heavenly View ordered planted, or if he introduced any of his own ideas. Not so long ago, and even to-day, many of the wealthiest people in the country were and are influenced by the landscape maker, whose tender and narrow eye could not bear the sight of flowers. Thanks to a better knowledge of beauty, this is all changing, and it cannot be entirely obliterated too quickly. Mind you, we don't believe in a monotony of anything; a generous tolerance is more apt to be better than a too dominant element, but we incline to the doctrine of more flowers, less crime.

If you are at all observant you will notice that there is a decided yearly increase in the use of spring and summer flowering plants. This demand is not attributable to the tremendous increase of population alone, but rather to a growing love of flowers. The modern dwelling is constructed with a view to interior and exterior plant ornamentation, and it is a fact that never before were so many window boxes and vases filled with plants in the large cities as there are this year. It is a beautifying and beautiful custom, and every effort should be made to increase it and extend its pleasures by a proper selection and doing the work well.

The subject is too large to dwell upon only in vital points. Much that we do in America must of necessity be subservient to climatic influences, and so variable are they that we are inclined to ignore many special opportunities and even shorten the seasons of outdoor flowers. We are a people continually on the rush; to even live here is to be filled with ambition or exist in a living death. There is but a limited supply of patience—we demand immediate effects and this is felt in floriculture more than in any other trade; we hate preparation, and therefore much that we do fails. We cannot compare ourselves with the rest of the world for many reasons, and perhaps 'tis better we must remain distinct. We should try to be equal to the demands of the public in all that pertains to flowers.

Our seasons are short, but we should stretch them if possible, and a little care may often accomplish much. Take, for instance, our early spring flowers. We put out lots of bulbs in the fall; they are in bloom for two weeks in the spring, and we let the beds become eyesores, instead of filling them with pansies and other early flowers which will last till geranium time. There are many months in spring and summer we make no provision for, and the earth must wait for our "good and ready" disposition. The majority of bedding plants are taken from warm houses to cold grounds, and the consequence is often disastrous. And then again, for the sake of economy, we are planting in July what ought to be out in May. We should remember that it is impossible for most flowers to succeed when planted in the glare of a tropic sun and when the ground is baked; this is particularly the reason why there are so many failures with cannas, dahlias, and such plants. And then again, many of the plants offered are entirely too small; cheapness, not quality, seems to be the aim of a great many, and it's a grave mistake.

It is foolish to waste time arguing with a man whose houses are filled up with a poor class of material. He wants to get rid of his stock and looks to his trade paper for pointers. We'd like to help such. It has been our experience with many small growers that they try to grow too many things. If they would devote one or two houses to a collection of retail oddities and specialize the rest they would in most cases do better. But as regards bedding out plants, we are glad to note that the present tendency is for variety. No matter what you've got, there is a way of making it look better.

Ours is mostly a trade of experiment and we should not hesitate to indulge in it when planting out. A mixed or composite bed often produces a better effect than a solid mass of one kind. The situation and the plant must both be considered in order to bring forth the most satisfaction. In shady places nothing looks prettier than a group of palms; many varieties will stand in the open, and some of the finest bedding we have seen was where palms and foliage plants were used in conjunction with flowers such as lilies. Then take crotons. What's finer than a bed of mixed crotons? Sub-tropical styles may be adapted to please all tastes. Cannas are a magnificent class of plants. The finer sorts only should be used; there are many on the market which in the order of advancement should not be. It is in the retention of inferior varieties of plants that we most grievously injure what we aim to advance, and though a man may not be justified in throwing away his stock without an attempt to dispose of it profitably, he injures the trade in propagating and flooding the market with such.

From now on the herbaceous border is a changing picture of beauties. It can be made a veritable panorama of all that is brightest in Flora's kingdom by a little study in annuals and herbaceous plants. As one goes out another comes in, and where extensive grounds or a supply of cut flowers are required this is the most desirable and useful method of ornamentation. Annuals are cheap, and very many of them should be more extensively grown. A succession of valuable flowers is merely a matter of a few dollars and some care, but, as we have said before, impatience kills many good intents. We all know the great value of such as new plants often renders deviations necessary, though the general principle remains, and whilst we believe in variety of form we also appreciate variety of color. Circumstances may alter cases. In public parks and grounds we say that every style of bedding should be adopted, with a preference for the massive and formal, because such appeals best to the general public. The poor people of the city is most commendable, and not the narrow ideals of the over-educated. Flowers in the garden have a wonderful influence over all classes, and an abundance of them should be in every available spot. There is formality in most forms if you view them narrowly, and it ill becomes the florist to decry designs because they displease the uneducated critic, as most of the ultra ones in this sense are. We are too sensitive and pay too much attention to the opinions of novices. We must have more confidence in ourselves and assert the rights of the profession, and in order to be right we must be conversant with all that is best in our trade.

We feel it is merely a waste of time to write out lists of plants and turn this paper into a sheet from a catalogue. If you have already got the stock which you intend to plant, just make the best of it. Break away from the conventional if the material will allow, and if by the purchase of a few plants you can change the effect, don't begrudge the expense. If you have yet to purchase your plants, mistakes are inexcusable, for the market offers an endless variety and you can rarely do wrong where a knowledge of color and plant is shown. There are many simple flowers which give more satisfaction than many expensive ones. In this class are Phlox Drummondii, single petunias, asters, stocks, verbenas, etc. Geraniums of course will always remain the leaders. There are many fine new shades of color, and whilst it is difficult to surpass some of the old sorts, we should recognize the color value in all flowers.

Coleus are becoming an annual spring deluge of color. Only a few kinds find favor, because there is a preference for color in flowers to color in foliage. In this respect alternantheras are losing popularity (they have grown poorly with many this year). Begonias of the Erfordii and Vernon type have justly sprung into favor. They make charming effects. A ribboning of alyssum enhances them. Salvia Bon-fire is a fine thing for lines or masses, especially in part with yellow annual chrysanthemums. Rudbeckia Golden Glow or any of the tall or even small yellow flowers. Oenothera Youngii or Frazerii makes an excellent ribboning of yellow if pinned down. Of recent years nasturtiums have brought big prices and their value will be more pronounced where and when used properly. Much trouble and dissatisfaction is occasioned by having soil too rich for many—nay, most—kinds of flowering plants.

In bedding plants it is not foliage so much as bloom that is wanted. One is, of course, necessary to the other, but too rich a soil produces an uneven proportion. There are very few things grander than a bed of mixed lilies; how few of them we see. Then there are roses; why don't we have finer rose gardens? Dahlias are jumphollyhocks, delphiniums, antirrhinums, penstemons, phlox, etc., but we seldom think of them till we want to see them in bloom; they appear tiresome when in seedling form and even the general growers of such stock fail to supply the demand for extra large plants. Of course, such class of plants intended for early flowering should be put out in the fall, but the most of it is done late in spring, when it is almost time for it to be in perfection.

The extreme in formal bedding was never so very popular in this country, but the modifications seem to have come to stay. The introduction of will not travel far to look at green lawns and trees; there is a monotony of similarity in most landscapes and exhausted energy cares not for microscopic studies. Who is justified or has the right to assume the role of dictator? Very few of our parks are managed to suit the wishes of the great majority; they are the spoils of politicians and scientific fiends. "More flowers, less crimes," would be a better motto than "Keep off the grass."

That which tends to produce the greatest amount of pleasure—the magnet which succeeds in drawing out the very poorest from the lowest slums—

ing into favor; the Star or Cactus varieties are lovely and useful. Coxcomb and centaurea make up finely, but we have never seen them anywhere so perfect as in the public parks of Chicago. Where annuals are used, 'tis best to either have room for succession, or else be dense enough to equal effects in the masses of other flowers. Acalyphas and abutilons, especially the new A. Savitzii, furnish good high colors, and don't neglect cosmos.

There are many dirty ponds or ditches that could be transformed into beauty spots at very little expense. A few aquatics, a cluster of eulalias, Arundo Donax variegata will repay, and you know there are many times in summer when a sprig of forget-me-not is wanted. M. palustris semperflorens planted in a damp location will furnish it.

Combinations in colors can be as varied as your list of plants. Scattering or hotch-potch effects are seldom satisfactory. Many plants, especially geraniums, will give better ultimate results if planted a little on the slant, for they furnish up quicker that way. More attention should be given to hanging baskets, vases, and boxes. We find trouble in procuring good full vines for this class of work. Variegated vincas should be planted out now, raised in the fall and grown in pots for next spring's bedding. The vines on the market are too light. Ivy-leaved geraniums make a splendid hanging basket, so do many of the fuchsias, and mixed collections of plants. The average hanging rustic basket offered on the market is too heavy and expensive, besides the wood makes the soil hot and dry and few plants will succeed in them. Use the wire ones and moss, or manufacture crate baskets yourself. Aucuba japonica is a good plant for tubs or vases; it needs plenty of water to keep it in condition. Hydrangeas Otaksa and cyanoclara cannot be too highly valued for outdoor summer vase work.

Whatever you have or whatever you have to do, try to get your bedding out done by Decoration Day. The people expect it of you and nature demands it. And again we say, do your work on the principle of "More flowers, less crime." IVERA.

DECORATION OF MONUMENTS.

We have been asked for some suggestions as to the decoration of the soldiers' monument shown in the accompanying engraving.

This is an exceedingly beautiful type of monument, and very great care should be used in decorating it. Many there are who suggest twisting ropes of hemlock or laurel around the pillar. We consider that would spoil its beauty. We would not go higher than the projection just above the heads of the statues. There in the center we would arrange our cluster of small flags, fixing them so the sticks would not show and connecting them together by loops of flowers or garlands of green. In front and at the feet of each figure suspend a laurel wreath or wreath of flowers, and just beneath the tablets arrange heavy Roman garlands of either flower or foliage, which will contrast well with the wreaths. On the steps could be placed a few loose bunches of flowers, or scatter them promiscuously all over.

Most decorations, in order to make them the more impressive, should be connected, that is, one design should be connected with the other. This can be done in a delicate way by vines, but on no account should wires, string, sticks, or other adjuncts be visible. Then again the colors red, white, and blue can easily be arranged on each side of the monument like this: One wreath of each color and the garland the other; or all could be put in the one design, though colors are a secondary consideration. The principle in monumental decoration is either extreme simplicity or concentrated richness. Work should never look slovenly or appear as if you wanted to get rid of all your material and didn't care how.

Our idea of a laurel wreath is the one illustrated here. We made it for a soldier's grave nearly two years ago. This alone would be sufficient in most cases. Leave the crepe off.

IVERA.

PLANTING OF HOME GROUNDS.

A paper upon the above subject was read by Mr. Walter Retzer before the Chicago Florists' Club at its meeting last Friday evening. He said that the subject was too broad for the time at his disposal and that he would merely draw attention to the general rules of landscape gardening, which should be followed, no matter how small the surroundings might be.

Beauty, simplicity and harmony are the three principal objects to be sought and when they are attained you may be sure the effect will be pleasing to the eye. Beauty without simplicity would not be attractive, as an object can be beautiful in itself and still mar the effect of a grouping when associated with others that do not harmonize.

In planting flower beds, he deprecated the bringing together of the strong primary colors, such as red and yellow, and held that such should always be separated one from the other by some neutral color, such as green, white or gray. Trees should always be planted so as to show the full beauty of each individual specimen and never crowded together.

In the case of small grounds, material should be used sparingly rather than attempting to make it appear to be a forest of trees and shrubs. Often small lots are so completely filled with plants that not a square foot of lawn is to be seen, and colors that would be beautiful alone or in moderate quantity are completely lost through the immense number used.

He criticized the planting in many public parks, the introduction of obtrusive buildings into such grounds, and paid his respects to the landscape "architect," saying: "His sharp and angular lines are just the ones we must avoid in landscaping. Nature's beautiful flowing curves are the most attractive."

The major part of the paper was devoted to aquatic gardening, extracts from which will be found under another heading.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

All stock, should be propagated by this time, that it is proposed to plant out next month, and as soon as rooted it should be taken from the sand, and potted up or put into flats. In the rush of work at this time the young plants are too often neglected and allowed to get weak and spindley before they receive any attention; and though the recuperative powers of the mum are great, there is a limit to everything.

If planting can be done as soon as the plants are ready, the quickest way is to put them into flats, but if the house is not at disposal for some time, it is better to pot up into 2-inch pots, and on into 4's even, to keep them in a nice, healthy, growing condition. It takes more time, but it is time well spent. The young plants should be all outside now, and if a frame is not available, they will do equally as well in a sheltered position anywhere handy to the hose. I say a sheltered position, because if the position is exposed the hot sun and drying winds dry the plants out too rapidly, and unless you stand over them with the hose they get hard and woody. Golden Wedding sometimes get rather yellow in the foliage when it is outside and so does Pennsylvania, but careful watering will easily remedy this trouble.

The old stand-bys, Robinson, Bonnaillon and such, are making their usual good growth, and Morel and its sports, Lady Hanham, Mrs. Ritson and Charles Davis are making their usual good growth of flower buds. I find it impossible to get a good shoot on these fellows till the season is far advanced.

Madam Carnot, with its sport G. J. Warren, is susceptible to a leaf disease which carries away all the bottom foliage. It seems to be constitutional and hard to overcome, but as long as the plants are making good top growth it need not worry one very much.

The new Colonel Appleton seems to show Dailedouze as one of its parents, habit of growth and foliage being very similar, and Goldmine just as certainly shows the Modesto blood.

White Bonnaillon is making hard, leathery foliage that should protect it from many ills.

I think there will be a much better demand for chrysanthemums this fall than for several years past. There will be more exhibitions, particularly in the east, which always stimulates the sale of good flowers, and every year there is an increasing number of people that look for mums in the fall, just as much as they do for asparagus in the spring.

BRIAN BORU.

planted in a geometrical design was especially effective, the varieties making an excellent color combination and being well graded as to height.

We present herewith a diagram of this bed, showing the way in which it was planted and the varieties used.

In planting beds of this sort, the height of the varieties when in bloom must be carefully considered. In one bed an error in memory as to height resulted in the planting of a border of tall ones around a center of shorter ones, with unpleasant results.

We therefore asked Head Gardener Stromback to give us the average heights of the varieties he employs, that we might put them on record. The figures follow:

Keizerskroon, 18 inches.

Yellow Prince, 15 inches.

Pottebakker, white, 14 to 15 inches.

Chrysolora, 13 to 15 inches.

Rembrandt, 13 to 15 inches.

Coleur Ponceau, 14 inches.

Vermillion Brilliant, 13 to 14 inches.

Cottage Maid, 12 to 14 inches.

Rose Grisdellin, 10 to 11 inches.

He has a bed of the double tulip Blue Flag just coming into bloom and this supplies a good succession for the single tulips.

THE GLUT.

Shaumburg, May 20, 1900.

My Dear Friend: You say it is some long time since I wrote you a letter. I agree with you perfectly, but I have not had the inspiration to write. Under the present conditions of the florists' business inspiration is a scarce

A Butterfly of Tulips.

A BUTTERFLY OF TULIPS.

We reproduce from the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle the accompanying engraving of a bed of tulips in Prospect Park, that city, planted to represent a butterfly. It must have been a very brilliant affair. The paper states that the design contained 5,000 bulbs, including 2,380 Belle Alliance, 1,825 Chrysolora, 565 La Reine and 230 Vermillion Brilliant. The work was done under the supervision of John Aitken.

The tulips have made a gorgeous display at Lincoln Park, Chicago, this spring, and one large square bed ardickle, especially de beer mit de rations, it is so few and far between dot one has no inspiration for anything.

Excuse me a minute—a customer! Cheap gate; he pays for 15 cents a dutzend roses. Did you ever see anything like it? Dat a "first-class" (?) florist should demean himself so much und stoop so low as to sell a dutzend roses for 15 cents? Well, if I didn't do it somebody else would, so I might as well get de money und be satisfied. Whose fault is it dot we sell roses for 15 cents a dutzend? Is it your fault? Is it mine? Dot is a question which has been de subject off more argumentation dan de Porto Rican bill.

It can be argued from so many different points that after the argument is all over it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to find out where we are at and who should be hung for making all the trouble.

We will start at the beginning of the argumentation; we start with the producer of the trouble, the grower. Twenty years ago he started in business with four houses and a lean-to, with maybe a couple of hot-peds and other trouble breeding devices. He would bring in the market about 18 Safranoses, 24 Sprunts, 35 Bon Silenes, a few La Marques, and a handful of short stem De Graw garnations. That was all the troubles he could breed in one day. He would hire a small boy to help him carry his money home, and life with him was a perfect dream. Look at the same grower to-day. Instead of 18 Safranoses, etc., he has 18 boxes of one kind of rose, 24 boxes of another, garnations by the thousand, and other troubles too numerous to mention. Still he has the privilege of making as much trouble as he can; nobody can say to him how much he should grow or how much he should bring in the market. But don't you think that in times like the present, that if he was to draw away some of the poor stuff and bring only the good stuff into the market, that it would make less trouble? But then again, if some gardeners would draw away the poor stuff, they wouldn't have anything to bring to town.

I don't think that I ever saw a glut of good stuff in the Chicago market. Did you? But we often see stuff that ought to be inspected by the board of health. It ought to be fumigated and the buyer ought to be waxinated before handling the stuff. These conditions bring on the glut. This terrible stuff that some growers persist in bringing to town is the cause of all the troubles. It comes to town, and the commission house must sell it to somebody; somebody must sell it to somebody else, who don't know the difference between a rose and a cabbage, and there you are. The florists who handle notings but good stock gets it "in's gerrick," as the public in general know as much about flowers as an Irishman knows about good sauer kraut. The grower should use a little judgment in sending stock to the market. He should keep posted on the general conditions of things. There are times when anything will sell and again there are times when you can't sell anything. But as I said before, the question can be argued from so many different points that it is hard for anybody to say just when these things are about to occur.

Now, good, kind growers, please, oh! please, because the market is glutted now, and stock is plenty, don't try to keep it for Decorations Day, as mixed pickles never can be sold for flowers. The grower who pickles flowers for a holiday, especially in the spring time, is guilty of criminal actions and ought to be chucked accordingly. There will be stuff enough—too much, in fact, when we consider that outdoor flowers are in great profusion for Decorations Day. You will say, "Well, the public will pay anything on that day, so we will cut everything we can and send it to town." Not so, my dear friends, if the public can be educated, and it remains for you to educate them. Try it for a while. Try to grow good flowers and only good flowers and see if your returns won't be chust as good, if not better, than they were when you sent a few good flowers and a lot of decayed vegetables to market. I may be mistaken in my side of the argumentation, but I think it worth a trial.

There are odder sides of the argumentation to be considered later, but I think that this will suffice until a later issue, when, if the insurrection comes, I will take a fall out of the commission house, or maybe the retail florists.

Yours as ever,

FRITZ BLUMENSCHNEIDER.

PARK AND OUTDOOR ART ASS'N.

Annual Meeting at Chicago.

The annual convention of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association is to assemble at the Art Institute, Chicago, Ill., on June 5th, 6th and 7th, 1900. As a sufficient attendance cannot be guaranteed to secure special railroad rates, each member should make the best terms they can with local agents. The Auditorium Annex hotel has been selected as the official headquarters of the association, where rates will range from $1.50 to $4 per day.

The programme will provide for papers and discussions at the morning sessions of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, to which all interested are invited; stereopticon lectures Tuesday and Thursday evenings, to which the public will be specially invited; and visits to the park systems in the afternoons. On Friday there will be an excursion to the drainage canal, or other places can be visited. A banquet will also be tendered to the association during its sessions.

Mrs. Edwin D. Mead, of the Twentieth Century Club of Boston, will prepare a paper upon municipal improvement, which will be read by President Loring, and Mr. Albert Kelsey, president of the Architectural League of America, will give an address upon the same subject at a joint meeting of the two associations on Thursday evening, June 7th, on which day the annual session of the Architectural League begins.

A paper prepared by Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, of Lake Forest, Ill., upon "Landscape Gardens," will be presented.

Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of The American Review of Reviews, will present a paper upon some phase of outdoor art relating to our national growth.

Mr. William R. Smith, director of the Botanic Gardens at Washington, D. C., and ex-president of the Society of American Florists, will write upon a subject relating to the arrangement and grouping of plants about architectural structures.

Mr. William M. R. French, director of the Chicago Art Institute, will present an illustrated paper upon "Composition," giving particular attention to the proper distribution of buildings, of artificial structures and of foliage about such structures.

Mr. J. H. Patterson and Mr. Edwin L. Shuey, of Dayton, Ohio, have consented to lead in the presentation of work that has been done in this and other countries toward making more attractive the surroundings of factory buildings and employees' homes. To this meeting the general public will be specially invited.

Mr. William Ordway Partridge, of New York City, will present a paper upon the proper setting of statuary in public places.

Mr. J. Frank Foster, superintendent of the South Park system in Chicago, will present a paper upon park roads, in which he will call particular attention to their maintenance and administration.

The Rev. J. A. Rondthaler, of Chicago, will present a paper upon the influence of public parks upon the morality of a community.

Mr. S. M. Millard, of Highland Park, Ill., will present a paper upon a subject connected with outdoor art.

Mr. Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., of Brookline, Mass., will present a committee report on "Advertising Bill Boards"; Prof. William J. Beal, of Michigan, upon "Prizes for Designs"; Dr. Wm. W. Folwell, of Minneapolis, upon "Park Census," and Mr. C. C. Laney will report for the committee appointed in connection with the work of the Pan-American Exposition.

One of the most instructive and interesting features of the meeting is to be an exhibit of photographs showing the good and bad treatment of various subjects connected with outdoor art and the artist's conception of beauty in various objects in landscape.

do for the purpose, for they never can make a good appearing pot plant.

If you plant early they should be 18 inches apart on the bench. If late, 15 inches will do. There are not many varieties suitable for this purpose. Nothing tall growing will do. Mme. Bergman is fairly good for early white, but the two ideal varieties for this purpose are Ivory and Lincoln. There may be several others. A dwarf branching habit is what you want to select for this purpose. I am aware that some florists have a deep black loam in which they can plant out their chrysanthemums out of doors and lift them in early September with success, but many of us have not, and the plan of growing them on the bench assures you good plants, for they lift without losing a fibre and keep their foliage.

It is never too late to propagate chrysanthemums, so keep on whenever you have the right cuttings, only keep them soaked and shaded till they are rooted.

Carnations.

As soon as the carnations get hold of the ground outside, they shoot up quickly, and plants that were not pinched before planting out soon need attention. A careless or green man should not be trusted to do this first "stopping." I have seen them pinched into the ground and also seen them pinched 6 inches above the ground. In the first case it stunts them, and in the latter they are always a floppy, awkward plant. Choose the right place, which is usually leaving three pairs of leaves.

We are having here very little rain, but don't wait for rain to hoe. The Planet, Jr., hand cultivator is a splendid little implement, but you must use the hand hoe as well several times during the season, and bend your back, too. The style of hoeing that a farmer gives his corn won't work on carnations. I hope that you have your carnations stopped and hoed and that they are sending up several shoots.

Azaleas.

I would remind you not to put out your azaleas and other hard-wooded plants that you have trimmed back till we get settled warm weather. They are making their good growth now and are better indoors for another two or three weeks.

WM. SCOTT.

NEW YORK.

There is very little of anything to record, floriculturally speaking, in this city. Business is suffering with the usual summer complaint and prices are away down on almost everything. It requires more diplomacy and maneuvering to sell a thousand roses for a few dollars than to do a full day's business at any other time of the year. The very peddlers have become saucy and will scarcely handle anything but the best. Their special favorite is American Beauty.

Last week general bedding stock,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Planting Out.

By the time my readers see these lines they will be in the busy season of planting. Never put off for a day any beds that can possibly be planted; if you do, the first two weeks of June will find you with more promised than any human effort can fulfill, and every one wants to be first, and offended if they see you attending to their neighbors before them. So if ever the old saying, "Never put off till tomorrow what can be done today," is good advice, it is wonderfully so for the next few weeks.

As you wish your customer to return to you next year, it behooves you to see that the beds of geraniums and cannas, or whatever they be, shall be properly planted. Where they keep a trained gardener you are relieved of any anxiety, but that is the exception; most of our plants go to pieces where the coachman is the whole thing and far more interested in "a 'oss." Where the beds or borders are all dug up and ready to plant, we prefer, if the order is of any size, to have our own men plant them. If the beds have to be dug, we charge by the hour for the labor.

As I have often had occasion to write, there is only one way to plant, whether it is a tree, shrub or bedding plant, and that is by setting the plant firmly in the hole you have made for it with the trowel, and sufficient soil around it to hold it upright and in place; then a good soaking; then by smoothing off the surface of the bed you have put two inches of dry earth as a mulch. This soaking, which does not bake with the sun, is worth ten waterings on the surface.

Chrysanthemums.

You will not have any benches just yet for those you grow for cut flowers, but as soon as possible you should choose a bench for the plants that are intended for lifting for pot plants. I like about four to five inches of soil for these plants in a very light exposure. If you can get them on the bench by the 10th of June you do not need large plants. Thrifty young plants that have been or are ready for their first pinch are good enough, and no plant that is leggy or drawn up will strange to say, took a big drop. Geraniums were sold in the auction rooms for from 4 to 7 cents, with other kinds of plants at corresponding rates. This week promises better all around.

Ernst G. Asmus returned from his flying trip to Europe, looking all the better for the experience. He, like others who have got back from Paris, says that the exposition over there is nothing as compared with the one given in Chicago in '93. The buildings are very close together and are less imposing. Mr. Asmus refuses to state that he discovered another good thing like Liberty rose whilst over there. Perhaps he didn't go to Ireland. Most of the good in this world comes from there.

The name "Klunder" is once more above the door of a retail florist store in New York. This time it is 236 Fifth avenue. Our friends, the other papers, gave it out as "Beaumont & Klunder." Mr. Beaumont is out of it and the firm name hereafter will be Klunder. The name has still a great ring in this city and will have whilst this generation is alive. Whatever may be said, and people in glass houses shouldn't throw missiles, there are bright prospects here for a well conducted store under that still magic name.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting during the week and perfected arrangements for the June rose show. It is sincerely hoped that all hands will turn in and make it another big success. Let's see how many kinds of roses we really grow in this part of the world. J. I. D.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Cool spring weather has continued since the sudden fall in the temperature last week, and the rough edges have been cut off of the surplus. Quality has also improved somewhat and prices are held a little closer to quotations. There is some mildewed stock as the result of the antics of the thermometer, but less than might have been expected, in view of the suddenness and velocity with which the mercury fell.

The general opinion is that the supply for Decoration Day will be up to the requirements, but that quality may not be quite up to the standard of last year. That standard may be reached, however, if the present favorable weather conditions continue.

Last Saturday, Sunday and Monday carnations moved well at a dollar, but on Tuesday the market had a relapse. For Decoration Day there will be a fair supply and satisfactory prices are anticipated.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening the leading features were papers upon spring planting and aquatic gardening, by Mr. Walter Retzer, both of which appear elsewhere in this issue. There was some little discussion of the question of formal bedding and the use of color, and the opinion of the majority was that there was a place for each and every style of floral ornamentation and that each one was desirable when kept in its proper place.

The committee on co-operative purchase of coal reported progress and asked the trade papers to print a request that all growers in the vicinity of Chicago send to Chairman W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill., a statement of the kind and quantity of coal they used last year. When this information is tabulated, an effort will be made to see if inside quotations cannot be secured on the aggregate and the result reported to those participating. Action can then be taken if a saving can be effected.

The question box disgorged an inquiry as to why chrysanthemums were inclined to bloom unnaturally early this year. Several mum growers present said they had not noticed such an inclination among their plants and thought that the cause of early blooming elsewhere was local in character.

Various Items.

Kennicott Bros. Co. have over a thousand dozen paeonies in cold storage and just right for Decoration Day. They fill 220 buckets.

J. A. Budlong is cutting some excellent Brides and Maids in spite of the remarkable weather conditions.

Recent visitors: Arthur Ellison, St. Louis; R. Livingston, Columbus, O.

The price of iron pipe has dropped about 30 per cent within the last two weeks.

The Chicago Florists' Club's committee on transportation to the New York convention of the S. A. F. in August is making very satisfactory progress and an economical and enjoyable trip is assured. Florists in the west and northwest will be invited to travel with the Chicago party and share the advantages obtained by the club.

Superintendent Jensen has at Humboldt Park a border of different native azaleas in bloom that is a decided attraction. There is also an outdoor group of Ghent azaleas in fine bloom.

The Geo. W. Wittbold Co. are building two new houses, each 27x125. They will also put in a show front a hundred feet long in addition to what they already have on Buckingham Place.

The R. J. Lewis greenhouses on Dunning street are no more. They have been removed and the property will be used for other purposes. The material was purchased by the Geo. Wittbold Co. and they have taken out about 40,000 feet of good glass and 17,000 feet of 4-inch cast iron pipe. The houses were built for the growing of vegetables, but were later remodeled and devoted to cut flowers. The place was at one time one of the largest in and around Chicago, but was later dwarfed out of sight by the immense modern plants erected in recent years.

Weber Bros. have entirely rebuilt their place at Bowmanville and now have eight fine houses each 22x150. All are devoted to Brides, Maids and Meteors.

R. E. Simon, of the Staats Zeitung, has made arrangements for special rates for a party to visit the bulb-growing fields of Washington early in July and says any florists who wish to go can have the benefit of the special rate secured.

Adolph H. Poehlmann has now purchased a twenty-acre tract in Morton Grove and will put up 50,000 feet of glass, for roses only. There will be six houses, each 26½x250. George M. Garland has the contract for the erection of the houses and it is needless to add they will be fitted with the Garland iron gutter.

The bowling fever seems to have waned some, though a few veterans keep the balls in motion. There were only five at the alleys last Friday evening.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Like poor coffee, the antarctic continent, and your last winter's coal bill, things are unsettled. Memorial Day only is expected to play the part of the egg-shell, the Yankee colony and the flush debtor. Prices fluctuate spasmodically, but do not make the mistake of getting generous to any great degree except upon violets; a few good ones bringing $1 per 100. Carnations, 1, 2 and 3 cents, and 4 cents in extreme cases, with quite a few remaining for the fakir. Roses from 1 to 8 cents in pink, white and yellow; Meteors, 2 to 8 cents; Beauties, 2 to 25 cents, and a full supply of Liberties from 10 to 35 cents; Jacks are out of it. All kinds of odds and ends of everything dodging around and being caught up at all kinds of prices from low to medium, according to how badly the purchaser wants the goods and the ability of the salesman to ascertain it. Plants, trees, shrubs, vines, bulbs and seeds rippling along merrily, even if weather conditions are abnormal, and when has there been a similar date when farmers and gardeners were so behind-hand in their work as today?

Notes.

There is some discussion as to the relative value of grafted and ungrafted rose stock, but actions vote for the graft, as evinced by the fact that about all rose growers are to use it. But can they beat Aylward and McGorum? These two, at least, thus far have kept at the front with their full share of the very best, and from ungrafted stock.

Did you form an acquaintance with the firm of Feinstein & Cartwright, of Federal street? Too late, now; but Feinstein still continues both at the new stand and his old one on Portland street.

New stores are treacherous, but Mrs.

Rogers seems to be making a supreme success of her store on Summer street, and her man Knowles is a hard kopje to outflank, surround, or carry by assault.

President Stickel, of the Co-operative Market, has purchased a valuable ten-acre lot, with buildings, at Lexington, for future enlargement of his business when necessary.

The Hotel Berkeley, which shelters Houghton & Clark and Norton Bros., will soon come down. The inside is a total wreck now.

Arguments for great scarcity of goods for Memorial Day sound the most reasonable.

Mr. Long, of Marshall & Long, is suffering from an injury to his eyes, caused by a blow from a baseball received while passing along Huntington avenue. The chief damage was from pieces of glass from the spectacles which he wore.

Houghton & Clark are smiling in memory of twenty-five large baskets of fine flowers delivered to the new Hotel Essex upon the opening day. The extra chuckle is for the order for a dozen large bay trees to go to the same place.

A trip to W. J. Dana's rose houses at Wellesley shows them and their contents to be in first-class condition. The most interesting feature, however, consists of the four new pattern Chadbourn automatic ventilating machines just established. They appear like well meaning employes and some of their qualities are worthy of being copied by more intelligent workmen; not, however, the one of consuming three or four gallons of liquid per day.

B. T.

BUFFALO.

A good warm day is a great treat, and very cool weather is the prevailing condition. Coleus would droop away to nothing during these nights, and unless we get a marked change bedding will be very late. Every kind of flower is plentiful at present and fine in quality. The very cool weather accounts for that. Roses have not yet assumed their diminutive size or mildewed tinge. W. J. Palmer & Son are cutting three to four hundred fine Beauties daily and have for many weeks. Sweet peas have sold well but are getting that crooked neck shape on them.

Mr. Wise, of East Aurora, had a gardening talk with us on Friday, and sweet peas was one of the topics. There is always a sincere pleasure in exchanging views with this conservative, wise, but witty man. How to keep sweet peas from the glass was one of the subjects. They are by the majority grown on the side of a carnation bench, and I see no material injury to the carnations, but the peas soon get to the glass, and then come the crooked stems. We have grown a number in boxes this winter. The boxes are 9x9 and 6 inches deep, and stood on the floor at the ends of carnation houses. Here there is almost unlimited head room, and if we only had enough of this accommodation it is an ideal way to grow them, as you get lots of flowers without so much rank growth.

We are not likely to be overdone with cheap outside flowers for Decoration Day. Lilac will be about right. Peonies will not be in, and all kinds of tulips will be gone. Iris will help out some, but they soon look like a flag on a wet day after being cut. The abundance of our indoor cut will be our mainstay.

The whole floricultural community was shocked on Thursday last with the sudden and unexpected announcement that our Billy Kasting, alias the Hon. Wm. F., Park Commissioner, had been and gone and got married the day before. The announcement sent by mail from the bride's parents says that he will be at home in June somewhere on Ellicott street. That's very satisfactory, for we shall know now where to get the key of his emporium Sundays and evenings, when we have an unexpected call for his wares. It will also be better for his health that he has a home, but we don't like the way the business has been done. It's sort of cute to do it this way, but Billy is a sort of public character and he should have given us a chance to show our appreciation of his behavior. It's a mistake. This important event happens only once with the great majority of us, at least in one state, and the happenings at the wedding are something to look back to in years to come.

I think this is good news for the grower and not so good for the retailer. As a single man Billy was lenient and kind and studied both grower and retailer, knowing the latter must not be squeezed to death, but with the care of the household, the furnishings and bric-a-brac, little shoes and hats, baby buggies and doctors' bills, his nature will be hardened, and the higher the price the more commission for him, is likely to be the dominant thought.

We must congratulate the handsome and smart Miss Anna La Tour, for Mr. Kasting is bound to be a success in life. He has the right style in his make-up to go ahead and he has gone not a little ahead these past four years. He has the great blessing of being able to say "No" as easily as he says "Yes," and this is the first mean trick we have found him guilty of. Perhaps he thinks he has been all square. We don't. We do not expect to be consulted for advice, but his friends in the trade should have had a chance.

The average novel and melodrama ends with the young couple getting married, all trouble is over and nothing but kisses, ice cream, molasses candy and fun is before them. What a horrible delusion, although not a delusion, for every sane man knows better. Reality begins and the dream is over.

Be boss, Billy; be boss of everything outside the house, and let your darling be boss inside. Never walk the floor with the baby; I never did; it's entirely superfluous. They don't need it. Many other hints I can give you, but they shall be transmitted verbally.

I know I voice the sentiments of your many friends when I wish you the greatest joy and prosperity and hope that, although you have promised to devote your whole self to the happiness of another, you will still be the same Billy Kasting. You will not get forgiveness for this sneaky behavior till you have a thundering good house warming, and then you will get warmed.

Pan-American News.

The past two weeks have brought about considerable change in the landscape work of the grounds. Many hundreds of large trees, mostly maples, elms, poplars and horse chestnuts, have been brought to the grounds and planted. The lake connecting the canals is almost completed and the banks planted with a large assortment of shrubs. In the music garden have been planted several thousand hardy roses in masses of 500 of one variety. Two thousand of these are an exhibit by Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester. With the careful planting they have received and the heavy enriched loam they are in they should make a splendid show in 1901.

Mr. Rudolph Ulrich, the landscape gardener, is the busiest of men. The grounds surrounding the Service or Administration Building are seeded, sodded and planted and have already a most finished appearance. Work is progressing rapidly on all the most important buildings.

S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The stagnation noted last week still continues, owing to the unsettled affairs of the street railway strike. The public will not ride on the few cars that are running, and those buying flowers will buy in their neighborhood, and, of course, the down-town florists suffer most, as the only orders they get are by telephone, and trade over the counter is out of the question.

The florists around the cemeteries claim they have all they can do, but miss the customer who buys a few plants and takes them over to the cemetery. With the West End florists it makes little or no difference, as their trade don't as a rule, ride in street cars. The South End florists miss their street car trade very much for their plant trade.

Prices on cut flowers, in quantities, are practically unquotable at this writing, as trade with both wholesaler and retailer is worse, if possible, than ever. Plenty of roses, carnations, sweet peas, paeonies and Harrisii, Callas and other outdoor stuff are coming in every day and the wholesaler is forced to sell dirt cheap or throw them in the waste pile, and to quote prices on any flowers would be out of question.

The growers will not stand this state of affairs long and quite a number of them have already thrown out their old plants and are planting new ones. This plan, which is sure to be followed by the growers generally, will place the trade on a better foundation in the next few weeks.

During the greater part of the present month the cut of roses and carnations has been enormous. They have been sold by the box, with little regard for varieties, and no time wasted in counting them, and at prices one would hardly believe.

The plant men at Union market are still kicking about their business. Absolutely nothing doing, not only in our line, but in other lines also, as the market is entirely deserted during the day.

Notes.

John M. Hudson was reported very sick the past week. Mrs. Hudson reports John somewhat better, but still a very sick man. Symptoms of Bright's disease is the cause.

Frank W. Maas, formerly of Philadelphia, is now with the Plant Seed Co. Frank reports that their business during the season has been good.

The Florists' Club meeting which will be held on June 14 will no doubt be a large one. The show committee will report; the miscellaneous cut flower show will be on; convention matters will be talked over; the regular yearly outing committee will be appointed and a few other very important matters will come up which will be of great interest to all of the members. By that time, no doubt, the street car muddle will be all settled, and every one will be happy to come and spend an hour or two with the brothers. It will do you good. President Ammann will tell you something about the taxation of plants as your local assessor might want to tax you, and then you will know how to bluff him off when he comes.

Nothing new as yet about the bowling club's trip to Chicago. We have done no bowling and have had no meeting. Maybe in the next issue of the Review we can say more about it. We all hope that our members will all be in shape to attend the regular nights not later than the first Monday in June. Business will not be so much as to keep you away from a little pleasure every Monday night.

AQUATIC GARDENING.

BY WALTER RETZER.

[Extracts from paper read before the Chicago Florists' Club, May 18.]

Aquatic gardening, which is one of the most recent arts, sprung up, as it has, just within a few years, it is surprising to what extent it is already practiced, and it promises to become the chief ornamental factor in beautifying our homes and surroundings. There is a certain pleasure peculiar to aquatic decoration, one that once experienced will always be sought after, and none will be more thoroughly enjoyed. The beautiful, pleasing, and quiet effects are those peculiar to this art. It has not that harshness which one cannot help but feel in some other classes of decoration.

The colors of nearly all aquatics harmonize, no matter which way they are planted—a discord is hard to produce. The intense colors become softened, the odors diminished, and with the quieting effect of the water itself, produces a picture long remembered.

The decoration of a pond, however naturally carried out, would not have a calming effect were it not for the borders which are the finishing touches. The border plants are an introduction to what we are to see later. A beautiful pond artistically planted without a decorated border, is like a summer cottage in the heart of a crowded city where high stores are its surroundings. Both would be unfinished.

Location of Ponds.

In locating a pond, many things have to be taken into consideration not thought of at the first moment. A pond poorly located, no matter how highly decorated, will always mar the surroundings. We must aim to select a place that will produce the most natural effect. If the surroundings are rolling or even hilly with deep valleys between, seek a place low enough to retain the water without artificial means. We never find a lake at the very base of a valley, for sufficient grade must be left for an outlet. If the most suitable place for a pond is where a rippling brook is winding its course, a pond can easily be made by having it dammed. For this the strongest and safest material would be stones of considerable size, the larger the better, held firmly together by cement. This stream will afford a constant supply of fresh water so essential in aquatic gardening. If the stream is large or subject to swellings after rains, large pipes should be placed beyond the beginning of the pond. These pipes must be large enough to check the force of water during the heaviest rains, leaving only the amount required to pass into the pond. If the whole volume of water be allowed to pass through the pond, our aquatics would soon be where we would not want them. These pipes must be laid just below the surface of the stream when it is at its lowest mark, for if raised to the point that the stream attains during rains, the pipes would be an unsightly object as they protrude out of the water after it has receded.

These surplus water pipes, if no other convenient place can be found, must be laid underneath the pond where they will be out of sight. This can readily be done before the pond is constructed. If, however, the raising of the water is not thought of at the time of the building, the evil may be remedied by laying the pipes around the edge of the pond, though this will require a good deal more piping and other work. Wherever the pipes are placed, have them covered in a way not to attract attention. The principal rule that one must invariably follow is: Select the most natural place. It is quite impossible to lay down certain rules as to the location of ponds, as "circumstances alter cases."

General Outline of Ponds.

In regard to the shape of ponds, it cannot be too strongly impressed that symmetrical ones are not to be tolerated, except where surroundings are laid out in the most symmetrical way, in very limited areas, say in the back yard of a city residence, and even there the irregular shaped pond would be more appreciated after the merits of each become known. First, we should select the irregular shaped pond, as it resembles a natural bit of water more than the symmetrical one, and consequently makes the surroundings more like nature.

It can readily be seen that a pond of an oval shape can be used to greater advantage than a circular or angular one. The angles or corners of a square pond would be nearly worthless, as no aquatics, except the small floating varieties, could fully develop, for the foliage would soon come in contact with the border, be forced over this, and scalded by the burning rays of the sun. No room is left here for border or back water decoration. No suitable form of introduction can be made, as will be seen when compared with an oval shaped pond.

The Construction of Ponds.

Probably the principal point in aquatic gardening, and one that has to be fully mastered before success can be attained, is the construction of ponds. A pond poorly built or drained will only be a nuisance, a malaria breeder, and a continual source of disappointment, the plants not proving to be as advertised. In nearly three-fourths of the cases it is not the fault of the nurserymen, the catalogue, or the advertiser, that the plants do not succeed as well as they were represented, but simply the fault of the grower or the pond.

This fact is marked in this branch of gardening. Aquatics, even if they are water plants, require drainage as well as those grown in pots, and even more so. For this and other reasons that will be mentioned later a soil bottom pond will be found most preferable. There is a constant regular seepage or drainage of water, which varies according to the lower strata of soil, causing constant but regular changes in the water. With supply pipes sufficiently large to replenish that lost through drainage and evaporation, the water will be kept in circulation, so essential in aquatic gardening. This thorough drainage will prevent the diseases which occur so frequently when a pond is badly or not at all drained. With large and convenient outflow pipes placed near the surface, all the dust which naturally collects on it, as well as the insects which skip about the surface, are carried away. These pipes may be so placed as not to be seen even by the most critical observer, by placing over them a few boulders or some graceful border plant that will completely cover the opening. The number of these pipes must vary according to the size of the pond.

Besides the natural drainage of a soil bottom and the surface outflows, it is very important to have a pipe sufficiently large, placed at the deepest part of the pond, to carry off the water in a short time. It will be found of great advantage in the fall, when the tender plants have to be removed. Always have the pond so graded that the deepest part of it is in the center. If the pond is exceedingly large, have several parts that are deep enough to drain the entire pond. The trap of this pipe should be so made that it can be opened without entering the pond. The outflows at the surface should be large enough to carry away the water from the rains.

One of the greatest difficulties met with in aquatic gardening is that the place where we wish to locate the pond does not retain the water. We may resort to various means to remedy this great evil. The cheapest as well as the best, as far as the health of the plants is concerned, is to place a layer of clay mud (the amount varying according to the porosity of the lower soil) at the bottom and the sides, which must be thoroughly packed.

The granitoid pond has its advantages as well as the soil bottom one, although not as numerous. If it is found necessary to have a granitoid pond, the whole can be so arranged as to give a natural effect. It must be made to produce the best effect regardless of the curves, which are rather difficult to make out of granitoid. Have the edge about six inches lower than the surrounding soil, and have this graded to make a gradual slope toward the side of the pond. In this way the whole of the white granitoid edge, so unsightly, will be completely hidden. The water in the pond can be raised to the soil and occasionally allowed to flood it. This will keep the border moist enough for some of our best border plants. In the granitoid ponds all plants should be placed in tubs or something similar.

The ease with which plants are moved about after being in the water, and the fact that the water does not become discolored from the dirt that is plowed up as one enters the pond, and the ease with which they are kept clean, are the advantages not to be disdained by the layman, who has only the few leisure hours after his daily work is performed to look after the requirements of his pond. You will not have the rank weeds so numerous in the other ponds and the wild water lily (Nymphaea Mexicana) will not become a nuisance, as it can be well controlled if planted in tubs. This Nymphaea, if left to take care of itself, will soon assert its right as a native and will in a short time completely fill the pond, and there is no other way to get rid of it, after it has established itself, than to dig out a foot or more of the soil and cart it away. The whiteness of the bottom of a granitoid pond, without the gravel at the bottom, has such a glaring effect that the eye is pained to look upon it, besides it reduces much of the beautiful color of the aquatics. So with the white edge—it must not be tolerated, not only because the reflected light pains our eyes, but the contrast between the green foliage and the white edge is too great, and consequently lessens the beauty of our plants.

The granitoid must be of the best, as it would easily crack during the cold weather if otherwise, and even if it is of the best material it must be covered with straw or something equally as good.

Soil.

Soil requisite for aquatics can be obtained easily and cheaply. They have done exceedingly well in a clay soil, though in good, rich soil, thoroughly mixed with a liberal quantity of well rotted cow manure, the plants will many times repay the trouble in the profusion of blooms and the substance of the foliage. In a pond where but little clay has been used to retain the water, and where a good rich loam is found beneath, no other soil will be required. Whether our ponds have a clay, natural soil, or granitoid bottom, it is well, and will give a neat appearance, if a layer of sand or gravel is placed at the bottom. Moreover, this prevents the water from becoming muddy when it is necessary to enter the pond.

Plants for a granitoid pond should be potted—or, rather, planted—in boxes or half kegs. The boxes should be rather shallow and wide, as the roots of most aquatic plants have a spreading habit. The bottom should be well drained so as to admit a free circulation of water. The practice of making pockets in granitoid ponds is a great disadvantage, as it is difficult to remove the soil the following spring, in order to replenish it, besides it does not admit thorough drainage.

Heating.

Through the numerous varieties of water plants at our disposal, it will readily be seen that in the few years of attention that has been given to the culture a great many distinct and beautiful kinds have been produced.

A pond can be artistically planted with nothing but these hardy plants and the use of them is to be especially recommended to those who have but limited areas, and no greenhouses or other suitable places to keep the more tender varieties through the winter, and those who have but little time to devote to the aquatic garden, and the care which the more tender varieties naturally require. But even those who have but a small part of their surroundings devoted to aquatics, and have their residence heated with either hot water or steam, will be able to enjoy the lovely Nymphaeas of the sunny south by simply laying a branch from the main heating plant to the pond where it is desired to grow these favored plants.

Those who wish to make ponds the chief ornamental factor on their grounds and have a large tract of land at their disposal, will see from the following that there is one way in which the beauty of the tender Nymphaea can be enjoyed with but slight expense compared with the methods ordinarily practiced.

If a lake or pond of considerable size is on the ground or near at hand, the work can be commenced at once. At the surface of this body of water have a sufficient number of pipes that will supply the amount of water lost through drainage. This water is conducted to another pond of smaller dimensions than the preceding one. This, in turn, will be quite deep in one part, with a shallow arm in the other. From the deep part of this pond, but at the surface, have the pipes which lead into the pond where you wish to grow the tender Nymphaeas.

The surface water of the large pond is heated during the day by the sun. This warmed water is carried away by the pipes—they being near the surface—into the next pond, and enter it in the deepest part. The large shallow arm would become heated to quite a high temperature were it not for the deep and large body of water at the other end. As the water becomes heated it naturally intermingles with the cooler one of the deep basin, thus raising the temperature of this body considerably. With plenty of fish in the water this will be accelerated.

PHILADELPHIA.

Various Items.

The florists in this city report the cut flower business still on the decline, even transient trade seems to have fallen off, thus the consequence is a general glut of all kinds and colors of cut stuff. There was an exceptionally hot wave visited this city the past week. The thermometer went well up into the nineties in the shade and in consequence there was an abundance of stock on the market and very little demand for it.

Prices: Beauties, $1 to $3 per doz.; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Golden Gates, Meteors, $5 to $6 per 100; Perles, $3 to $5; Liberty, $8 to $15; carnations, ordinary, $1 per 100; fancies, $1.50 to $2; daisies, $1.50 per 100; callas and Harrisii, $8 to $10; mignonette, $2 to $3; sweet peas, 50 to 75 cents per 100; adiantum, 1 cent; asparagus, 50 cents; smilax, 20 cents.

A number of florists have quite a few advance orders for Decoration Day for the G. A. R. posts, both for cut flowers and plants.

Jacob Becker, of Fifty-second and Market streets, will sail on June 30th, on the steamer Weisland, for Bremen for a two months' stay, and will take in the Paris Exposition before he returns. He will also look up azaleas and other stock while on the other side. Mr. B. has not been abroad in seventeen years, and will, no doubt, be benefited by the trip.

Wm. H. Wyatt has rented a cottage in the country for the summer.

J. G. Elsele, of Eleventh and Columbia avenue, has been busy with funeral work the past week. Herman Elsele, the manager, deserves a great deal of credit for the manner in which he conducts the business.

Aug. Lutz, 311 N. Thirty-second, has been very busy the past week with decorations and delivering bedding stock. Mr. L. claims that business exceeds all previous years.

Geo. E. Campbell, 3601 Germantown avenue, delivered three wagon loads of bedding stock to one of the large hotels for Hugh Graham. This stock is used for vases and window boxes.

J. Kohlers & Sons, of Frankford, have their hands full with orders for filling vases, hanging baskets, etc.

Mr. Wm. C. Krick, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favored us with a visit the past week.

Tuesday evening, May 15th, there were some good exhibits of hybrid calceolarias in competition for the Ridgeway prize. Thos. Roberts, gardener to Col. E. V. Morrell, Torresdale, came in for first prize; Wm. Kleinbewiz, gardener to Mr. P. A. B. Widener, Ogontz, landed second prize. For the Mitchell prizes for herbaceous or shrubby calceolarias, Geo. A. Brown, gardener to Robt. N. Carson, Chestnut Hill, was first, and John Hatcher, gardener to Edw. Le Boutillier, Wynnewood, second. For cauliflowers, Jas. Campbell, gardener to J. D. Winson, Haverford, carried off first honors, while Jos. Hosley, gardener to Mr. Jas. Rhodes, Ardmore, succeeded in landing second prize. Jos. Hosley staged a splendid collection of gloxinias in 4-inch pots. These were strong plants and well flowered. Mrs. Geo. B. Wilson exhibited a plant of Cattleya intermedia alba and Skinneri alba for which she received a silver medal and certificate in the order given.

THE NURSERYMEN.

The American Association of Nurserymen will hold its twenty-fifth annual meeting at Chicago June 13th and 14th. The meetings will be held in the Chicago Beach Hotel, which will also be headquarters. This being the silver anniversary of the association, extra effort will be put forth to make the meeting a memorable one.

The program has not yet been completed, but thus far addresses have been promised as follows:

Wilson J. Peters, president's address; Prof. N. E. Hansen, of Brookings, S. D., "Some New Lines of Work for Prairie Nurserymen"; Robt. C. Berckmans, "The Future of the Nursery Business in Our New Possessions"; N. W. Hale, "The Retail Nursery Business"; Hon. N. H. Albaugh, "Reminiscences of the American Association and Its Members Up to the Silver Anniversary."

C. L. Watrous will have a report of exceptional interest concerning the work of the legislative committee.

There will also be reports from the committees on transportation and tariff.

The latest information may be had by addressing Geo. C. Seager, secretary, Rochester, N. Y.

SEEDSMEN TO MEET.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at Chicago June 12, 13 and 14. Headquarters will be at the Grand Pacific Hotel and the meetings will be held in the parlors of the hotel. A very interesting program has been arranged and an enjoyable and profitable meeting is assured.

The officers of the association are: President, Alex. Rodgers, Chicago; vice-presidents, Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, and F. W. Bolgiano, Washington; secretary and treasurer, S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.

The entertainment of those in attendance at the meeting will include an excursion down the drainage canal to Lockport on the Hinda.

We believe in shifting Young Roses often. All stock offered in 2 1/2-inch pots has been shifted from 2-inch and is equal to most stock advertised in 3 inch, and when we send it out is well established. Send 50c or $1.00 for samples and prices. Stock will please you and prices are right.

ST. PAUL.Various Items.

Bedding business has scarcely begun. Owing to the late Easter all stock is a little backward, and from present indications will be all used up before the close of the season. Good geraniums in 4-inch pots are quoted at 7 to 10 cents each at wholesale, and $1.50 to $2 per dozen at retail. This price in most instances including the planting. Pansies have been in good demand. The late frosts injured the early blooms somewhat, but stock in general is very good.

The cut flower trade has been very good, with stock of good, bad and indifferent quality. The late Easter and the consequent rush of work with bedding plants caused many roses and carnations to be neglected, while the alternate cold nights and warm days have pinched the blooms and mildewed the plants. The growers may still learn a lesson from the old adage, "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well." This is particularly apropos in growing cut flowers.

The evening of the 13th we had a severe storm of hail, wind and rain. Damage to the florists was merely nominal, caused by hail breaking the glass. Carlsen & Lauritsen lost a few hundred feet, Christ Hansen had considerable broken and L. L. May & Co. had a loss of about 2,000 feet. As they all carry hail insurance the loss will not be very heavy.

Inquiries for cut flowers for Decoration day would indicate a very heavy trade for that occasion. The careful store men will lay in a big supply, as last season's supply was wholly inadequate for the demands.

Work at our beautiful parks has just begun. Quite a good many geraniums have been put out already, and the week will see a great many more planted.

Recent visitors were Mr. Taat and Mr. Van Waveren, both of Holland. May their shadows never grow less.

OCEANIC, N. J.

A very animated meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held at Red Man's Hall, Oceanic, N. J., May 18. Dr. W. S. Whitmore delivered an address which will appear in an early issue, upon "The Cultivation of Flowers; Their Influence upon Society and Their Benefit to Gardeners." The doctor is well known for his excellent speeches, but this one created a sensation. A lively debate followed, in which Pres. Kettel, Prof. Walling, Whit. Williams, Mrs. V. A. Legier, Miss Jennie Brill and others took part.

TAXING FLORISTS.

In Boston they have never taxed plants in pots or planted out, though the former can be taxed as personal property or stock in trade—whatever is on hand when the assessor takes the valuation and the latter added to the value of the real estate. But they do not go to that trouble here, as it is not considered worth while.

My experience in the city of Newton was this: The real estate did not belong to me, but the stock did. They taxed me in personal property instead of plants. I went before the assessor to remonstrate, with the result that the city solicitor admitted they had no right to tax the property as personal, since which time the city of Newton has made no assessment on greenhouse stock. The same holds good in the city of Boston. They have never taxed the stock in greenhouses.

W. H. ELLIOTT.

Brighton, Mass.

I have been in business here for 35 years and I have never listed plants in pots or in bench or the soil, and have never been asked to list them for taxation.

JNO. G. HEINL.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held in Franklin hall, this city, May 10, and was attended by a large number. The principal discussions were in relation to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, and the holding of a carnation exhibition in connection with the June meeting of the club. The latter was deemed inadvisable this season. The convention of the S. A. F. will be held this year in New York city in August. The local delegation will be joined here by the Boston contingent, both going by boat.

FRANKFORT, KY.—John Kraehenbuhl has rented the R. H. Nicol greenhouses, containing about 1,500 square feet of glass, and has started in the business.

GREENHOUSE BUILDING.

We have received from the Lord & Burnham Co., St. James building, New York City, a copy of their new "Catalogue of Greenhouses." It is really more of a portfolio than a catalogue, containing over fifty fine half-tone plates beautifully printed on enameled paper, of conservatories and ranges of greenhouses erected by the company in various sections of the country. These show a great variety in greenhouse and conservatory construction and no doubt assist many prospective builders in deciding upon the style of structure they wish.

The book also contains many engravings from drawings of sections of different styles of structures, showing the manner in which the parts are put together. It is a very instructive as well as interesting catalogue. Any intending builder may obtain a copy by addressing the company as above and enclosing 5 cents for postage.

COE RIDGE, OHIO.

The manager of the Essex Greenhouse, Mr. H. W. Turner, has just finished four houses, each 25x100, one house 20x100 and a glass enclosed shed 8x100. These houses are to be planted to roses, two of them to Beauties. Later, two carnation houses will be built.

Carnation growing will be a new departure for them, as they have been growing roses mostly, with a few ferns and asparagus, also a few bulbs. They have been sending in the best Maids in the Cleveland market, and some very fine Golden Gates, too.

Reep Bros. have purchased twenty acres of land. They intend to move their houses to this tract and will add some new ones.

ACME.

HOWELL, MICH.—J. A. Brown, the florist, and Miss Minnie J. Lare were married May 10.

McPHERSON, KAN.—C. A. Simonson has built a greenhouse here and entered the ranks of the commercial florists.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 300 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

COR. HAWTHORNE AVE.

Success with House Plants

BY LIZZIE PAGE HILLHOUSE.

A complete text-book and guide to the care, cultivation and propagation of all plants in the garden and the home.

The volume is written by a woman for women, in plain, concise language, easily understood, and the book has the special merit of giving directions which can be readily followed, the methods prescribed being of the simplest, and the material suggested to be used easily within reach of all.

12mo., 232 pp.; profusely illustrated, with complete and ready reference index to all plants enumerated. Price. Cloth, $1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

To Retail Florists. The old thought, that it was dangerous for a customer to know much about the care of plants, has passed away, being superseded by the newer and more intelligent one, viz.: that the more successful a customer is with plants, the greater quantity will he or she buy.

We offer Special Inducements to all who wish to handle this book. It is a good seller.

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES,
BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 23, 1900.

MESSRS THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York City.
GENTLEMEN—I purchased from you last September, one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make. Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. They work perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half of the cost of the boilers. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly, Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

P. S.—Kindly book my order for another boiler. I will let you know later when to deliver it. J. S.
